PRESIDENT CHEERED AT OPEN-AIR CHURCH

Wins Hearts of Big Congregation of Ranchmen's Families.

ODD AND PICTURESQUE SCENE

Services Held on a School House Porch —Roosevelt Party in Rough, Soiled Hunting Attire.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., April 30.—Unique in the history of Colorado were the services held at the Old Blue Schoolhouse on West Divide to-day, attended by President Roosevelt and his hunting party and all the ranchmen and their families for miles around.

The little district school building was not a tenth part large enough to accommodate the congregation, and as a result the organ was moved to the front porch. On this porch seats were provided for the President and his party, the Rev. Horace Mann of Rifle, Col., the choir, and the Trustees of the church. The members of the congregation stood or sat on the ground of the school yard or in their conveyances, which were grouped around the building.

Long before 11 o'clock, the hour set for the services, the ranchmen and their wives began to assemble. Many persons drove or rode horseback from Newcastle, Rifle, and other towns from five to fifteen miles away.

The President's party presented a picturesque appearance as they came up. All were on horseback, and they were dressed in their hunting clothes. They had no others at the camp. The gowns and hats of the women were showy and in striking contrast to the muddy blue jeans and other rough materials making up the costumes of the President and his fellow-hunters.

Mr. Roosevelt was dressed in the clothes he wore when he left his private car at Newcastle two weeks ago. His hat was what is known as the "slouch." It was badly out of shape, and he wore it pulled over his eyes. His jacket was sheep-lined duck, his trousers of duck, tied about his ankles with strong cord, and his shirt of blue cotton. He had discarded his chaparejos, or leather trousers, and his sweater. The clothes of Dr. Alexander Lambert of New York and of the guides were even rougher. No mountain band of road agents ever looked more formidable.

The Western air of the party went straight to the hearts of the people. They applauded and yelled boisterous praise of the President, regardless of the day and fact that they were virtually in a house of worship, though the ceiling was the blue sky, the floor soft grass and dead leaves, and the walls mountains.

As soon as the party had taken seats the service was begun. The organist played a selection from the Presbyterian Hymnal, and the choir sang. Another selection was played and sung, and this time the congregation was asked to join in. The voices of the President and Dr. Lambert could be heard above the others.

When the song was concluded the Rev. Horace Mann preached. His sermon was of an unusual kind. It began with a story teeming with slang of the Western flavor, and was full of advice suited to a congregation inuring itself to the hardships of mountain life. It touched on the responsibilities of the position of President, as well as the characteristics of some of the men who have occupied that exalted place.

More singing followed, and Mr. Roosevelt, at the request of the preacher, addressed the congregation. He told them how glad he was to be there and how much it pleased him to come face to face with so many people who were braving hardships with light hearts and doing their part in life without complaining or bitterness. He told them the spirit they were displaying was the chief quality of the American people that went to make this the greatest of all countries.

"I cannot say how much I have enjoyed my stay here. Not only have I been treated middling well by the bears—which treatment has not been reciprocated by me—but the people have fairly outdone themselves in their hospitality. I have enjoyed so much seeing the growth and prosperity of your community.

"Only the other day I was speaking to the dominie here as to success and what it means. One of the best illustrations of American ideas and possibilities of success is the Grand Army man. From Lieutenant General to the humblest private in the rear ranks there is one title, and that 'comrade.' So we should judge the success of man as private citizens. Success from the soldier's standpoint means that a man did his duty up to the handle, whether he carried a musket or a sword. So it is in civil life; real success consists in doing one's duty in the path where one's life is laid."

It was at the conclusion of the President's remarks when he leaned forward and beamed a welcome that took in every one in the congregation, that the President looked his best. He was the picture of rugged health as he said: "And now I want to shake hands with you all. There are a good many of you, so don't stampede or get to milling."

His use of the cattle terms evoked terrific applause. He took a position in a corner made by the schoolhouse and the platform where it was impossible for the people to crowd. Dr. Lambert acted as chief of the Secret Service, with the hunters and cowboys as assistants. They passed the crowd along, and despite the fact that the President had a word for nearly every one present the congregation was disposed of in about half an hour. All remained, however, until the President's party started back for their camp.

Elmer Chapman, the courier, arrived in Glenwood Springs to-night from Camp Roosevelt. The President's hunting party had an unsuccessful day Saturday, bagging only one lynx. The hunters are not fully decided on the question of moving the camp. The game is so plentiful on West Divide Creek that they may remain there for the rest of their stay in the mountains. Secretary Loeb will visit the President to-morrow.

STOWAWAY, AGED THREE.

Youngster on Trip from Italy Was Hidden in Closet.

Raffael Ricciardo, bright eyed, curly haired, and only three years old, American born and Italian reared, who has the distinction of being the youngest stowaway who ever crossed the Atlantic Ocean, arrived here yesterday on the Italian liner Citta di Milano from Naples.

The little fellow was smuggled on board the big liner at Naples by his aunt, Anna Ricciardi, who had just enough money to pay her own and a young son's way across the ocean. Vincenzo Ricciardo, father of the youngster, lives in New Haven, and yesterday afternoon Commissioner of Immigration Watchorn sent an urgent message to him to come to New York and get his baby boy. He is expected to-day.

Zatcorina Ricciardo, mother of the little boy, took him to Naples about two years ago, and when the time came for her to return to the United States, she left the baby in Italy with her people, saying that she would send for him later on. When she heard that her sister was coming to America, she wrote and asked her to bring the boy with her.

Mrs. Licciardi had not enough money, however, so when the sailing day came she concealed little Raffael in her ample dress, smuggled him on board the liner, and hid him away in a linen closet, where he was imprisoned until the liner was several hundred miles out of Naples and well on her long voyage across the Atlantic.

One of the stewards discovered the baby tucked away in the closet, and lost no time in reporting to the Captain that a very small stowaway was on the ship. The skipper issued orders that the baby be given the freedom of the vessel, and after that he was the most popular of all the fifteen hundred who came over in the Citta di Milano.

Even had the boy been without relatives in the United States the immigration authorities could not deport him, because he is an American citizen, and American stowaways, who can prove their citizenship, have to be landed whether they pay their way across or not.

HOST AND A GUEST DROWNED.

Boat Capsizes When Attempt Is Made to Change to Another.

WHITE PLAINS, April 30.—Two men were drowned in St. Mary's Lake, on the outskirts of this village, at 5 o'clock this afternoon. One was Thomas Engler, an electrician, seventeen years old, who came up with an outing party of fifteen from New York, and the other was George Huber, forty-seven years old, a boss painter of this place, who lived at Thompson's Hotel. The party came here at Huber's invitation.

The party started out at 11 o'clock, taking lunch baskets with them, to visit the lake. About 5 o'clock some one suggested that they get a couple of boats and row [illegible] which is two miles long. [illegible] Huber and Engler got into the first boat. Three of the women and another man in the party got into the second boat. They were singing as they started out. When half way out in the lake Huber told Engler he wanted to get into the other boat. They rowed toward the woman's boat, and when within ten feet of it Huber stepped on the gunwale of the boat he was in, capsizing it. Neither man could swim, and the boat turned turtle. The accident was witnessed by nearly 100 persons who were fishing and boating on the lake.

The women and the man in the second boat say that neither man came to the surface after the boat capsized. A dozen boats pulled to the spot in a very short time after the men disappeared, but there was no sign of them.

Grappling irons and boathooks were secured, and a search made for the bodies. Engler's body was found a few hundred feet from the place it disappeared, and the body of Huber was recovered a little later. Huber is said to have a wife and three sons, living abroad. He formerly kept a hotel in Thirty-eighth Street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues, Manhattan.

Engler is a son of John Engler of 205 East Eighty-ninth Street, New York. Young Engler's father was among the party, and saw his boy drown. The crowd held him to keep him from jumping into the lake. Coroner Russell was notified, and will hold an inquest to-morrow.

PACE FOLLOWER WAS HURT.

Motor Cyclist Dashed Into Engine While Trailing Automobile.

Racing along on a motor cycle behind an automobile and enveloped in the cloud of dust which the big machine trailed behind it, Maxmillian Goetchius, a carpenter, who lives at Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Sixth Street, ran into a train yesterday at the Merrick Road crossing of the Long Island Railroad at Springfield, Queens, and was so seriously injured that he may die. The men and women in the automobile went on without knowing of the accident behind them. Their machine narrowly missed hitting the train.

Goetchius, with M. E. Bonestell and W. J. Denby, who live in the same neighborhood in Manhattan, were on an outing. Each had a motor cycle, and the three had gone out to Patchogue for luncheon. On the way back to Manhattan in the afternoon they came at an easy pace until past Lynbrook, where they were overtaken by a large touring car, in which were six persons. It was going fast and the motor cyclists followed at a rapid rate.

Bonestell caught and passed the automobile before it had reached the railroad crossing, while Denby dropped behind a quarter of a mile. Goetchius kept close to the rear of the car, but could not pass it. At the Springfield crossing the automobile did not slacken speed, and Goetchius, enveloped in the dust and fifty to seventy-five feet behind the car, was intent only on following pace.

Between the car and the motor cycle ran the engine of a train, and against it dashed Goetchius. He was hurled to one side, his left thigh broken, and his right hip bone fractured. He also suffered a shock which, with the posibilities of internal injuries, may cause death.

The train was stopped and the injured man was picked up.

Bonestell and the automobile ran on until, on the outskirts of Jamaica Village, both slackened up, and with a jest about those left behind, they parted, the automobile continuing toward Manhattan and the cyclist alighting to await his friends. When they did not arrive, he went back and found Goetchius being [illegible]

ARRESTED AS A THIEF, SAYS SHE IS BARONESS

Detectives Take Woman from Hotel St. Denis.

OF NOBLE BIRTH, SAY POLICE

A woman who said that she was the Baroness de Vorte Salmo, living at 206 West Ninety-sixth Street with her husband, the Baron Otto, was arrested at the Hotel St. Denis last night by Detective Sergeants Pepperted and Doran of the Central Office. The charge is grand larceny.

The police say that the woman was employed last week as a leading equestrienne by the Barnum & Bailey Circus in Brooklyn, and they believe that she still is under salary with the circus.

Under the name of Alice Lansen, the detectives say, the woman, who is thirty-four years old, good looking, and of fine physique, registered several weeks ago at an employment agency in West Thirty-ninth Street as a companion and maid. She found employment with Mrs. Eliza A. Bull, housekeeper for Mrs. William Slater of 1,795 I Street, N. W., Washington, giving as a reference "the Baroness de Vorte Salmo of 206 West Ninety-sixth Street." It was at this address that she boarded with her husband.

On April 21 she left Washington. She asked Mrs. Bull to send her trunk to the Hotel St. Denis, care of "Tansen Nissan." The woman inquired for the trunk last week and was told that it had not been received. She returned yesterday and asked again for it. The detectives were waiting for her and she was arrested.

The police had been asked to apprehend her, as two jeweled fans and considerable clothing had been stolen from Mrs. Slater's house at about the time that "the Baroness" took her departure. The missing property is valued by Mrs. Slater at $800.

Mrs. Bull, the housekeeper, told the police that she had not investigated the reference, as she was so thoroughly pleased with the appearance of the woman and by her apparent truthfulness that she did not think it was necessary to look further.

The woman's husband called at Police Headquarters and inquired what he must do to get his wife released on bail. He was told. She is said by the police to have been one of the best instructors at Durland's Riding Academy, where she is said to have been extremely popular with her pupils, who came from some of the most prominent families in the city.

Detective Sergeant Pepperted said that the Baron's title is the Baron Otto Von George Salmo. He is, according to the information which the police have gathered, a man of genuine rank with many influential friends here and in Washington. Because of financial difficulties, the Baron and his wife have been living apart, and she recently, in desperation, took the circus engagement.

Mrs. Slater who has been at the Waldorf-Astoria, returned to Washington on Saturday.

Later another Detective Sergeant, who had a long interview, he said, with the Baron, said that the man's name was the Baron Otto de Vits, that he was born in Budapest, Austria, about forty-five years ago. The Baron had told him that he, the Baroness, and an Englishman named Cameron came here five years ago and went to Fort Worth, Texas, to buy horses for the Russian Government. One day, he said, Cameron, who had the money of the party, disappeared, leaving a note that he had gone to Austria. The noble pair found themselves stranded. He gave private reading instructions.

The Baron said that his wife went to work for Mrs. Slater after reading an advertisement in the Washington papers. She wrote to her husband several times, describing Mrs. Slater as kind-hearted and saying that she had given her several dresses.

The Baroness, seeing the circus advertisement for an equestrienne, and knowing that the salary would be much larger than she got as a maid, gave up the place in the Slater household, came here, and after giving an exhibition of her ability, got the place. The Baron was greatly excited over the prospect of publicity, and threatened suicide. He said:

"The disgrace would be unbearable. I am noble. My wife is of noble birth. Why do they not leave us alone in our sad misery and poverty?"

TEN-HORSE BRIDGE RUNAWAY.

Some of the Barnum & Bailey Circus horses ran away on the Williamsburg Bridge early yesterday morning while on the way from the show grounds in Brooklyn to Jersey City. These teams were hauling circus property in a large red wagon, heavily laden. John Dolan was the driver, and he had another man on the seat with him. Dolan's team went along all right in the north roadway until just outside the Brooklyn tower the tooting of a ferryboat whistle frightened one of the off horses, and the animal bolted.

The other five horses took fright and began to run. Dolan lost control of them, and all he could do was to shout to the drivers ahead of him to look out. John Ryan of 90 Grand Street, Brooklyn, was about 300 feet ahead with a four-horse team, and saw the runaways approaching, with the big truck being swung to and fro and bumping into the outer guard rail and then the inner rail. Before Ryan could escape with his rig the runaways closed in on him, and there was a terrific collision between the two trucks and the ten horses.

The truck of the runaways became locked in the other truck, and the six runaways dragged both wagons along until the New York tower, where policemen stopped the teams. Ryan's horses were badly hurt, while the circus animals were only slightly injured. The drivers were badly shaken up.

Automobile Damaged by Car.

Capt. Ralbourn had sought to avoid a court-martial, and had forwarded to Washington his resignation from the army. It has not been accepted, and fears over the probability of a dishonorable discharge from the army is believed to have unbalanced his mind. Capt. Ralbourn was thirty-three years old and married. He enlisted in the army in 1898 as a private.

PRISONER SWAM THREE MILES.

Samuel Wolf, twenty-seven years of age, a prisoner on Hart's Island, escaped on Saturday afternoon by swimming three miles to City Island. He was later captured on the Eastern Boulevard by Bicycle Policeman John Dillon.

Wolf was committed by Judge Mayer-berger for a burglary committed in Harlem. He eluded the guards on Saturday and hid in a boathouse. Through a hole in the floor he crawled into the water and swam across the bay to a lonesome section of City Island. When he reached the shore Wolf turned his convict's uniform inside out, and then wandered into a field, where he obtained a hat and coat. He started toward Manhattan and was [illegible] Policeman Dillon, who [illegible] him.

PADEREWSKI'S CLOSE CALL.

Physician Says Pianist's Condition Was Critical—Crisis Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., April 30.—The condition of M. Paderewski is so much improved that he probably will start for New York to-morrow night or Tuesday morning. Dr. Fronczak announced to-night that his patient was resting comfortably and sleeping well, and Dr. James J. Putnam, the local specialist on nervous diseases, said:

"There was not the least exaggeration in the reports of the great pianist's illness. If anything he was in a more serious condition than spoken of in the papers, and his call was a very close one. I believe the crisis has passed now, and with complete rest and continued care he will rapidly recover."

None of the many callers at the car Hazlemere to-day was permitted to see the sufferer, nor were the many messages of sympathy or the flowers sent to him brought to his attention.

ARREST MAN NAMED McADOO.

Commissioner's Relative, He Said—Prizefighter Jailed on His Charge.

A young man who said he was Charles McAdoo of 104 West Eighty-sixth Street and in the real estate business, was locked up last night in the Oak Street Station on a charge of disorderly conduct. Sergt. McCarthy and Policemen Broderick and Gorman of the Brooklyn Bridge Squad made the arrest. McAdoo said he was related to the Police Commissioner, and the police say he took their numbers and threatened to have them "broken" for arresting him.

McAdoo was also the complainant against Tony Cusho, who first said he was a driver, of 196 Mott Street, whom he accused of having stolen his diamond pin. Despite his denials he was locked up. He later told Doorman Lynch at the station house that he was "Kid" Titus, the prizefighter. The trouble occurred on the gallery of the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge. The missing pin was not found.

INSURANCE MAN IN JAIL.

Washington Life President Causes Arrest of ex-Employe.

B. T. Scott, formerly Superintendent of Agents of the Washington Life Insurance Company and General Agent of the company for Oregon and Washington, with headquarters in Portland, is a prisoner in the Ludlow Street Jail as the result of civil proceedings instituted by his former employers.

He was arrested on Saturday in the Hotel York, where he was stopping. He declined yesterday to make any statement.

John Tatlock, President of the Washington Life, who prosecuted the complaint on which the arrest was made, said that Scott had not been connected with the company since March 1, and that he was in its debt to the amount of some thousands of dollars. [illegible] way unable to give $5,000 bail.

ROCKEFELLER QUARTET IS SUDDENLY DISMISSED

Notice Coincides with Announcement That Leader Is Returning.

SINGERS THREATEN TO SUE

Say They Were to Receive $10 a Week Apiece, but That Pay Was Cut to $1.75.

The quartet which has furnished music for the Bible class of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., received notice yesterday that it was no longer required. The singers were dismissed without ceremony and say they were unable to understand the hasty action. The quartet has been a feature at the Sunday meetings, and its contract does not expire until June.

The members learned at the close of the meeting of their dismissal, when they received a note from W. C. Hughes, Secretary of the Bible class, telling them that their engagement was at an end.

The young men say they will appear every Sunday until the expiration of their contract. If necessary they will take the matter into court for settlement.

For some time, according to stories told last night, the quartet, composed of Harbert Scott, Joseph R. Bolton, A. K. Snyder, and W. C. Roberts, had had difficulties about remuneration. When the contract was signed it was understood, they say, that they were to receive $10 each every week for their services, but at the end of the first month the price was reduced to $1.75. The young men want Mr. Hughes for an explanation, and he said, they allege, that $1.75 was all that could be paid them.

The quartet at this time was also singing at a church in Brooklyn, for which it was paid $1,000 a year.

"We cannot understand why we have been so suddenly dismissed," said a member of the quartet yesterday. "We certainly did the very best we could for the small pay, and no fault was found with our singing. Mr. Rockefeller could not duplicate it for the same price given us if he tried. If it is a question of a freeze-out we would like to know it.

"We intend appealing to Mr. Rockefeller when he returns from his trip abroad, for we can hardly credit the fact that he directly ordered our dismissal. If he did, then it will be a question for the court to settle."

"Our leader is now on the ocean."

These words were spoken by the Superintendent of the class yesterday morning to the one hundred and fifteen members. When John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will arrive was not announced, but it is probable that he will be at the meeting next Sunday. He has been away for several months. Letters have come from him in which he declared that he was thinking of the class all the time and was looking forward with delight to seeing the members again.

Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Secretary of the National Municipal League, spoke at yesterday's meeting on the unjust steward, applying the parable to civic affairs. He spoke of the efforts of Jerome and Folk and Vance McCormick, saying that they were heroes as truly as those who did great deeds on the field of battle.

"It took as much courage for Vance McCormick, the Mayor of Harrisburg, Penn., to make the traction corporations pay for their franchises as it takes for a man to be brave in battle," he said. "What Folk did in St. Louis did good not only in Missouri—it heartened good men and women all over the country."

ROCKEFELLER LOSES IN MINE.

$2,000,000 Goes, It Is Said, in Monte Cristo, Which Will Be Closed.

TACOMA, Wash., April 30.—Attorneys representing John D. Rockefeller have petitioned the court of Everett, for annulment of the charter of the Cristo Mining and Concentrating Company, through which Rockefeller formerly owned and operated the Monte Cristo Mines in the Cascade Mountains east of Everett. The mines, together with the concentrator, recently passed under control of the American Smelting and Refining Company.

Rockefeller, it is believed, lost at least $2,000,000 through his purchase of the mines and their development. He bought them about 1890 of Leigh Hunt, who is exploiting Korean gold mines and cotton growing in the Soudan. Rockefeller built an immense concentrator and furnished money for a great amount of tunneling and drifting for richer ore. All the ore proved of low grade and unprofitable. Among other subsidiary enterprises, Rockefeller built the Everett and Monte Cristo Railroad, which was sold to the Northern Pacific.

MAIL DRIVER BLOCKS CARS.

Five Policemen Appealed To Before One Would Order Him Off Tracks.

A driver of United States mail wagon No. 39 caused the passengers using the Broadway line to be delayed last evening by his refusal to leave the car tracks. There was a line of cars from Chambers Street up to Fifteenth Street before a policeman could be found with temerity to tell the Government employe to leave the rails.

Policeman Nillson of the West Thirtieth Street Station was the man who finally got after the driver. He was at Fifteenth Street and Broadway, when the conductor of a Broadway car asked him to arrest the mail driver. He said that the mail wagon had taken to the tracks at Chambers Street, and although he had asked five policemen to arrest the driver they had refused even to warn him.

Nillson refused to arrest the driver, but he ordered him to clear the way and took his name and address.

WORMLEYSBURG, Penn., April 30.—Defying the Northern Central Railway to desecrate the American flag, John Brobst, who refused to allow tracks to be laid on his land until he got what he considered a fair price, has won his fight and compelled the company to buy his whole property.

The railroad proposed to run a line through Brobst's land, and when he refused right of way instigated condemnation proceedings. The court appointed the company's indemnity bonds.

BANDITS ROB STAGE COACHES.

Eastern Passengers Get Thrilling Experience in California.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN JOSE, Cal., April 30.—Two highwaymen, with masks and heavily armed, late yesterday afternoon held up and robbed two coachloads of Eastern visitors going to Lick Observatory to look through the big telescope on Mount Hamilton. About twenty persons were in the two coaches, among them two school teachers, Miss Fleming and Miss Willetts, of Holyoke, Mass.; Louis J. Hoenig of Lockport, N. Y., and A. H. Sharp of Oakland, Ind.

The robbers were evidently amateurs, for they lined up the passengers and made only a perfunctory search for coin, getting only $87 and some jewelry. They looked and acted like cowboys, and are thought to be vaqueros from one of the neighboring cattle ranches.

This is the first time the Mount Hamilton stages have been robbed.

900 NEW VARIABLE STARS.

Photographs of Small Magellanic Cloud Show Surprising Results.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 30.—Miss Leavitt of the Harvard Observatory has been scrutinizing the photographic plates taken in Peru of the small Magellanic cloud, with the remarkable result of finding in this region 900 new variable stars, including the fifty-seven announced last Winter. Besides these there are sixty-four stars which are suspected of being variables.

It is estimated that the number of stars photographed in the small Magellanic cloud and adjacent clusters is about 280,000, of which one in 306 is variable. In the surrounding region about 40,000 stars appear on the best negatives, of which 12, or only 1 in 3,300, have been found to be variable, although all have been examined with equal care.

It is very difficult to count the faint stars which cloud the background, on account of their closeness to one another, and the number is certainly underestimated. Few of the variables have been observed to become as faint as these stars.

VIGILANTES BAR LAWYERS.

Nebraskans in Three Counties Organize to Stamp Out Crime.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, April 30.—A reign of lawlessness has prevailed in Hall, Adams and Clay Counties of late and in order to stamp it out prominent citizens have organized a large central vigilance committee and divided it into sub-committees. Lawyers are not admitted to membership.

A great many incendiary fires, a great many thefts of horses, cattle, and other property, and many other crimes have been committed in the three counties within a few months and the committee will go after the perpetrators to gain arrest and punishment as fast as possible.

SCHWAB'S RUSSIAN CONTRACT

BERLIN, April 30.—Charles M. Schwab of New York, who is on his way from St. Petersburg to Luxemburg to visit the iron works there, and who thence will return home, stopped over in Berlin for a day.

In an interview Mr. Schwab said it was quite true that he had made a contract with the Russian Government for warships, but he considered it would be improper for him to talk about it. Those in the Russian Government who knew of the contract, he said, were the persons to make the terms public.

FIND GIRL'S CLOTHING.

Police Believe She Threw Herself Into the East River.

The finding of a black hat, a black Eton jacket, a black belt, and a black chatelaine bag in which there were four plain handkerchiefs and a small hardwood box in which was a miniature statue of St. Anthony, at Nott Avenue and Hancock Street, Long Island City yesterday by Policeman Anacker, leads the police of that precinct to believe that some young girl committed suicide late Saturday night or early yesterday morning by throwing herself into the East River, a block away. The hat was stamped with the name of "Arfeld, 53 Avenue A." It was trimmed with black crepe and had been worn for some time, and was valued at about $5. The black Eton jacket was silk lined and cost probably $15. The police think that some young east side girl came over to Long Island City and after visiting the grave of some relative or friend, decided to kill herself.

TANK EXPLOSION KILLS TWO.

Fatal Accident in the Pennsylvania's Electric Light Plant.

PHILADELPHIA, April 30.—Two men were instantly killed to-night by the explosion of a tank in the electric light plant at the Broad Street station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The dead are George D. Tollinger, aged sixty-two years, foreman of the night shift, and George Hoey, aged thirty-five years, an engineer.

The tank that exploded contained water and air, and was used to regulate the running of elevators. The Broad Street Station was filled with passengers when the explosion occurred. The shock of the explosion shook the building and the lights went out, causing some excitement and much confusion. The great station was left so dark that passengers had much difficulty in finding trains.

J. H. HYDE'S AUTO DAMAGED.

Catches Fire in Garage from Gasoline-Soaked Waste.

A large touring car, the property of James H. Hyde, Vice President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was badly damaged by fire last night in the garage at 1,710 Broadway.

The machine had just been taken in by the chauffeur, Joseph Gerity. He was cleaning the auto with gasoline-soaked waste when he accidentally touched the electric sparker. In an instant the rags were in flames, and the oil-soaked sawdust on the floor ignited when the man dropped the cloth.

Joseph Conklin of 902 Eighth Avenue, the foreman of the garage, turned in an alarm, and the firemen made short work of the blaze. It was reported that [illegible]

SENATE CAUCUS ON GAS TO LINE UP FOR FIGHT

ASSEMBLY IS COUNTED SAFE

Plan to Get Programme Through and Leave Fate of Cheap Gas with Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 30.—Lines are being drawn for one of the hardest fights that ever has been witnessed at the State Capitol over the proposed gas and electric lighting legislation for New York City. Four of the bills, those directly affecting the price of gas and electricity, were finished late this afternoon, after the Stevens committee had been in session all day, and will go to the Legislature to-morrow. Two others remain to be perfected.

A Senate Republican caucus on the bills will be called for Tuesday. Senator Malby and Speaker Nixon had a long conference to-night at the Hotel Ten Eyck in regard to ways and means to get the legislation through.

The bill providing for a State commission for control of public utilities contemplates three Commissioners to serve for two, four, and six years, at a salary of $6,000 each.

It is planned to give this commission complete control and regulation of gas and electric light, heat, and power companies. These Commissionerships, according to opponents of the measures, especially certain Platt men, are to be promised in exchange for votes to help put through the Gas bill programme.

The other bill, which has yet to appear, is that amending the New York City charter in regard to the inspection of gas meters.

Gov. Higgins, Speaker Nixon, and Senators Malby and Raines will devote all their efforts to getting the programme through. No one more than they realizes what the failure to pass the bills would mean. It would give the legislative machine as now constituted a terrific upset. All the power the Odell chiefs can muster will be applied to the problem. They expect a hard fight and are preparing. Those Republicans who are against the bills will be made to feel the prod as they have not felt it in many sessions.

The opponents of the bills are as fully alive to the desperate situation that confronts them as anybody. How many of them there are among the Republicans is still matter for speculation. But the Republicans need to be captured to defeat the bills, should the Democrats stand solid against the legislation.

Nobody is paying any attention to the Assembly, as the majority is so great that not the slightest doubt is felt that Speaker Nixon can swing through the measures. Minority leader Palmer may cause some delay, but, after the Democrats have made their play, the programme, as far as the House is concerned, will be passed.

Millions on millions will be represented in the fight in the Senate. It is expected that Grady and McCarren will be marshals of the opposition. It is foreseen that any member who votes against the bills will be charged with having opposed the programme for a price. This charge will be made, even if there be not a particle of truth in it.

The caucus on Tuesday will be the opening test. If a comfortable number of anti-Odell men refuse to enter it, the very best machinists in the Odell shop will be needed to brace up the Senate. To-night the leaders who want the gas legislation profess themselves confident that they will induce enough Senators to go into the caucus to insure passage of the bills.

If, as it would appear, the majority of the bills have to go to Mayor McClellan, who could hold them fifteen days, the Legislature probably will have adjourned, so that there could not be a re-passage over the Mayor's veto, provided there was one.

By this method, it appears, the Mayor would be confronted with the dilemma of going against the attitude of Tammany Hall or of enforcing on the people by his own act high rates for lighting for at least another year. This is just the proposition the Odell Republicans want to place squarely up to Mayor McClellan.

LAY PLANS WITH MURPHY.

Grady and Palmer See Him—Gas Agents Start for Albany.

Senator Thomas F. Grady and Assemblyman George M. Palmer, the two Democratic members of the Stevens committee, were in New York all yesterday working on their minority report to present to the Legislature this evening. The two minority leaders will return to Albany this afternoon.

Both Grady and Palmer spent the afternoon and evening at the home of Charles F. Murphy, in East Seventeenth Street, mapping out the plan of the Democratic forces in regard to the gas legislation. None of the three men would say a word as to the attitude of the minority.

It was learned, however, that the minority report, while urging a reduction to the legal rates for gas and electricity, will oppose the Utilities Commission.

Representatives of the lighting companies stated very plainly yesterday that they would fight the Stevens bills to the utmost. Several representatives went to Albany yesterday and others will follow to-day. Efforts are to be concentrated on the Senate.

The companies first will make their fight before the Legislature, then before Gov. Higgins, and, should these efforts fail, will go to the courts.

Charles F. Mathewson, counsel for the Consolidated Gas Company of the proceedings before the Stevens committee, left for Albany at 6 o'clock last night. On the same train was Gov. Higgins, who ran down in the morning for another conference with Chairman Halpin of the County Committee and Nevada N. Stranahan, Port Collector. The Governor was silent as to his mission.

"I cannot believe the Legislature will pass the Stevens bills," said Mr. Mathewson. "When the actual facts are laid before the members they cannot, as reasonable men, pass bills which are absolutely confiscatory in their nature. [illegible] to words of a political character, I cannot see why these should be surprising or [illegible] ing companies were prepared to offer any compromise rate.

"Absolutely none," he replied. "We would be compelled to abandon our plans and work at Astoria, and to make other changes if the courts upheld any such reduction."

Walter Addicks also went to Albany on the same train. Henry J. Hemmens of the counsel for the New York Edison Company will go to Albany this morning.

"We shall fight the Stevens committee bills in the Legislature," said Mr. Hemmens, "and should our efforts fail there we shall fight them before the Governor. Should failure again be our reward, we shall fight them to the end in the courts."

William N. Dykman, counsel to the Brooklyn Union Gas Company, and Gen. James Jourdan, President, both spoke in the same vein.

"Our company certainly will resist 75-cent gas," said Mr. Dykman. "We can't live under it."

"I don't believe that the Legislature, whatever its powers, has the right to confiscate." Gen. Jourdan said.

THE FOUR LIGHTING BILLS.

75-Cent Gas and 10-Cent Electric Rate Go to Legislature To-day.

THIRTEEN MINERS ENTOMBED.

Little Hope for Men Buried by Explosion in Oklahoma.

WILBURTON, Oklahoma, April 30.—Thirteen miners were entombed and probably killed by an explosion early to-day in the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Coal Company's mine near Wilburton. Their bodies may not be recovered for several days.

The men went into the shaft at midnight. Foreman William Ray of the shift that left the mine at that hour says the mine was in good condition and a gas explosion was hardly probable. His shift left a shot hanging, and this new shift may have fired it. It is suggested from the force of the explosion, which could be heard for miles around and which tore heavy timbers aside and piled tons of dirt into the shaft, that a bad shot set off some dynamite which had been stored conveniently for work in pushing the entries.

The shaft is 350 feet deep. The men were supplied with air fanned from the shaft and by means of compressed air tubes. It is thought that the air pipe was burst by the explosion, but the air has been steadily pumped all day with the remote hope that some of the entombed men escaped the force of the explosion and the after damp.

Rescuers began work within a few minutes after the explosion. To-night the [illegible] still thirty [illegible]

ATTACK BY KNOWLES ON TARBELL'S METHODS

BUSINESS EXPIRED QUICKLY

Declares the Present Second Vice President Violated His Own Instructions.

Henry H. Knowles, who until Thursday last was Supervisor of Agencies for the Equitable Life Assurance Society, and who was on that day discharged from the company's service, issued a statement last night, in which he sets forth at length some alleged transactions by Gage E. Tarbell, the Second Vice President of the Equitable.

The statement is in part as follows:

"Tarbell has always referred in the past to his record of wonderful accomplishments in the Chicago field, which landed him in the Third Vice Presidency of the company. The real merit and value of his work in that field he managed to cover up in such a way as to place himself as one of the Vice Presidents of the Equitable Life.

"At the time Tarbell was admitted into the firm of Crane, Curran & Co. Mr. Crane had been manager in that field for fifteen years, and the year Tarbell was taken into the firm this field had produced about $13,000,000 of first-rate business. Tarbell's contract with Crane, Curran & Co. in 1889 was that to secure a third interest in that agency he was to produce a million of business, and his rebates were not to exceed 27½ per cent.

"By methods peculiar to himself, he wrote $1,982,000 of business, on an average rebate of 61 per cent., which was two and a half times greater than the rebate he was allowed under his contract. It was on this point that Crane & Curran protested against his admission into the firm.

"The character and value of business that he put upon the books that year is best shown by the fact that at least 60 per cent. of it lapsed after the payment of one premium.

"In 1890 the firm was Crane & Tarbell, Curran having been forced out. Tarbell wrote that year $2,127,000 of business. Of this amount $836,000 was returned as not taken, and no premiums paid, notwithstanding the fact that the agency had been put to the expense of the medical examiners' fees, inspection fees, office expenses, postage, &c.; $1,291,000 of this business was paid for, the premiums on which were $29,067.77; the rebates given by Tarbell on this business were $24,912.68.

"The managers and agents of the society have often, at agents' meetings throughout the country, during the past twelve years, heard Tarbell boast of his wonderful work of one afternoon with a coterie of men known as the Diamond Match Company. He stated that he induced four of these gentlemen in one afternoon.

"The facts about this wonderful transaction, as shown by the records, are: Two of these gentlemen, brothers, were insured for $100,000 each and were given rebates of 66 per cent.; the other two gentlemen, who bore the same name, were given rebates of 75 per cent. The total premiums on these policies were $13,899, and the amount paid in notes and cash was only $5,176.90.

"A prominent banker of Milwaukee bought of this wonderful wizard of life insurance three policies amounting to $100,000; two for $25,000 each and one for $50,000; the premiums on the three policies being $3,330, for $1,052, giving an average rebate of 66 per cent.; on the two policies an average rebate was given of 50 per cent., and on the one for $50,000 the rebate was 82 per cent.

"Another $100,000 on a prominent citizen for a premium of $3,110, was sold for $1,000, a rebate showing of 67 per cent.

"The above figures and information are taken from a statement by the Equitable Life's accountant in Chicago at that time, and can be reproduced and verified by the records if Tarbell's memory, as shown by his inquiry as to 'who is Knowles?' is still faulty.

"In 1891 Tarbell was appointed Manager for Chicago and one of the Manager until September, 1893, two years and eight months, and analysis of his business for that time will in my opinion eclipse his record for rebating as shown above.

"He boots of his wonderful agency which he had in Chicago when he left there. The only men who were able to produce any results after his departure were those that he had found in the agency of Craine & Curren. The man who produced the wonderful business he talks about produced it by the same methods he himself employed, and consequently would not stand alone when he and his methods were removed from Chicago, as the source could not rise nigher than the fountain.

"His record and his work as a rebater in Chicago left that field in such a condition that even men of marked ability and integrity have found it uphill work to produce any business on a correct basis.

"The following extract is the instructions issued by the Equitable Life, and taken from the Equitable Rate Book, and is written over the signature of Gage E. Tarbell, as Second Vice President of the society:

Every agent of this society is forbidden to pay or allow, or offer to pay or allow, any rebate of premium in any manner whatsoever, directly or indirectly. This rule shall apply to any person who solicits or writes an application for the society, whether he be a broker, general agent, manager, or employed to work for the society in any other capacity. The penalty for the violation of the foregoing rule shall be immediate dismissal from the service of the society.

G. E. TARBELL,
Second Vice President.

Bainbridge Colby of counsel for James W. Alexander read the statement made by H. H. Knowles, but said:

"I know nothing about those things and have nothing to say about the matter."

Mr. Alexander and Mr. Hyde had no statements to make. It was said that Mr. Tarbell had not read the statement before he retired for the night.

INSPECTOR McLAUGHLIN OUT.

Forty Years' Police Service in Brooklyn Ended Last Night.

After nearly forty years of service as a policeman in Brooklyn, Inspector Patrick H. McLaughlin, until recently in command in the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, retired from the department at midnight last night. To-day at the local Headquarters in State Street a handsome silver loving cup will be given to him by the Captains and other officers who have served under him.

McLaughlin was appointed a member of the old Brooklyn police force in 1866. He made an excellent record for himself as patrolman, Sergeant, and Captain, and in 1896 was promoted to the rank of Inspector. When Brooklyn became a part of the greater city McLaughlin was made a Deputy Chief of Police, and at the death of Deputy Chief John MacKellar he became commander of the department in Brooklyn and Queens.

Devery transferred McLaughlin to Long Island City and placed Inspector Elias Clayton in charge in Brooklyn. Hugh McLaughlin caused Devery to restore his kinsman to his former position. On Jan. 27 last Commissioner McAdoo reduced McLaughlin to duty as a District Inspector. He asked to be retired, and his request was granted. McLaughlin will receive a pension of $2,500 a year.

COMMANDER STONEY DEAD.

Dies Suddenly of Heart Disease on Board the Santee.

ANNAPOLIS, April 30.—Commander George M. Morse Stoney, United States Navy, died suddenly of heart disease last night at his quarters on board the ship Santee, at the Naval Academy, aged fifty-two years. He had been in bad health for several months, but his most recent illness began about a month ago.

He was a native of South Carolina, but was appointed to the Naval Academy as a midshipman from Alabama, and graduated with the class of 1874. Since June, 1906, he had been in charge of ships at the Naval Academy, with headquarters

FEELS LIKE THROWING BOMB.

BOSTON, April 30.—"The temptation of the Power of Evil is so strong within me that I feel like throwing a bomb into Commonwealth Avenue, among the homes of the privileged classes whose apathy and indifference to the condition of their fellow-beings is contemptuous, but I overcome this temptation."

With these words Miss Vida Dutton Scudder, Associate Professor of English Literature at Wellesley College, denounced the wealthy in an address to-day in Sewall Hall, Huntington Avenue, in the Back Bay district, where she was the principal speaker at a meeting of the Temple Adath Israel. Her subject was "The Religion of the Social Worker," and among other things she said:

"The moneyed class is blind to the poor people and their condition. Many of these people will tell you that they know there are poor to be uplifted and conditions to be bettered, but they say so with an indifference which is contemptuous. The modern evil of society is the distinction between classes and persons. The pursuit of money is the question which is uppermost to-day, when churches and societies are holding out to the favor of the wealthy.

"When we all love each other with a true spirit of humanity there will come the time when we will not be hearing so much about the pitiful condition of the poor."

SAVED TWO MEN AND BOY.

Rescued Show Little Gratitude, Say the Rescuers.

Two men and a boy were saved from drowning off Belden Point, City Island, last night at dusk by Roundsman Hearle and two members of the neighboring Volunteer Life-Saving Station. In spite of the efforts which had been made by Hearle and his companions, the rescued men refused to give their names, and, according to the policeman, treated him very curtly.

"If you people had not got us, our friends would have, anyway," Hearle says they told him.

They went away in a boat, which also came to their rescue. The boat in which they had been sailing was the Katie B, a twenty-footer, owned by a boatman in the vicinity and hired for a fishing excursion.

They had just gone about to anchor. A heavy gust of wind caught the sail and capsized the boat. The boy was pitched into the sail as it lay on the water, while the two men clung to the sides of the boat.

"They were yelling when we saw them," said Hearle. "We had a hard pull on account of the headwind and tide. They must have been in the water for twenty minutes before we got to them."

Hearle and his companions towed the capsized boat to shore.

CAUSED UPROAR IN COURT.

Mrs. Weitz Roughly Handled in Trying to Aid Husband.

For several minutes yesterday morning the Essex Market Court was in an uproar when Mrs. Henry Weitz of 254 Delancey Street attempted to pay a fine of $3 imposed by Magistrate Barlow upon her husband for disorderly conduct.

As soon as the fine was imposed Mrs. Weitz left her seat and went to the rail to give her husband the money to obtain his release. A court officer roughly threw her aside. Weitz objected, and the policeman dragged him from behind the rail. Mrs. Weitz screamed. Other court officers took a hand, and Weitz, with his wife clinging to him, was dragged across the room to the door leading to the court prison. Here he was either pushed or fell down a flight of stairs into the courtyard.

"They are murdering my husband!" screamed Mrs. Weitz. "Won't some one help me?" Then she fainted.

Weitz in the meantime had been locked in a cell, but was released when his fine was paid ten minutes later. He said that he would lay the matter before Police Commissioner McAdoo.

BOY KILLED BY B. R. T. CAR.

Fender Struck His Leg and Rolled Him Under Wheels.

A ten-year-old boy, whose identity has not yet been established by the police, was run over and instantly killed at 5 o'clock last evening by a Brooklyn Rapid Transit car on Myrtle Avenue, near Broad Street. The car was coming along rapidly when the lad ran out from the curb and tried to cross the track. He had almost cleared it when the fender struck his leg and rolled him under the wheels. The body was taken to Stender's Morgue, in Ridgewood, and, although the police searched the neighborhood for blocks thereabout, no one could be found who knew the boy.

He was dressed in a gray checked suit, golf cap, and black shoes and stockings, and had light hair and blue eyes. A bag of candy which he carried was found tightly clinched in his hand when he was taken from under the car. The motorman, William Enright, of 500 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, was horror-struck by the accident. He was held on a charge of homicide.

ARRESTS FIFTY BOYS.

Capt. Ward Breaking Up Sunday Rowdyism on Elevated Trains.

Capt. Ward of the Alexander Avenue Police Station and a squad of policemen made an effort yesterday afternoon to break up the increasing rowdyism on the trains of the Third Avenue elevated railroad on Sunday afternoons. Hundreds of boys go to the Bronx parks on Sunday to play ball and begin to return home about 3 P. M. From that time on the other passengers on the elevated have to submit to all manner of annoyances.

A week ago twenty boys were arrested. This example, as Capt. Ward supposed, was lost, and yesterday he arrested fifty. They were taken from trains at the East One Hundred and Thirty-third Street Station and carted in patrol wagons to the station. Thirty-nine were sent to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, being too young to lock up in a police station. There was great excitement at the station, which was surrounded by several hundred of the relatives and friends of the young prisoners.

GOULD CHAUFFEUR, HE SAID.

Arrested in Front of McAdoo's House for Speeding.

Alexander Mowatt of 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, who said that he was chauffeur for Frank Gould, was locked up in the West Forty-seventh Street Station last night charged with speeding an automobile in Fifty-seventh Street. He was bailed out by W. Swan, a veterinarian of 47 West Sixty-third Street.

The chauffeur said that he had taken Mr. and Mrs. Gould out during the afternoon, and had just left them at their home. He was on his way to the garage at the time of his arrest.

BROADWAY CARS BLOCKED.

Burning Out of "Feeder" Delayed Traffic an Hour and a Half.

All cars on Broadway were tied up for an hour and forty minutes last night when traffic was the heaviest. Cars were stalled all along the line on both tracks.

The trouble was caused by the burning out of the "feeder," at a point near Exchange Place. After a long hunt for the break in the current, the cable had to be sawed out, and the power switched onto another cable which conveys the power to the channel rail in the conduit.

The block lasted from about 7:40 o'clock till nearly 9:30.

CHICAGO UNIONS TO APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

To Urge Him to Investigate Before Troops Are Sent.

STRIKE CONFERENCE FAILS

Six Hours' Session Ends Without Any Plan of Settlement Being Reached.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Nearly every union in Chicago was represented at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor to-day to consider the teamsters' strike, and the speeches, almost without exception, were for war against the employers. It was decided to appeal to President Roosevelt, Gov. Deneen, and Mayor Dunne to investigate before sending the militia or Federal soldiers here.

The speeches made were warlike and their general tenor was that the fight was for the life of unionism, and that the employers should be fought with their own weapons. It was decided to employ counsel to defend the indicted labor leaders.

Early in the afternoon committees representing the Employers' Association met Mayor Dunne's peace committee, consisting of Bishop C. P. Anderson of the Episcopal Church, Jenkin Lloyd Jones of All Souls' Church, Dr. Emil G. Hirsch of Sinai Temple, Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, and Dr. Graham Taylor of Neighborhood Houses. At the end of this conference a committee representing the unions met the Mayor's peace committee and for six hours went over the situation in an effort to devise some means to bring about a peaceable ending of the controversy, but without success.

Chicago had on working clothes all day as a result of the strike. From dawn until dark the downtown streets were crowded with heavily laden wagons, giving the city a week-day appearance. Believing that the fight now going on for supremacy between the Employers' Association of Chicago and the union teamsters is to be a protracted one, business men sought to procure an extra stock of material and supplies. Every available team and even one-horse vehicles were brought into use to replenish coal bins and to obtain other material necessary to the transaction of business.

The Federation passed resolutions requesting President Roosevelt, Gov. Deneen, and Mayor Dunne to investigate the existing conditions in Chicago before complying with any request made for the use of militia in the city during the present difficulty.

Early to-day 500 men and boys, headed by a number of striking teamsters, attacked the main stables of the Employers' Teaming Company and stampeded the animals. This was in violation of the Federal injunction issued by Judge Kohlsaat. The names of the union men involved, it is said, have been secured and they will be brought into court to-morrow.

A mob of nearly a thousand persons, including many women, attacked two men at Oak and Crosby Streets to-night, near the scene of last night's barn riot. The men were driven from their wagons, the horses cut loose, and the wagons overturned. The drivers were chased through a crowded Southport Avenue car, in which they took refuge, and after being shot at they were severely kicked and beaten.

Harry and William Grady, brothers and partners in the teaming business, at 984 West Thirty-seventh Street, were shot near their barn to-night. Harry Grady was taken to the Provident Hospital with a bullet in his head. He probably will not recover. His brother was severely wounded in the face.

ENJOINS RATE CHANGE.

Southern Roads Get Injunction Against Florida Railroad Commission.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., April 30.—The Louisville and Nashville-Atlantic Coast Line, Seaboard Air Line, and Georgia Southern and Florida Railroads have secured an injunction against the Florida Railroad Commission in the United States Court to prevent the commission's reduction of lumber rates from going into effect to-morrow.

The injunction papers were filed with the Clerk of the United States Court at Pensacola.

Used Auto to Catch an Auto.

The tires of Bicycle Roundsman Casey's motor cycle were being pumped up last evening in front of 2,312 Broadway, when Casey saw an automobile proceeding up the avenue at a rate which he thought law breaking. He jumped into a motor car which was standing at the curb, and ordered the chauffeur to give chase.

The first machine was overtaken after a pursuit of four blocks. At the West Sixty-eighth Street Station the occupant said he was Stewart A. Elliott, twenty-one, of 412 West End Avenue. He left $100 security with the Sergeant.

Minister Declines Permission to Stay Another Week in Caracas.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Secretary Taft to-day heard from United States Minister Herbert W. Bowen at Caracas in response to the Secretary's dispatch directing him to come to the United States in connection with the charges affecting Assistant Secretary Loomis, which were reported to the State Department in a personal letter by Mr. Bowen.

The Minister expressed his willingness to come to the United States immediately, sailing to-morrow, but preferred that he be permitted to delay his departure from Caracas until the Monday following, in order that he might have time to settle certain matters. The permission was given.

ARRESTED AT HIS BENEFIT.

The Ansonia Has Bill of $289 Against Actor—$30 from Testimonial.

Alexander Comstock of Flushing, an actor, was arrested on a warrant last night at the Academy of Music, during a benefit performance given for him. He has been in poor health for some time, and is nearly blind.

He is charged by Guernsey E. Webb, Manager of the Ansonia, Seventy-second Street and Broadway, with having left last February owing a bill of $289. The proceeds of the benefit did not amount to more than $30.

Detective Buckley of the West Side Court squad, who had the warrant, did not wait for the conclusion of the performance, but took Comstock at once to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. He was bailed out by Louis Leavitt, and said that he would be able to pay all his accounts to-day.

SMALLPOX ON A LINER.

Stewardess of the St. Paul Ill, but Passengers Didn't Know It.

The American Line steamship St. Paul, which arrived yesterday from Southampton, was held for three hours at Quarantine because of a case of smallpox on board. The patient, who is Miss Kate Ingalls, a second cabin stewardess, was removed on the Health tug Charles F. Allen, and is now in the Kingston Avenue Contagion Hospital, Brooklyn, in a serious condition. Her quarters were fumigated, and the second cabin passengers vaccinated, after which the St. Paul was allowed to go to her dock.

The young woman was taken ill the day the vessel left Southampton. Dr. Geisinger, the ship's surgeon, diagnosed the case as smallpox, and the patient was kept in her cabin. The doctor went into quarantine, and gave his time to the case. None of the cabin passengers knew of the woman's illness until Quarantine was reached.

VICTIM WAS MRS. ROSENBERG.

Coroner Says Murdered Woman Kept Money on Premises.

Coroner Scholer yesterday announced as a result of his investigation into the murder of the aged woman at 382 East One Hundred and First Street on Saturday that the victim's name was not Mrs. Whalen, but Rosenberg. As a motive for the crime the Coroner said Mrs. Rosenberg had money in the house, and that two bank books showing a balance of $1,075 in the Bowery Savings Bank and $965 in the Bank for Savings were in her trunks, which had been hastily rifled.

Mrs. Rosenberg had moved into the place on April 1. She had previously lived, the Coroner thinks, at 218 East Seventy-fifth Street. With her when she moved in was a young man-boarder. According to passports and other memoranda found in his effects, Edward Pekerz, twenty-four years old, a Bohemian. He was last seen on Tuesday wearing a new suit of clothes.

"The Piano of To-day"

¶ When the Pianola Piano was first announced it was described as "The Piano of the Future." Not only the manufacturers, but every expert in the musical trade who saw the first instruments of the new type, declared that this was the most far-reaching improvement in pianos that had been produced in years.

Now, after about twelve months of selling, it is apparent that "The Piano of the Future" is no longer an adequate description. Sooner even than the manufacturers anticipated, the Pianola Piano has demonstrated its right to the title of "The Piano of To-day." The public demand for it is unprecedented in the history of the musical industry. It is the one piano which people everywhere are talking of and are purchasing.

The PIANOLA PIANO—playable either by perforated roll or from the keyboard.

ONE of the most significant features connected with the introduction of the Pianola Piano is the extent to which one sale influences others. Customers have become so enthusiastic over the instrument after having had it in their homes for a while that they recommend it to their friends and so produce an unending chain of sales.

An officer in one of the foremost financial institutions purchased a Pianola Piano four months ago. As a result of his great satisfaction and enthusiasm, every one of his fellow officers, nine in all, have become purchasers. Such instances, multiplied in many different directions, offer conclusive proof that the Pianola Piano is rapidly displacing the hitherto standard type of piano.

The Pianola Piano does not differ from the ordinary upright piano in any outward aspect. Both Piano and Pianola are fully as effective as the separate instruments, while being more convenient and economical of space. Prices of the Pianola Piano $500 to $1,000. Descriptive literature and music catalogues, showing repertory, sent to any address on request.

WE HESITATED about making the price so low because, really, it's a reflection upon the fabric, but then there's the imperative Simpson Crawford Co.'s policy—"a fair profit and no more"—and as we purchased this great lot of fabrics at a veritable sacrifice we sell them on a similar basis. Now when we tell you they are worth 15c. a yard you can depend upon it absolutely. You know how popular voiles are—Fashion can hardly see anything else for smart Summer frocks. CZAR'S LATEST EDICT MEANS A REAL REFORM

Many Millions Will Benefit by Freedom of Conscience.

ENTIRE REVERSAL OF POLICY

Russia Has Previously Sought National Unity in Conquered Provinces by Means of Religious Unity.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 30.—One of the saddest Easters in Russia's history has been brightened by the realization of the promised liberty of conscience.

The solemn abolition of religious restrictions and the customary remission of arrears on famine loans to the peasants palliate the extraordinary silence of the Emperor regarding the Zemsky Sobor, which is uppermost in people's minds.

The customary Eastertide partiality for excesses has been overpowered by the depth of the national humiliation. The mujiks have refrained from wholesale drunkenness, and a small street row with a few revolver shots is all that happened in St. Petersburg. A terrible fire in Moscow appears to be the only event of the day there. Throughout Russia blood shed has been confined to Poland.

Alarmists say that to-morrow in St. Petersburg there will be no lack of sanguinary episodes. Circumstantial reports are circulated that the factory hands are armed with revolvers, cartridges, and hand grenades, which will be brought into play to hasten the reforms, but it is more probable that the reforms will be left to the care of the political parties actively at work in Moscow.

By The Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Monday May 1.—The grant of real religious freedom to his subjects by Emperor Nicholas as an Easter gift is an historic event of the highest significance, in comparison with which the remission of millions of dollars of taxes to the peasantry, a long list of decorations, and six pages of promotions of bureaucratic officials are hardly worth comment.

Liberty of conscience has been repeatedly proclaimed, and Procurator General Pobiedonostzeff, in his famous reply to the evangelical petition of 1888 contended that it existed in the empire. The fact is that all religions have been tolerated in Russia, but none has been allowed to trespass upon the orthodox faith.

People were free to remain true to the religion of their fathers, but were forbidden to make proselytes. Everybody might enter but none might leave the Orthodox Church without forfeiting all civil rights, including the right to inherit or own property; and in the train of that policy persecutions of every conceivable character were directed against the "Raskolniki," or dissident sects, especially the Old Believers. Among the Raskolniki are a thousand queer and rustic heresies bred of the great schism caused by the reform of the ancient liturgy and augmented by the suppression of the Patriarchate by Peter the Great.

The Old Believers, who clung to the old liturgy and made the sign of the cross with three fingers instead of two, were broken up into numerous sects, some discarding priests and sacraments, while others instituted an episcopate and priesthood of their own and dealt with all innovations from the West as inventions of the Antichrist, eschewing tea, coffee, and sugar, and considering shaving wicked.

These latter survived countless persecutions for years, and in spite of them became commercially the ablest class in Russia. This branch of the Old Believers includes merchant princes of Moscow rivaling those of America; but they have never ceased to be regarded as apostates from the Orthodox Church and have been subjected to all sorts of legal persecutions as such.

A BROOD OF STRANGE SECTS.

The humbler dissenters have had a much harder time, being hunted down until secretly they gave rise to a brood of strange sects. One preached redemption by suicide and fiery or bloody baptism; others worshipped images of Napoleon as the Messiah, believing he escaped to Siberia and would return some day and establish a reign of justice and peace, and still others, like the Flagellants, Jumpers, and Adamites, which are now practically wiped out, indulged in licentious rites.

The Stundists and Molkans of Southern Russia, now the principal native nonconformists, who might be described as the Quakers of Russia, have made tremendous progress in recent years in spite of persecutions, which have often driven them eastward and made them pioneers of Russian colonization.

There are in all about 12,000,000 of these dissidents. The Emperor's act will also affect about 40,000,000 belonging to alien faiths, such as the Jews, Catholics, and Lutherans of Poland and the Baltic provinces, the Protestants of Finland, and the followers of Islam and Buddha in the Urals, the Crimea, the Caucasus, Turkestan, and Central Asia.

These figures are only approximate, as probably millions who are nominally orthodox secretly profess other religions. Whole villages of Mussulmans, baptized in the Orthodox communion by a ruse, petitioned in vain to be permitted to return to Mohammedanism.

REFORM TO BE IMMEDIATE.

While the Emperor's approval of the action of the Committee of Ministers distinctly holds to orthodoxy as the State religion and creates the usual commission to work out many details in connection with the reform, it also rescinds a number of acts aimed specifically at various religions and establishes the principle of absolute freedom of worship and the right of every Russian who becomes of age to change his confession of faith, in which the assurance of religious freedom lies. It also contemplates relief for Catholics and Poles from the present vexations and restrictions as to preaching, the catechism, the Russian language, &c.

Logically, the Emperor's action involves a complete reversal of the Russian policy of seeking national unity in conquered provinces by means of religious unity. He has accepted the axiom of the Metropolitan Platon, who said: "Russia has nothing to fear from the spread of Orthodoxy, but much to fear from the spread of Russianism."

Russianism is the policy of Pobiedonostzeff, which has been followed by Count Ignatieff, Count Tolstoi, Count Dmitri Tolstoi, Count Ivan Tolstoi, Count Delianoff, Count Kamarovsky, Count Pahlen, Count Muravieff, Count Lamsdorff, Count Witte, and Count Plehve, all of whom have been Russians first and Christians afterward.

Russianism has been the cause of the Polish revolts, the Finnish troubles, the Armenian massacres, the Jewish persecutions, the Lutheran persecutions, the Stundist persecutions, the Molkan persecutions, the Old Believer persecutions, the Siberian exiles, the Caucasian troubles, the Central Asian troubles, the Japanese war, and the present revolution

FOREST LAWS EVADED; NO BRIBES, SAYS MAYER

Timber Sales by Confession of Judgment Void, He Finds.

HOW TO CLEAR BURNED AREAS

Work Should Be Done by State Force —Finds No Cutting of Green Timber.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 30.—In his report to Gov. Higgins on the trespasses upon the State forest preserve by the cutting and removal therefrom of timber killed by forest fires, Attorney General Mayer finds that with the knowledge and consent of the Forest, Fish, and Game Department, a system has grown up of permitting the burned lands to be lumbered in evasion of the stringent prohibition of the State Constitution, under the form of collecting penalties through a confession of judgment gone through before a Justice of the Peace, the amounts collected being fixed on the basis of the going rates for timber of the kinds concerned.

He declares that these judgments were altogether void, being with a single exception for amounts in excess of $500, the maximum limit of jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace. He also criticises the law authorizing payment to the local game protector, already salaried by the State, of a share of the penalty recovered. Mr. Mayer says in part:

"It appears that a method of indirection was employed whereby in effect the State sold fire-killed timber contrary to the prohibition of the Constitution, as that prohibition has been construed up to the present time; that the State has received revenues therefrom aggregating $25,000 in round numbers, by a method of confession of judgment absolutely void.

"I desire to make clear that there is no evidence whatever that the cutting of green timber was treated in this way. On the contrary, in green timber cases the prosecutions were vigorous and the amounts demanded were in some instances three times the stumpage value of the timber; so that the cutting of green timber has been made unprofitable.

"The sentiment of the residents of the Adirondack region is strongly against the cutting of green timber on State lands.

"I further desire to call your attention to the question of moieties paid to game protectors. For instance, for the period from December, 1904, to April, 1905, the amount of moieties paid to one of the protectors was $1,735.62, and in another case for a period of ten months was $264.

"I believe it to be true that there is substantially unanimous condemnation of the method whereby game protectors, who are State officers in receipt of salaries, receive any moiety for discovering trespasses. I take the liberty of suggesting that the State can well afford to increase the fixed compensation of the game protectors and let the moneys recovered for trespasses be paid into the State Treasury. While I am not to be understood as making any reference to the case of any game protector, the system of moieties can only offer serious temptation and open the door to improper practices.

"Finally, I think it but just to add that after thorough investigation, the examination of many witnesses and documents, there is no evidence that any corrupt consideration was received by the State officials or agreed upon between them and any of the trespassers; but it is unquestioned that the policy which was followed resulted in illegal acts.

"Such action will be taken by me in the courts as the facts warrant."

The judgments confessed before Justices of the Peace have in most cases, Mr. Mayer finds, exceeded $500, the limit within which the jurisdiction of such Justices is confined.

In his review of the facts Mr. Mayer quotes from opinions of Attorneys General, beginning with one from T. E. Hancock on Feb. 16, 1895. Following their arguments Mr. Mayer concludes:

"I think I may say that it was the clear intention of the Constitution to prevent the sale of timber, but I think that the State in the exercise of its police power has the same right to protect a citizen resident in the Adirondack region from the danger of a burning forest, or of a forest which, having been burned, is a continuing menace, in precisely the same way that the State or its municipalities, through proper agencies, may destroy a burning building or tear down the walls of a building which has been burned.

"Had the officers themselves undertaken at the State's expense the clearing of the forest at the points of danger for the purpose of protecting life and property the difficulties which ensued would not have occurred, and it is safe to say that there would have been no criticism of such a course by thoughtful citizens."

Among the sample cases of trespass the Attorney General cites one in which the State actually was asked to pay a premium of 53 cents a cord on a portion of the timber removed. His comment follows:

"In one instance the computation presented rather defective mathematics. The value of the timber is estimated; from this is deducted the cost of the timber delivered on the river, and the difference represents the claimed stumpage value which was paid to the State. Thus, in the Bouchard trespass, the estimated value is $7,000. The cost of delivering on the river is $6,795, and the difference, or $314, represents the amount which was first agreed to be paid to the State. But upon this calculation the State paid a premium of 53 cents per cord for taking of 491 cords of balsam.

"In other words the balsam was estimated to be worth $4 per cord, but as the expense of delivering it on the river, together with the spruce, was $4.53 per cord, and as the 491 cords of balsam were deducted at the rate of $4.53 per cord, the State was minus upon that calculation 53 cents per cord on balsam.

"It is but fair to say that Protector Vosburgh discovered this discrepancy and called it to the attention of the Chief Game Protector. Subsequently the J. & J. Rogers Company paid this difference, $260.23, by their check."

BUY FINEGAN'S HANDBOOKS.

Legislators Give $6,100 Order to One of Draper's Subordinates.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 30.—The resolution that 12,100 copies of the legislative handbook prepared by Thomas E. Finegan, a departmental head under Commissioner Draper of the State Department of Education, be purchased and charged to the contingent fund of the Assembly and the Senate, has caused some comment. The book is copyrighted by Finegan, and is marked "Price, 50 cents." The resolution provides 50 copies for each legislator, 100 each for the Clerk of the Senate and of the Assembly, and 100 for the Chief Clerk of each State Department, at a total cost of $6,100, approximately.

Commissioner Draper remarked some time ago that "this year the department was not in politics, and will not issue the handbooks." This session the handbooks, almost similar in get-up, though bound less elaborately than those issued when Mr. Skinner was at the head of the department, were distributed as in former years.

EXTRA SESSION LIKELY, TO DEAL WITH HOOKER

June Talked Of at Albany as Most Favorable Time.

MUCH OPPOSITION TO PLAN

Assembly Leaders Think Five Days Ought to be Sufficient—Gas Matters Up, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 30.—The recommendations as to the case of Justice Warren B. Hooker probably will be made to the Assembly to-morrow night by the Judiciary Committee. That committee is booked to hold its last meeting on the subject at 1 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

In the event that the report shall recommend that charges be formulated against the Justice, it is generally believed that there will be a special session of the Legislature. Already the leaders are talking about the date of such a special session.

The gossip to-day was that a special session, if held, would be called for June or September, probably June. July and August are vacation months, and many members have planned to be away. Furthermore, Albany has the reputation of being an uncomfortable place in Summer.

June is favored by the leaders, as September is too close to election and the Assemblymen will be anxious to be at home fixing fences.

Justice Hooker's counsel might ask for a great deal of time in which to prepare the case. There is already evidence that they would put up a most strenuous fight if the case should come for hearing before the entire Legislature. With the Legislature sitting in special session to pass on the political acts of a Supreme Court Justice, the proceeding would take on a more serious aspect than the preliminary investigation before the Judiciary Committee.

There had been considerable divergence of opinion as to what would be done in the event the committee should report for a concurrent resolution removing Justice Hooker under Section 11, Article 6, of the Constitution. The talk originally was that if such a report were adopted a joint committee would be appointed from both branches of the Legislature to hear the Justice, and that its report would then come before the Legislature in special session for determination.

Recently the talk has been that the entire Legislature probably would hold the hearing from the beginning. Section 11, Article 6, of the Constitution says that Justices of the Supreme Court may be removed by concurrent resolution of both Houses of the Legislature if two-thirds of all members elected to each House concur therein. It also states that no such removal shall be made except for cause, nor until after a statement has been served on the accused and he has had opportunity to be heard. Hooker's counsel could demand hearing before the entire Legislature, it is contended.

The hearing before the Legislature would partake of the nature of a trial in court. Testimony to substantiate the charges made would have to be brought out, and then Justice Hooker would have an opportunity to make his defense. One point that is puzzling some of those interested is who would undertake the part of the prosecution—whether some committee of the Legislature should act as prosecutor, or the affirmative evidence be brought out by counsel hired by the Legislature. The natural course, it is believed, would be to hire counsel. It might be that the Attorney General would be called in.

Besides talk of an extra session, there was more talk to-night about protracting the regular session beyond May 5. Senator Malby has spoken to the Assembly leaders about extending the time. He found Speaker Nixon firmly opposed to the idea.

The New York gas situation and the Hooker case are the two things that Senator Malby had in mind when suggesting a later date for adjournment. This evening he said that, while he couldn't say just now that there ought to be an extension of the session, he believed there should be ample time for discussion of whatever matters were coming before the Legislature.

The Assembly leaders say there are five legislative days remaining; that the bulk of the business is cleared up, and that there is enough time left for discussing any matters that may come up.

On the other hand, few care to discuss the subject of mortgage taxation. Many seem to believe it a problem that Gov. Higgins must solve all by himself.

42d Street Crosstown Line Tied Up.

For an hour yesterday morning only one track of the Forty-second Street crosstown line was used, on account of an accident in front of the Grand Central Station, where the Madison Avenue cars turn into Forty-second Street. The pavement has been removed between the rails at the switch, and a north-bound Madison Avenue car jumped the track, its forward truck falling into the hole. Then the crosstown cars began to run back to the Hudson River on the left track. All the way from the Grand Central Station to the West Shore Ferry pedestrians, unused to this interruption of traffic, were kept busy dodging until the repairs were completed.

AMERICAN TENNIS TEAM PRACTICE AT NORFOLK

Ward, Wright, and Larned Preparing for English Matches.

CLOTHIER MAY GO ABROAD

Difficulty Over Foreign Conditions for Davis Trophy Adjusted, Thus Allowing Boston Man to Compete.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., April 30.—Holcombe Ward, National tennis champion in singles, and Beals C. Wright, who with him in the doubles holds the championship, arrived here to-night with William A. Larned, the former singles champion, to spend ten days or a fortnight on the courts of the Norfolk Country Club practicing preparatory to their trip abroad to compete in the international competition for the Dwight F. Davis tennis trophy. After their stay here they will contest in a number of special invitation tournaments in various parts of the country and sail for England the second week in June. The international play will start on July 8 at the Queen's Club, London, and continue for two weeks, closing at Wimbledon July 21, 22, and 24, when the winners of the challengers' rounds will play the holders, the English team, for the cup.

As yet no announcement has been made of the make-up of the American team to go abroad. All three of the men here refuse to admit that they have been chosen to play. Their presence here following the announcement of the purpose to practice on these courts during the early days of May can be accepted as conclusive that they have been named. It is said at the Country Club that other prominent cracks will be here later, but it is understood that they are coming only for the purpose of working against the challengers, and are not even possibilities on the team. It is thought likely, however, that a fourth man will accompany the others, and that he will be William J. Clothier of Philadelphia. Whether he will play here or not cannot be learned.

The arrival of Wright is taken to mean that the difficulty which is said to have arisen in the negotiations between America and England has been satisfactorily adjusted. An intimate friend of the Boston player said to-night that it might be accepted that Wright would undoubtedly go abroad. His absence from the team would certainly mean that the Americans would be defeated in the doubles, necessitating a victory in three of the four singles in order to carry off the trophy. With him playing, American tennis exponents feel there is a good chance of their winning against the Dohertys, and that the prospects of the team's ultimate success are improved thereby at least 50 per cent.

There is some question here as to the strength of Larned's play in view of his accident last Winter. He appears to feel no great concern regarding his ability to last through the severe strain of a hard competition. The other two men are said to be in excellent condition, and it is felt that with the long practice which they expect to have before they sail for the other side they will be able to do full justice to America in the actual play abroad.

The attention of tennis players throughout the United States will centre in the practice here during the stay of the cracks, and the arrival of each player will cause speculation as to the possibility of his joining the others in their prospective trip.

News of Local Oarsmen.

The appearance on the Harlem River of James B. Juvenal, Vesper Boat Club, Philadelphia, yesterday afternoon, caused considerable interest along the course. He was out in a new shell built by Ward. The outriggers did not suit him and he put into the Nonpareil Boat Club, where he changed them. Constance S. Titus, the ex-champion sculler, who is now a member of the Nonpareil Boat Club, helped him make the alterations and then the two old rivals took a spin down the river. They did not race, but both scullers set up a fast stroke. Juvenal will row in the Vesper Boat Club eight at the Henley regatta this year.

The majority of the clubs sent out their crews in the morning, but the river was well dotted with shells in the afternoon. As the Memorial Day regatta is only a month off, the final selections are being rapidly completed.

Of the clubs that belong to the Harlem River Association the Nassau Boat Club seems to be far and away in the lead as to training plans. The senior eight has already been picked, and the junior eight will be decided upon Wednesday. A junior centre-sea crew composed of Hayward, bow; Weichers, 2; Johnson, 3; Culley, stroke, has been entered. The final selections for the senior eight are as follows: Herbert, bow; Pumphrey, 2; R. H. Stettig, 3; Brasch, 4; Mehrhoff, 5; E. Stettig, 6; Stivers, 7; C. Cool, stroke; Desvernine, coxswain. To all probability the juniors will be Chamun, bow; Koehler, 2; Pfeffmann, 3; Nicoll, 4; Nixon, 5; O'Conner, 6; Thompson, 7; E. Cool, stroke; Desvernine, coxswain. Weichers, who won the Clement Manrich shell recently, will be entered in the junior single race, besides rowing in the junior centipede.

One of the most promising crews that will compete in the intermediate four oar race on Decoration Day comes from the Bohemian Boat Club. It has attracted considerable attention because of its speed and the smoothness with which the men row. The boat is manned by Zatrepalek, bow; Major, 2; Juna, 3; Pisvelc, stroke; Kallins, coxswain. Their other entries will be Villim in the junior single shell race and Vesely in the senior single shell race.

The "Mets" worked hard yesterday. They had out a junior eight, an intermediate four, a junior double, and two four barges. The junior eight has not been picked, but the intermediate four and junior double have been selected. Clements will row stroke in the double and Sulzer will fill the bow seat. Handy, stroke; Bedsite, 2; Corbett, 2, and Dunn, bow, compose the intermediate four.

It is likely that the Union Boat Club will be represented in the junior eight race by Godsell, stroke; McDonald, 7; Scanlon, 6; Nial, 5; A. Hunt, 4; Mountney, 3; Kenney, 2; Ellis, bow, and Briggs, coxswain. This combination has been rowing together for two weeks, and they are going at a fast clip. Besides a number of singles and doubles from this club, a junior centipede took the water in the afternoon.

A big turnout for the annual Harlem River parade May 13, is anticipated by the committee in charge of the arrangements. The parade will start at the Lenox Avenue bridge at 2:30 and go up the river to Sherman's Creek. The following have been selected to take charge of the different divisions: Single scullers, H. W. Jannsen, Nassau Boat Club, and John Nagle, Harlem Rowing Club; double scullers, C. S. Titus, Nonpareil Boat Club, and Frank Vesley, Bohemian Boat Club; four-oared gigs and shells, Edward Anderson, Dauntless Boat Club, and Herman Hjerberg, Union Boat Club; eight-oared barges for ladies, James D. Breen, Wyanoke Boat Club; William Regan, Metropolitan Boat Club, and J. J. O'Grady, Crescent Boat Club. Albert Heyne of the Atlantic Boat Club will look after the Hoboken division and Joseph Ryan of the Seawanhaka Boat Club will take charge of the Long Island division.

Jenkins Has New Wrestling Hold.

Interest in the international wrestling match between Georges Hackenschmidt, the champion Graeco-Roman wrestler of the world, and Tom Jenkins, the American champion, at catch-as-catch-an style, increases as the time for the contest approaches, and the indications are that when the men meet on the mat in Madison Square Garden on Thursday night the attendance will be of a record-breaking character for a wrestling encounter in this country. While the powerful foreigner never has been defeated—his conquests being confined to the Graeco-Roman style—the admirers of the American expert appear to be pretty confident that, with the unusual care he has taken to prepare himself for this match and his unquestioned skill at the style of wrestling which will prevail during the match, his prospects of winning are as favorable as those of the Russian. On the other hand, the supporters of Hackenschmidt contend that he will be anything but a novice at catch-as-catch-can when he meets the Clevelander on Thursday night, but, above all, they look for his great strength to pull him through to victory.

Jenkins, who has the assistance of the "Cuban Wonder," is training in private. Word was received from his quarters at Coney Island yesterday that he had perfected a new hold, which he intends to spring on the Russian. The "Cuban Wonder" says that when the hold is once secured it means a fall.

Sheepshead Bay A. C. Games.

The first games of the Sheepheads Bay Athletic Club were held at the club grounds yesterday afternoon. Three events were run off, and the results showed that there is good material in the vicinity of the club from which to develope track athletes. Leo Loesing, who had never before competed in athletic events, won both the standing broad jump and the twelve-pound shot put. Summary:

75-Yard Dash.—Won by A. H. Loesing; second, Philip Corell; third, T. Powlaski. Time—0:9 4-5.

Standing Broad Jump.—Won by Leo Loesing, with a jump of 9 feet 4 inches; second, A. H. Loesing, with a jump of 8 feet 9½ inches; third, Philip Corell, with a jump of 8 feet 6½ inches.

Putting Twelve-Pound Shot.—Won by Leo Loesing, with a put of 32 feet 6½ inches; second, A. H. Loesing, with a put of 31 feet 6 inches; third, Philip Corell, with a put of 30 feet 6 inches.

METROPOLITAN RACE TO OPEN BELMONT PARK

Rich Stake Will Inaugurate Racing on New Track Thursday.

NOTED HORSES WILL START

Beldame, Delhi, and Ort Wells Regarded as Sure Runners for the $13,000 Prize.

Overshadowing completely the remaining few days of the Jamaica race meeting, the double event of the running of the Metropolitan Handicap and the opening of the new Belmont Park race course on Thursday of this week, combining to make the most important occasion of the year for the turf, are practically monopolizing the attention of racegoers and horsemen. The Metropolitan Handicap, in name at least, though its conditions have been changed from time to time, the oldest of the great Spring events, this season has assumed vastly more importance than any former race for the stakes, and turf lovers just now are greatly interested in the efforts to forecast the field that will run for the big prize in the first mile race over the magnificent new course.

It has been conceded for several weeks that the great filly Beldame, which has been pointed especially for this event, will make her first appearance of the year in August Belmont's colors in the Metropolitan, and until the present time it had been anticipated that Hermis, which beat her in the Test Stakes last year, one of the two races in which she was beaten, also would be a starter. No positive announcement has been made as yet that Beldame will run Thursday, but it is among the things that appear certain that she will. Hermis, by the announcement of E. R. Thomas, his owner, will not be of the Metropolitan field, however.

Declarations earlier in the season removed Irish Lad, Artful, and nine others of the forty-five entries from the possibility of running, leaving thirty-four eligibles, of which Beldame is the most prominent. For the same reason that he decided to reserve Hermis, Mr. Thomas will not start Stalwart, thus taking out of the race one of the great rivals to the filly among the four-year-olds. Of the horses that from the progress of their training are regarded as most likely to start, two of those that come close after Beldame in prominence are James R. Keene's Delhi, and J. A. Drake's Ort Wells, both handicapped at 124 pounds to 122 on Beldame. Lord of the Vale, in the same interest as Beldame, is another horse that has showed sufficiently well in his training to make horsemen believe he will be a starter. One or both of C. E. Rowe's pair, First Mason and Colonial Girl, also may be expected to figure in the Metropolitan field, while Israelite, from the Keene stable, and Tanya, from the establishment of Harry Payne Whitney, are two others that are likely to be named on the card of Belmont Park's opening day. Israelite is engaged in the handicap at Jamaica to-day, when he is to have a public trial for the Metropolitan against a field which includes two other Metropolitan horses, Dolly Spanker and Kehatilan, both of which already have raced before this season.

Of the horses that have been seasoned by racing that are counted in the big event of Thursday, the horsemen agree on Dolly Spanker, Roseben, Ormonde's Right, Jacquin, Little Em, Wotan, Oxford, or Pasadena, from the McLaughlin barn; Santa Catalina, and Bohemia. At present the indications are that the field will number between fifteen and twenty.

With twenty starters the gross value of the stakes will be a little less than $13,000, making the Metropolitan the richest handicap of the early Spring season.

To several events of the meeting trophies in plate will be added, the most valuable of these being the trophy added by August Belmont to the Belmont Stakes, a silver salver, made by Tiffany, oblong in shape, and richly ornamented in gold, the trophy containing 333 ounces of silver and being 32 inches in length and 23¾ inches in width.

McGinnity's Pitching and Fielding Errors Cause Brooklyn's Defeat.

Probably the largest attendance that ever witnessed a baseball game in Brooklyn, at least since organized baseball came into existence, was that of yesterday at Washington Park. It is estimated that twenty-five thousand persons were present, and the magnet that drew this immense gathering was the fourth meeting between the New York champions of the National League and the Brooklyns.

From the time the gates were first opened, shortly after 1 o'clock, until the start of the game, at 3:30 o'clock, there was a steady procession into the grounds from all quarters, and at 2:30 o'clock three-fourths of the seats, grand stand and open, were occupied. Then the crowd became greater at the main, or grand stand, entrances, at Fourth Avenue and Third Street, and long lines of anxious "rooters," with a big sprinkling of women, were formed. Through some cause or other, one of these lines became choked up at the narrow passage where the programmes of admission were sold, and it quickly became a compact and crushing mass of people. Several women were in the thickest of the crowd, and for a time their position looked serious. Finally four or five policemen appeared and stopped the frantic crush.

Many people were unable to gain admission at the main gates, and they sought other entrances. One or two of these became so crowded that the crowd gave a push, swept the programme sellers aside, and rushed into the grounds. All these things had a tendency to soon fill the seats, and then came a great overflow. The clear space in centre field was quickly packed with persons, and with no officers to stop them they gradually forced their way up the field, so that when the gong sounded for play to begin the field was completely surrounded by people. Of course, in such a contingency a rule was made that a ball batted into the crowd counted for but two bases.

While Brooklyn had the largest quota of spectators, New York was largely represented, as was shown when the champions indulged in a good hit or an effective play. Congressman Timothy D. Sullivan received a rousing welcome as he was observed in the grand stand in the second inning.

So far as the conditions under which the game was played were concerned they were no different from any other day. Capt. White of the Bergen Street Police Station, with a posse of officers, was present, but there was not the slightest attempt to interfere with the contest.

The game was quickly played, and the New Yorks won by their superiority at the bat and almost perfect fielding. The Brooklyns, however, gave the champions a little scare in the ninth inning, when they scored two runs with only one out. Batch hit safely to right field for one base, and Owens followed with a hit into the right field crowd for two bases. Lewis popped up a fly for Gilbert, but Dobbs caused the wildest enthusiasm by hitting along the right-field foul line for two bases and sending Batch and Owens across the plate. Babb was easy for McGinnity to strike out, and Gessler, who batted for Bergen, placed a fly to Mertes. Their first run was made in the first inning on Lumley's base on balls, a steal, and Batch's hit for two bases.

Four singles, with two out, aided by a fumble by Dobbs, enabled the New Yorks to score three runs in the second inning. They scored an unearned run in the fourth on Babb's error, a single by McGinnity, and a double by Strang, and a base on balls, Owens's error, and a force hit gave the champions their fifth run in the sixth inning. EASTERN LEAGUE.

Newark Defeats Baltimore by Southerners' Many Errors.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., April 30.—Fully 8,000 spectators witnessed Baltimore's defeat by the Newark Eastern League team at Wiedenmayer's Park here to-day, by the score of 8 to 3. The local team's large score was due to a series of errors on the part of the visitors. O'Connor, the Newark first baseman, scored the first run in the second inning. He reached first on a wild throw from second to first, was advanced on a bad throw from home to second, and scored on Pardee's hit to left field.

Cockman and Murphy scored for Newark in the fifth inning, followed by Kelly's run for Baltimore in the sixth. The latter reached first on a safe hit to centre field and tallied on Jordan's double to the centre field bleachers. Latimer, Cockman, Murphy, Jones, and Gatins each scored for Newark in the seventh inning, and Neal tallied for Baltimore in the eighth. The score:

PROVIDENCE, 8; JERSEY CITY, 2.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 30.—By bunching hits in the first, sixth, and eighth innings Providence handily defeated Jersey City in the first home game of the season at Rocky Point this afternoon, the score being 8 to 2. The locals batted Thielman out of the box in the first inning, scoring four runs, and practically clinching the game. Kelley, who replaced Thielman, was effective except in the sixth and eighth innings. The game was well played by both nines, and Keister's one-handed catch of a drive to deep centre was of the hair-raising order. The score:

Notice to the Public
In the Borough of Queens and Manhattan
Who Will Be Benefited by Rapid Transit Facilities.

It has been the object of Interborough Rapid Transit Company to connect the various boroughs of the city, with the least possible delay and in the most satisfactory, convenient, and practical manner.

To that end it has undertaken to expend eight million dollars ($8,000,000) of its own money in building Manhattan-Brooklyn extension of the Subway. It has recently become interested in the so-called "Steinway Franchise" for a tunnel under the East River connecting Manhattan and Queens at 42d Street.

This franchise was granted to the New York and Long Island Railroad Company by the Board of Aldermen in December, 1890, and by the Common Council of Long Island City in October, 1891. Shortly after work was commenced a disastrous accident occurred, which resulted in its suspension. During the fifteen years which have elapsed, great improvement in tunnel construction has been made, and competent engineers now advise a modification of the original plans so that in the public interest a grade could be adopted which will enable a practical connection to be made with the Manhattan Subway system and the Queens County surface lines.

In order to facilitate these changes, Bills have been introduced and are now pending in the Legislature, which rival interests have indicated as "Grab Bills," seeking thus to give the impression that an effort was being made to procure franchises without the consent of the city authorities and without making compensation. As above stated, the City authorities have given their consent for this tunnel railroad which will serve a great public purpose and has made provisions in the ordinance granting its consent for the payment to the City of a percentage of the gross receipts in compensation for the franchise granted. The original charter line of the company embraced rights which the City authorities have not consented to, and one of the pending Bills would enable them to abandon this unconstructed route; while another Bill authorizes amendments to cure technical omissions and defects.

The passage of all these bills is believed to be in the public interest and peculiarly to the advantage of the property owners above described, whose interest it is to promote the development of transit facilities between the large and neglected Borough of Queens and the more densely populated portions of the city.

For the city at large it will create a new and heavy taxpayer in the New York and Long Island Railroad Company and many new and additional taxpayers in the Borough of Queens, whose growth will be enormously increased by this proposed transit facility.

A Letter from Ex-President Cleveland.

Princeton, Feb. 6, 1905.

IN my judgment a knowledge of history becomes more important with the passing of time; and it seems to me that it never was so important as in these days of stirring events and wondrous change.

Many of us are obliged to confess that for one reason or another we missed opportunities to study history in younger days. However much we may now lament this, we know the only chance we shall have to remedy our embarrassing deficiency must be found in an arrangement of historical facts and epochs, in such a way as to be suited to the engrossing occupations and scant leisure of our later years.

I have never seen a work that so completely answers this purpose as The Historians' History of the World. It is of broader importance than a mere book of reference, and yet no book of reference can be more comprehensive or easier of profitable utilization.

I believe those who have these volumes within their reach are provided with the means of a substantial historical equipment.

(Signed) Grover Cleveland

intending subscribers are urged to register their orders without further delay. Only a few days now remain before the expiration of the period in which subscriptions can be accepted at 43 PER CENT. LESS THAN REGULAR PRICES. On May 15th the present discount will be abolished. Higher prices will then go into effect.

The edition now offered is limited not only as to the date of subscription, but as to the number of copies which can be supplied at the present discount. Indications are that IT WILL BE LARGELY OVER-SUBSCRIBED.

DIRECT FROM PUBLISHER TO BUYER

The Outlook plan of sale of this work has been the most successful innovation the publishing world has known in many years. No agents are employed, and no commissions have to be paid. This method of sale—direct from publisher to buyer—has made it possible to offer the work at almost ONE-HALF of what it would cost if sold in the ordinary way, through the trade with agents' commissions added. The reduction from regular prices, amounting to 43 per cent., has attracted thousands of book-buyers who have been quick to appreciate a bargain and who, by their co-operation, have enabled The Outlook to sell the work, during publication, at this large reduction. Now that the history is finally completed, the discount of 43 per cent. will be withdrawn on May 15, and those who subscribe after that date will be required to pay a higher price.

Note—The complete set of 25 volumes, dealing with world-history for 9,000 years, together with a huge historical Index (Vol. 25) is now ready for delivery for cash in full, or on a preliminary payment of $2.00, and monthly payments of $5.00, or quarterly payments at a slight advance over the cash prices.

THE DIPLOMATIC TRANSFERS.

The recall of Minister BOWEN from Caracas has been accompanied by assurances that remove any appearance of a prejudgment upon the charges against Mr. LOOMIS, originating in Venezuela and filed by Mr. BOWEN with the State Department. He is ordered home to assist in the inquiry into the charges; if his part in the affair shall prove to be blameless he will return to the Diplomatic Service, probably as Minister to Chile.

The transfer of Minister RUSSELL from Bogota to Caracas was certain to suggest itself to the President, and there is much to be said in its favor. In the first place, Mr. RUSSELL will "get on" with President CASTRO much better than Mr. BOWEN was able to do, and it is an elementary principle of diplomatic relations that in order to serve well the interests of his country the Minister must be personally on good terms with the Chief of the State to which he is accredited. Mr. RUSSELL, during his twelve years' service as Secretary of Legation at Caracas, showed himself to be acceptable to CASTRO and his Ministers, and was several times in charge of the legation. It cannot be denied that our relations with Venezuela are a bit strained, nor that Mr. BOWEN, perhaps for reasons that in no way reflect upon his competence, is not the best man to remove existing causes of friction.

The transfer of MR. JOHN BARRETT from Panama to Bogota is an interesting move. If the independence, as well as the belligerency, of the Southern Confederacy had been recognized, and if, say, Great Britain had in the course of time transferred to Washington a Minister who had been popular and successful at Richmond, the case would have been a parallel to the case of Mr. BARRETT. He goes from the capital of the seceded State to represent us at the capital of the parent State. We think any member of what we are beginning to call our Diplomatic Service might feel honored by such a mark of the State Department's confidence in his tact and capacity. For if Mr. BARRETT, after making himself persona grata with the successful "rebels" of the Isthmus State, shall now prove acceptable to the Government of Colombia, a State that has not only seen her richest province sundered from her, but with good reason feels that Mr. BARRETT'S Government did the sundering, he will have achieved a personal and professional triumph of such distinction that in due order and succession other and higher posts would be open to him. He had already served as Minister to Siam and to the Argentine before his appointment to Panama.

GOV. HIGGINS AND THE MORTGAGE TAX.

The statement issued by Mr. EDWARD VAN INGEN as to the suggestion of Gov. HIGGINS relating to the mortgage tax indicates an encouraging condition of the Governor's mind. In substance it is that he would be glad to have sent to him a bill imposing a recording tax of one-half of 1 per cent. on mortgages in full for all taxation.

We do not regard mortgages as a proper subject of taxation in any case, inasmuch as it is necessarily double taxation. It is exactly the same as would be a tax on a note and on the securities pledged as collateral for the note. In either instance the debtor would be forced to pay both taxes. In strict justice he ought not to pay either, because if the property were taken for the debt he would have nothing to pay with. Certainly he ought not to be forced to pay twice. But in the present chaotic condition of our tax system, the payment of a tax on a mortgage at the time it is recorded, with exemption for the future from all other taxation in connection with it, would be an immense gain. As a substitute for the tax of the same amount collected annually, it is of course greatly preferable. It is a saving of four-fifths in the case of a mortgage running five years, which is about the average of shorter mortgages, and in the case of the large number of mortgages which are practically permanent the tax becomes insignificant.

Another fact of importance in the improved bill suggested by the Governor is that the recording tax would undoubtedly be paid. In the case of an annual tax, the payment by the credit into the Treasury is evolved in the interest charge on account of the alleged payment of the tax is extorted from the borrower. Any measure that tends to lessen the chance of such extortion is to be approved. It is to be noted that the Governor says that he would like to have the new bill placed in his hands along with the other, and it is not easy to understand why he should wish both. He should have no hesitation as to which he would sign.

THE CZAR'S GIFT.

Suppose there were in this country a considerable body of people, unusually upright, law-abiding, industrious, contributing to prosperity, loyal to the Government, ready and eager to serve it under arms if necessary, who were, on account of their religious dogmas, forbidden legally to hold property, who were excluded from military schools, who, admitted to the army, could not attain rank or dignity above that of the private, who were forbidden to build schools or religious structures, or to publish or circulate books maintaining their beliefs. That, of course, is an entirely unthinkable state of things so far as this country is concerned. Therefore we cannot readily understand the immense value of the Easter gift made by the Czar of Russia to the Old Believers and other schismatics of his Holy Empire removing precisely these disabilities.

It is needless to say that these barbarous restrictions have not been fully enforced, as is shown by the fact that the Old Believers are reported to be about to make a very large gift to the Russian war chest as an expression of gratitude for the removal of the restrictions. This they would not possess the wealth to do had they been subjected to the full force of the repressive laws now repealed. The very severity of these laws has defeated them in some degree, partly because the officials have not the heart to enforce them, but mostly because they lend themselves to corrupt evasion. The devout sectarian of unorthodox notions in Russia gets his religious and commercial privileges at the "side door," and settles with the "ward man." As an eminent Russian lady, who was particularly exposed to the persecutions of the authorities, once remarked: "If the police system of Russia were pure, life in the empire would be intolerable." Nevertheless, the imperial gift of open abolition of the absurd and oppressive conditions is a decided step toward civilization.

The remission of some $40,000,000 of taxes to the peasants on account of the lands given to them at the time of the emancipation of the serfs is imposing in appearance, but its actual effect on the minds of the peasants is hard to foretell. Probably the Government had pretty well despaired of collecting them, and is making a virtue of necessity in remitting them. This is only the latest of numerous similar remissions, and it is not impossible that many of the peasants will take it only as a tardy concession of what they believe to be their rights. The conviction of the peasants that the land really wholly belongs to them has long been a fertile source of serious discontent in Russia.

WHY NOT?

In his testimony before the Senate Finance Committee Mr. HILAND of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad declared that the effect of abolishing discrimination and preferential rates in freight and compelling the roads to deal fairly with all their customers would naturally be to concentrate trade at the ports that could handle traffic most cheaply and could give the best steamship rates. For a large part of the foreign export trade, especially in grain, this would be to the advantage of New York. But why should it not be? It would also be to the advantage of all other parties in direct interest. Conditions would be reasonably stable, and the capital and industry of the country would adapt themselves to those conditions.

The simple fact is that the superior facilities for commerce in this port are a matter of the geographic situation of the port at the terminus of the shortest and easiest route across the continent and through the natural barriers interposed by the Appalachian Range. It is not a good thing for the trade of the country that this route should in practice be obstructed by arbitrary and excessive freight rates allowed by the Federal Government, which are no more justifiable than would be a barrier across the mouth of the harbor built to reduce our traffic and turn it Southward.

EXTEND THE FORESTS.

The bill which has been introduced in the Assembly by Assemblyman REEVE, Chairman of the Forest, Fish and Game Committee, providing for an issue of bonds to the amount of $250,000 and appropriating $500,000 from the general fund for continuing the acquisition of lands in the Adirondack and Catskill Parks, should receive the prompt and favorable action of the Legislature. The policy of conserving the forests of the State is of cardinal importance and should not be interrupted. The subject is relatively as important to the State of New York as the river and harbor policy of the Federal Government is to the Nation. The saving of the forests stores up rainfall and protects the streams, with all that this implies in the way of navigation, commerce, health, sanitation, and fire protection.

It is estimated by competent authority that at the present ratio of consumption the forests not [illegible] thirteen years. Furthermore, the price of land is advancing yearly, and the longer the acquisition of protected areas is deferred, the greater will be the ultimate cost in dollars to the State. Land which could be bought for $1 or $1.50 an acre ten years ago now costs from $2.50 to $3.75 an acre. Two months ago the State paid as high as $5 an acre for 7,000 acres of forest land in Warren County, and an average of $3.70 an acre for 6,102 acres in Essex County. In Franklin County it bought 5,800 acres at prices ranging from $2 to $3.75. When prices double in ten years, the State is virtually paying 10 per cent. interest on procrastination, while it would have to pay only 4 or 5 per cent. to borrow money to buy now.

The direct appropriations for the purchase of forest lands since Gov. HILL'S administration have been as follows:

Gov. HILL, 1885-1891, 7 years.....	$25,000
Gov. FLOWER, 1892-1894, 3 years...	53,074
Gov. MORTON, 1895-1896, 2 years...	600,000
Gov. BLACK, 1897-1898, 2 years....	1,500,000
Gov. ODELL, 1901-1904, 4 years....	250,000

The check given to this policy during Gov. ODELL'S administration has met with popular condemnation. The boundary line of the Adirondack Park as defined by law embraces an area of about 3,250,000 acres. Of this area, the State now owns about 1,400,000 acres. During the past year many thousands of acres of the balance have been available for purchase by the State at voluntary sales and at reasonable prices. It would seem to be the height of improvidence not to seize these opportunities at once. Forests are not grown like wheat and corn crops, in a season. If the State acquired every acre of forest land to-day and stopped instantly the present denudation; and if it began to-morrow to plant trees on every denuded acre, it could hardly neutralise in thirty years the devastation already wrought.

There are, therefore, two objects which the State should pursue with persistency—the acquisition of forest lands and the propagation of trees on denuded lands. The present Legislature has appropriated $10,000 for the latter purpose—an appropriation entirely above criticism except for its smallness. Let it make a liberal appropriation for land purchases. These appropriations, together with the amendment of forest department law and the correction of unwholesome methods in the administration of the forests will make a record of which Gov. HIGGINS and the Legislature of 1905 may well be proud.

REDUCING THE FIRE HAZARD.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters, composed of the representatives of one hundred and twenty fire insurance companies doing business in the United States, has undertaken through a committee of twenty a work which, if wisely planned and discreetly carried out, promises to be of first importance. This committee has been instructed to organize an engineering department composed of men of high professional standing, and through them to investigate conditions affecting the fire hazard of cities with a view to reducing the danger of general conflagration, especially in congested or heavy-value districts. The Federal Government has designated two engineers of the United States Army to review the reports of each city, it being the desire of the underwriters that its investigations be supervised and criticised by competent men in no way connected with or interested in the business of fire insurance.

The following statement of the actual position of fire insurance in its relation to the economic interests of the community is significant, coming from insurance sources and approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters:

It is a mistaken idea that payment by fire insurance companies makes good the property loss, for property burned is value wiped out of existence, and the insurance companies merely distribute the loss by collecting in small sums premiums from all the property owners and paying in large sums to those who suffer loss by fire. Property burned is money wasted, and the people of the United States are the most wasteful in the world in this direction. Fire losses being the barometer of insurance rates, it is interesting to note that the fire cost per thousand dollars of value of property insured is twelve times greater in the United States than in Great Britain, where high buildings, large areas, poor flues, and shoddy construction are prohibited by law, and it is twenty times greater than in Italy, where the construction is still better and the conflagration hazard practically eliminated.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters disclaims any control over rates of premiums and probably has no function in deciding what classes of business should be accepted and what rejected by the companies. It might, however, find that by proclaiming sound views on these subjects it could exercise a large influence in fire insurance, especially as the example of 120 leading companies would have great influence in shaping the policy of the business and creating a sane public opinion on such subjects. The greatest possible reform in the conditions which now magnify the fire hazard in cities will begin when the reputable companies refuse to be loaded with risks which they cannot afford to take, and to carry which they have to load the premiums on the risks which can be taken on sound business grounds. It is no more true that there is a practicable rate at which any risk may be taken by an insurance company than that there is a practicable rate of discount at which a bank [illegible] the [illegible] risks in which owners and tenants have not co-operated in doing all in their power to reduce the fire hazard, this business would probably go to the companies which look upon insurance as a gamble rather than as a business conducted on a safe actuarial basis, with the result that the losses of a single year would wipe out these wild-cat organizations and leave the business in safe and conservative hands. If bad risks were refused the premium rate on good risks might safely be lowered. At present it better pays the speculative owner to insure than to take precautions against fire, and the man who seeks the highest attainable standards in fireproof construction is, in fact, penalized to make good the losses of those who are indifferent whether their buildings burn or not.

The work undertaken by the National Board of Fire Underwriters through its committee of twenty is undoubtedly good and useful, but it does not touch the root of the evil from which the business suffers at present, and which will not be touched until those who deliberately or recklessly increase the fire hazard of cities find that they cannot buy the protection of insurance at any price.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Presenting a Few of the Facts.

On the torrent of grotesque nonsense that proceeds out of abysmal ignorance, then to divide and form both sides of the curiously popular discussion of "race suicide," there has drifted to us one fragment of sound, solid, hard truth in the shape of some remarks made by a man who knows what he is talking about, and who therefore has as little patience with those who denounce a wholly imaginary and impossible crime as with those who think they have arguments to prove said imaginary and impossible crime not a crime at all, but a demonstration of lofty wisdom, if not an out-and-out virtue. This exceptional contributor to the tiresome debate is the editor of American Medicine, and he calls the attention of preaching Presidents and the resentful representatives of advanced femininity to the decidedly important, though cruelly neglected, fact that nature has its immutable laws, and that one of them is that birth rates decrease with the advance of intelligence, which in man is often called the progress of civilization. As future conditions are now indeterminable, nobody is competent to decide the proper size of the present family, but it is decided, nevertheless—thus: "The population of some centuries hence will be descended from the present families of the fittest size, and it is no more possible for man to change the matter than it is for him to change his complexion. He must be adjusted to his environment or perish. So we need not worry over it in the least—for nature will mind her own business, as she always does." The apprehensions of a manless earth are needless, or at any rate they are useless, and the human race will certainly last as long as it can adapt itself to a changing environment, and certainly it will not last any longer, no matter how much worrying is done over its prospects. "And in the meantime," says American Medicine, "men can console themselves with the thought that, as a rule, the men who have made the world's history have not left descendants, and the few who have left a posterity have probably regretted it ever since. The ancestors of the future great men are now in the great normal healthy class of average men with the proper-sized families. They will keep every part of the world filled with as many men as can find subsistence, just as they always have done. The upper classes tend to disappear, and their small birth rate is of no special significance." The only trouble with this presentation of the case is that it relegates the individual man and the individual nation to an obscurity which neither likes. It is a fact, too, that birth rate is as much a matter of taking thought as is death rate, and surely no doctor will deny to humanity the power to influence death rates.

More About Visits to the Slums.

It was only a queer misunderstanding of the problem presented by "slumming parties" that enabled one of our correspondents to condemn them as likely to produce evil results analogous to the prevalence of beggary in Italy, which he ascribed to the fact that so much "sight-seeing" is done in that country. We have already noted that the slumming party degrades not only those whose depraved or perverted curiosity it gratifies, but also those who are inspired to provide for the visitors spectacles more interesting to them than the ordinary manifestations of vice and poverty. It can hardly be maintained, however, that the mendicancy of Italy is the fault either of the tourists, whose lives while there it makes miserable, or of the multiplicity of places and things legitimately interesting which characterize that country, perhaps above all others. There are too many other and better explanations to permit the support of any such theory. Sights and sight-seers are all right in themselves, and it is morally as well as financially profitable for a country to abound in fine scenery and the monuments and relics of a great and more or less honorable past. We have the scenery, and we are accumulating the monuments probably as fast as they were ever accumulated anywhere. For people to look at them both is highly commendable, and there is no particular objection when a due amount of money is made out of their proper maintenance and display, but it is one thing to put and keep on view the things of which we are proud, and quite another to make a show of things that are shameful or humiliating to us. The only blameless resident of the slum is the involuntary one, and the only visitor who can justify his presence there is the one who honestly hopes and tries, first to improve and then to abolish it.

Authors and Poorhouses.

Commenting on the fact that the compiler of a recent list of authors has found in the United States 8,500 persons who have written at least one book, The Denver Republican says that "these figures must be accepted as authentic, unless the compiler has skipped a poorhouse or two." The jest is good enough, as "gallows humor," but it is a poor thing otherwise, and particularly poor as coming from the West, which claims to be above pessimism and cynicism. And, anyhow, the jest is a product neither of observation nor of invention. It is merely an echo from a past when there was some truth in describing authors as a [illegible]

Delay in Public Works.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The presentment of the Grand Jury protesting against the delay of the city in grading and regulating the Mathattan approaches to the Williamsburg Bridge was well deserved. In fact the Grand Jury could go much further in this respect and bring in indictments against the city officials for the delay that has so long existed in this matter.

The complaints that are being made by the people about the long drawn out delay in improving the approaches to this bridge are applicable to other improvements throughout the city. Some months ago the city determined to lay out a park on the west side between Ninth and Tenth Avenues. If work was promptly commenced on this park the buildings on the property would be removed by this time, but it seems that our officials prefer to delay this work until the warm Summer months are upon us, thereby endangering the health of the people living in the immediate neighborhood of the proposed park and depriving thousands of little children of the only playground they have, namely, the streets bounding the park.

As Britons Eye Our Stage.

From The London Globe.

From what we have seen and heard of the American stage, the art of playwriting is in its infancy in America. Mr. Augustus Thomas is, to our mind, the most skilful of American playwrights, and one light comedy of his, in which a clergyman and a professional pugilist played important parts, reached a very high level; but the rank and file of dramatists in the States have a great deal to learn. One circumstance which greatly impedes the progress of the drama on the other side of the Atlantic is the want of actors who can play ordinary, matter-of-fact characters, who have nothing very vigorous to do, and, indeed, little to do at all except stand still, and look and talk like gentlemen. The American actor excels in the "run" drama. He can wear leather breeches and handle a revolver, but in the more subtle passages of life he is out of his element. Mr. Pinero's "Letty," we hear, suffered severely from the inability of the actors to realize the characters which they were playing. Americans do well in eccentric parts, but they lack repose.

Repeating History?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Without pretending to be a prophet, I may venture to guess that Admiral Togo may be thinking of repeating history after the model of the destruction of the Spanish Armada. From all accounts his fleet exceeds in speed and in homogeneity. This gives him the practical advantage of the "weather gage" of the old sailing days. If, instead of meeting the Russians in offensive or defensive line for a hammer-and-tongs fight he were to let them slip by and then pound their rear and flanks, he would be following the tactics of Howard, Drake, &c., who made things so uncomfortable for the Spaniards.

The Russians could not get away, nor could they spare time to harry the coasts of Japan, and with probable storms, fogs, and being in unfamiliar waters, the scattering of the Baltic squadron, with its vessels of so many types, might reasonably be hoped for by the Japanese.

The Ways of Legislators.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will it not be peculiar if the present Legislature refuses to allow the City of New York to use fully the Ulster County water for which it will pay full value when the last Legislature passed a bill (which the Governor vetoed) to give the Niagara corporation practically free and unlimited water privileges, and when the present Legislature will do likewise if it has the courage to defy public sentiment?

In the matter of our Aldermen, I have no doubt of the complete desirability of restricting their powers over franchises. And why should not our next State constitutional convention, which should be held in nine years more, bring about such restricting of the powers liable to abuse in the Legislature, by means of requiring a referendum in certain classes of franchises and in other matters besides those in which a referendum is now required?

Driven Out by Automobiles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just now read "Old Timeser's" letter in this morning's TIMES under the heading, "Lucky Garage Proprietor." In West Sixtieth Street, between Broadway and Columbus Avenue, there are not less than three automobile stables whose proprietors are equally lucky and privileged from police interference. They are monopolizing the whole street and using it as a repair shop, trial course, and airing place for their ill-smelling engines. Drivers rush their machines constantly up and down the street at a very dangerous rate of speed. To no other mechanics, traders, or drivers is such a monopoly given. Many house owners and tenants are being driven away from this street. The remaining ones wonder if there is no help.

Duel by Avalanche.

From The London Express.

GENEVA, April 16.—Two young Italians, named Guetta and Sorato, both in their teens, and living in a little village near Bellinzona, fell in love with the same girl, who is said to have liked both suitors equally well.

The young men, after many serious quarrels, decided on a very original plan to settle the dispute. Informing their parents that they were going on an excursion to the mountains, they set out for the Splugen Pass, which is notorious for its avalanches at this time of year.

Choosing the most exposed slope, they agreed that each should stand for two hours every day (between 9 and 11 A. M., the most dangerous time) in the path of the avalanche and allow fate to decide their destiny.

For three morning these conditions were carried out, but nothing serious happened, though several avalanches came down the slope, but not near the foolhardy youths.

On the fourth day an enormous avalanche passed near Guetta, who was knocked down by the rush of air, but not hurt.

As the young men had no more food left, they returned to the village to procure some, but the authorities got wind of the affair, and threatened them with imprisonment. The youths then decided to draw lots for the girl, and Sorato won. Guetta left the village and the young couple were married yesterday.

A Little Too Much.

From Harper's Weekly.

Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota has long been the owner of a country newspaper. Of late years other duties have prevented his giving it much attention, and he has depended on divers itinerant journalists.

"I've had some good men in the place, too," the Senator once observed to a friend; "men capable of holding an important place on a city daily. Then I have had some who did not altogether make good. I remember one in particular, a man named Liskwood. Liskwood was never satisfied with simplicity. He would refer to an 'equine horse,' and in the case of a tramp killed in a railroad accident said that the 'unfortunate man sustained a fracture of the spiral column.' Another of his pet expressions was 'tripping the light bombastic toe.'"

"You probably didn't keep him long," suggested the friend.

"Oh, I didn't mind these so much. But when the daughter of a leading citizen was married [illegible]

Is the Claim of Infallibility Without Foundation in the Scriptures?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In two letters in these columns "E. C." has set forth the claim that there can be no real revival of religion which does not first revive faith in the Bible as the infallible Word of God. I can but wish that "E. C." and your other correspondent, "A." would secure and read two sermons in a volume by Dr. Jefferson of the Broadway Tabernacle, entitled "Things Fundamental on the Old and New Conceptions of the Scriptures."

Within the limits of this letter the only reply I can make to the claim of infallibility is that it is absolutely without foundation in the Bible itself, while the differing and contradictory accounts of the same event, which are placed side by side as if to invite our attention to their discrepancies, seem to warn us against any such assumption.

A single text is offered in support of this claim—"All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable," &c. Is it conceivable that the inspired penman should have been allowed to write profitable in this place when the correct word is "infallible"?

But, as a proof text this passage falls to pieces. We all know that the revised version changed this sentence to read, "Every scripture inspired of God is also profitable," thereby restoring the translation as made by Wyclif and Coverdale and the Great Bible, which is also the rendering given by Luther. So, then, we have the right to say that wherever we find any writing which is inspired of God it is profitable for instruction in righteousness.

May I suggest to "E. C." that there is one thing infinitely more sacred than the Bible, and that is truth. Dr. Francis Brown has said: "To refuse to follow the truth, wherever the truth leads, is treason to God."

Lincoln Hospital and the Slocum Victims.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES gives a splendid account of the exercises incident to the presentation of diplomas to the nurses on North Brother Island for their splendid service and humane work at the time of the terrible Slocum disaster. It is not generally known, perhaps, that the nurses at the Lincoln Hospital, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Southern Boulevard, also did a large measure of service. The Lincoln Hospital, which is under the splendid medical and surgical supervision of such men as Dr. Benjamin R. Tilton, Dr. Carlton Flint, and Dr. Morton, together with their efficient corps of colored nurses, cared for more than 500 of the sick and dying.

It cannot be, because this is the only hospital in the city where colored girls are taught to become trained nurses, or because there are colored nurses at the Lincoln Hospital, that the services of this hospital should be overlooked.

Womanly Woman Needs No Protection

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The womanly woman needs no help to save her from having the ballot foisted upon her, either from Mr. McCarren or Mr. Grady. The womanly woman, either young or old, homely or handsome, married or single, is always able to take care of herself. She is simply an intelligent woman who needs no outside interference. Let our supposedly intelligent lawmakers look after the unmanly man. They will be kept busy. The womanly woman has been and always will be able to take care of herself.

Science and the Soul.

From The London Telegraph.

BERLIN, April 16.—Quite a sensation has been created in Berlin by the delivery of two lectures by Prof. Ernst Haeckel of Jena, for the purpose of exposing the latest developments of the Darwinian theory. In his first lecture, on Friday evening, Prof. Haeckel said it was only on the pressure of his friends that he had decided to speak in Berlin, and had chosen the present occasion because an interesting epoch had occurred in the history of the science to which he has devoted his life's work. The Jesuit Father Wasmann of Luxembourg, who has applied many years to a profound study of ants, has felt himself compelled to confess that all his observations are only explicable by Darwinism. In the work in which Dr. Wasmann makes this admission he says that man is an exception, having nothing to do with evolution because he has a spiritual soul. He would not deny that man may have developed from other animals, but he must from the beginning have contained the spirit of God. Thus is repeated what has often been experienced—the Church enters into a compromise now with Darwin, as it did with Copernicus. In Prof. Haeckel's opinion the next step must be a revolution in teaching. He then fulminated against the Roman Catholic Church and against the Papacy, which latter he described as the "greatest swindle that ever dominated the world of thought." In his second lecture this evening Prof. Haeckel gave a brief résumé of the progress made by the Darwinian theory, leading up to a statement regarding the latest results of research into the possibility of the existence of an immortal soul. The development of our soul, the "summa of our mental ability," can, he said, be traced by evolution, just as that of the body can, adding that men will be better, nobler, and more intelligent beings when they abjure old myths.

Fishermen's Patron Saint.

From The London Chronicle.

St. Peter, of course, is the Fisherman; but anglers may find a saint of their own in St. Zeno, who is commemorated on April 12. Verona's patron saint is conventionally represented holding a fishing rod, with a fish at the end of the line; the reference being to the tradition that he used to enjoy fishing in the Adige during his episcopate. He must have commanded good sport if he exercised as much control over that river in life as he is said to have done two centuries after his death. In 589 Italy was visited by terrific floods, and the Adige threatened to swamp much of Verona. But the faithful gathered in St. Zeno's Church by the river, and though the water rose to the windows outside, none of it could pass the doors, and after twenty-four hours of prayer it subsided. This rests on the authority of Gregory the Great.

Deceased Wife's Sister Muddles.

From The London Chronicle.

Our refusal to recognize marriage with a deceased wife's sister—which is legal in the Australian Commonwealth—has led to many complications in the inheritance of property. And very embarrassing social incidents have happened. One of the most unpleasant occurred during the reign of the late Queen. Arrangements had been made by the Colonial Office for the presentation of an Australian Cabinet Minister and his wife at Court, but when it was found that the lady was a deceased wife's sister the proposed presentation was promptly overruled. Such an episode is not likely to be repeated, for King Edward, when Prince of Wales, voted in the House of Lords for the legalisation of marriage with a deceased wife's sister.

ART IS A MATTER OF TASTE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An article in your issue of the 23d calls attention to the current exhibition of the Society of American Artists, and comments upon the unfortunately customary lack of sales. The artists exhibiting at the Society exhibition are presumably inured to this condition, and year after year in increasing merit and numbers produce works which are in every way worthy of the attention of and purchase by our collectors not only for the present enjoyment and instruction to be derived from them, but also as an investment which in the future would prove profitable.

Here is, for instance, an exhibition which on the whole is the best of the annually improving shows made by the Society, for it can hardly be disputed that our men have advanced in their art steadily throughout the quarter of a century that this Society has without fear or favor asked only of its contributors—members and outsiders alike—that their work should be worthy, and during all that period its jury of thirty men chosen for their discriminative ability, respected for their own professional achievements, and many of them not without honor in their own country, while virtually all have achieved artistic position in the more generous countries of the older world, have found it worth their while to enforce (and in their own cases not infrequently to suffer from) the Spartan rule that exempts no work offered from judgment on its merits.

This in any profession but art would suffice to accredit the merit of the offering and undoubtedly in law or medicine a like professional indorsement would be accepted by the laity as conclusive. But for some mysterious reason the amateur of art who lends a willing ear to the dulcet tones of the dealer "fights shy" of the counsel of the artist.

One instance noted by the writer in your columns yesterday is so convincing that even our heedless picture buyers might, it would seem, take notice. A work by a young artist exhibiting here, it is believed for the first time, has been purchased upon its merits as a work of art by a fellow-painter for the respectable sum of $1,000. Would the average picture collector dare to do as much, or would he consider that Mr. William M. Chase, who, aside from his well-earned reputation as a painter is known as a most astute and appreciative collector, is making a mistake in buying a work by one whose future position as a "safe" man from the amateurs' point of view is yet to be made, upon the intrinsic merit shown—in this case most clearly—by the work itself. A second instance, applying likewise to a first picture by a comparatively unknown man, is the purchase upon the recommendation of the jury of artists of Mr. Hugo Ballin's "Pastoral"; this time, as an exception to prove the rule, by a collector wise enough to know that the painter esteemed by his fellows is beyond doubt "safe."

The collection made in this manner by Mr. Samuel T. Shaw, aided by the suffrages of the jury of the Society for the past fifteen years is, in fact, of extraordinary merit artistically, and, though the works have been virtually chosen by painters, the bias of choice has not been upon technical grounds alone, but all the works have the other elements of interest which go to make the complete work of art. Since the ultimate fate of all collections appears to bring them sooner or later to the auction mart, it may be that at some future time the prophecy will be fulfilled that this particular collection would, if sold, prove to have been an even more profitable investment than the two collections of note composed of American pictures, those of Mr. T. B. Clark and Mr. W. T. Evans, which have already proved that the work of our painters is a "safe investment."

Of pictures to live with, with the comforting assurance that with the lapse of time their value will increase, the present exhibition contains several score and less than a dozen have found purchasers; a scathing criticism in itself upon the intelligence of our public, and one which, it is hoped, may be somewhat modified by the record of the closing days of the exhibition.

From The Pall Mall Gazette.

The late Joseph Jefferson was a virtuoso of note. While here in the seventies, delighting London audiences with his great impersonation in "Rip Van Winkle," he was a daily visitor to curiosity shops, and bought whatever took his fancy. At the time, it was remarked that Mr. Jefferson was up to all the tricks of the curio trade, and could not be induced to purchase an article that was anything but genuine. To a sharp practitioner of a dealer he would smilingly remark: "You'd better show that to another collector from America!"

A swan about which a curious story is told in Cumberland has just returned for its Summer visit to Moorhouse Tarn.

As a sort of a prelude to a week in which the work of the great Norwegian dramatist will be to the fore, the Progressive Stage Society last evening produced "The Master Builder" at the Murray Hill Theatre before an audience that apparently looked upon Ibsen at 50 cents a head as a great bargain and manifested its very obvious enjoyment in much applause. The play has been seen here at infrequent intervals, an especially interesting production of it having been made at the Carnegie Lyceum some years ago, on which occasion John Blair was seen in the rôle of Halvard Solness, the Master Builder, played last night by J. H. Greene.

Further local interest in the work obtains in the fact that Tyrone Power promises to appear in an act therefrom at the Mrs. Gilbert Monument benefit next week. The present cast will play at the Berkeley Lyceum again on Tuesday, and on the same night Ethel Barrymore is to reveal herself as Nora at the Hudson. Thus the little game of progressive Ibsen moves steadily, if not merrily, along.

It is a peculiar fact that however one views these Ibsen dramas, their production in the theatre, even under conditions far from competent, provides occasion for a fascinated, if at times merely transitory, interest. So it was with "The Master Builder" last night. Familiarity with the printed work in no wise seems to lessen the desire that is created almost on the instant the curtain rises to watch the development of the story and characters as exploited through the varying means of the histrionic protagonists.

In "The Master Builder," published in 1892, Ibsen again reverted to his symbolical manner—indeed, of all his plays none is much more baffling to the ordinary understanding than is this. Like all of his plays of modern life, it starts at a point which would be the closing one of the ordinary piece in the theatre. Some one has said that all of Ibsen's later plays are really nothing more than so many grand final catastrophes. And the description undoubtedly fits the one under consideration. But, unlike some of the others, the situation to be illumined here is by no means clearly defined at the outset, nor does the end leave one any too well informed. We realize, in a general way, of course, that Halvard Solnes is only another study of a morbid mentality, which stands in the shadowy limbo between sanity and insanity, but the exact nature of his morbidity is difficult to determine, although it is indicated lucidly enough that he is a man who, having succeeded in life through the downfall of another, is forever haunted by the thought that his own supremacy will at length succumb to the competition of other men younger than himself.

And it is not going too far, we think, to suppose that the inspiration of his former and higher labors which comes through Hilda Wangel is merely a symbolic suggesting of the idea that age and experience to be of lasting value in the struggle for supremacy must be continually renewing itself at the living fount of new and youthful ideals.

If one views the play in an unimaginative spirit, the Master Builder's indifference to his wife, and his quickly succeeding attachment to Hilda Wangel, almost immediately following the revelation of his relations to Kaia Fosli, suggest a triangle of more dubious potentiality than even those of salacious French farce. And it is a knowledge of the existence in every audience of such a large share of unimaginative spectators that lends weight in some minds to the frequently repeated protests against too much Ibsen in the theatres. For our own part we are inclined to agree with the view of an actress quoted in an interview yesterday who insisted that the theatre was not a place primarily intended as a resort for young girls. But unfortunately the strength of this position is somewhat minimized by the fact that a juvenile mentality is not infrequently an accompaniment of what by all rights should be the years of soberness and discrimination.

Of the acting in the present production the best that can be said is that the women were generally more satisfying than the men, although there was no especial evidence of fitness for the tasks on the part of any of those engaged.

PEOPLE'S SINGING CLASSES.

The People's Singing Classes are the preparatory grades from which the members of the People's Choral Union are drawn. They are organized in various divisions in various parts of town, where they carry on the preliminary training that initiates their members into the art of sight reading and choral singing, and takes them well along on the road to confidence and skill. How far it takes them was shown last evening when the singing classes gave a public concert in Carnegie Hall. The programme included a number of part songs, besides orchestral selections, in the first part; the second was devoted to Mendelssohn's setting of Racine's "Athalie."

The chorus sings with vigor and confidence, with an eager attack and sonorous style that have so delighted those who have heard the People's Choral Union. These singers make their effects with such qualities rather than with beauty of tone and nicety of shading. The conductor is Mr. Edward G. Marquard. The solo parts of "Athalie" were intrusted to Mrs. Dutton, Miss Boese, Miss Fiske, and Mr. Granville; Mr. Brigham read the connecting text. There was a large audience that showed deep interest in the work of this admirable organization, and it is work in many ways among the most remarkable of all the musical activities of the city.

HERBERT'S FINAL CONCERT.

Success of the Sunday Series Brings Promise of Another in the Fall.

At the end last night of the series of concerts which Victor Herbert and his orchestra have been giving at the Majestic Theatre the orchestra rose and played "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot," and the big audience joined in singing the old song with a vim. Thereafter Mr. Herbert was recalled again and again, but he declined to answer repeated demands for a speech. He announced through his manager, Mr. Clayton, however, that another series of concerts would be given beginning early in the Autumn.

Miss May Naudain was again the soloist of the evening, and repeated the success she had made earlier in the season. She gave a splendid rendition of Tosti's "Ser-

OGDEN PARTY RESTS.

Its Injured Members at Fort Monroe Recovering from Their Hurts.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 30.—Robert Ogden arrived here with his special train this evening in time for the members of the party to go over to Hampton Institute for the Sunday evening singing by the Indian and negro students of the old plantation melodies that are really hymns.

After the accident yesterday at Greenville, S. C., Mr. Ogden first decided to return directly to New York. His guests were nervous and anxious to get home. As the day wore along, however, and it was announced from the Earle Sanitarium that Prof. and Mrs. Farnum of Yale University were in no danger and that they would speedily recover from their injuries, and that St. Clair McKelway, R. M. Ogden, Mrs. Thorp and Dr. Drener could travel with safety, Mr. Ogden decided to go on to Richmond, where those who wished to could continue North and those who still wanted to go to Fortress Monroe and Hampton Institute could do so.

Mr. Ogden gave orders that the train must not run over twenty-five miles an hour during the night, and as a result his guests were rid of their nervousness by breakfast time, and with the exception of those who had previously planned to stop off at Richmond the entire party went on to Fortress Monroe. Those who had been hurt were stiff and sore, but able to get about.

When the party woke up this morning they found the view from the end of the observation car obstructed by an additional Pullman car. As every detail of Mr. Ogden's trips is always perfect—except when railroad men shift freight trains on the main track where his special is speeding—there was some surprise. Inquiry by an inquisitive guest brought the following reply from a porter:

"Massa Ogden done practice what he preach. 'Bout ten of de waiters and cooks was some hurted. Massa Ogden he done hire dat car for dem wounded servants so's dey could sleep in berths and rest theyselves an' get well. May be a coon car, but was hired by a gen'leman."

The car was switched off at Richmond, where the men were cared for by the Pullman Company. None was much hurt and all were happy in their share of the large purse raised for them by Mr. Ogden's guests.

There was a three hour stay at Richmond, where Mr. Ogden's guests were driven around the city and called at the Executive Mansion to pay their respects to Gov. Montague, who had been one of the party on the wrecked train. The Governor, who was suffering from an abscess in the ear, was unable to receive them, but through Mrs. Montague expressed his appreciation of their call.

The members of the party presented a rather unusual appearance when they reached the Hotel Chamberlain at Old Point Comfort. The regular guests wore evening clothes, while most of the excursionists were in traveling costume. Everything else they had brought with them had been burned in the baggage car. There was some baggage, but it was in broken trunks and bags soiled by water.

H. W. Colson, assistant chief law agent of the Southern Railroad, who accompanied the Ogden party from Spartanburg to Richmond, said concerning yesterday's accident, that the engineer of the special train had often run over the branch through Greenfield, that his record was perfect, and that he had been exonerated from all blame.

GREENVILLE, S. C., April 30.—Prof. Farnam of Yale University and Mrs. Farnam, who were injured in the wreck of the Ogden special yesterday morning, are both resting easily in a sanitarium here. It has not been decided when they will be able to travel, but the attending physicians say not before Tuesday. Electrician Kershaw, also injured in the wreck, is doing well.

Assistant General Superintendent H. Burke and Division Superintendent McManus of the Southern Railway are here, and an investigation of the cause of the accident is being held behind locked doors.

DROWNED WITH HIS WHEEL.

Rider Entangled in Bicycle When He Fell in Shallow Water.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., April 30.—The body of Charles Johnson, the hands clutching the handles of a bicycle, was found to-day in Tameacha Pond, which is only four feet deep at the place where the discovery was made.

Johnson's feet were entangled in the wheels of his machine, and it is conjectured that while riding at a rapid rate along the road bordering the pond his wheel slipped down the embankment, and he was drowned before he could free himself.

DOUGLAS ROBINSON BACK.

Nephew of the President on the Campania—Other Arrivals.

Among the arrivals on the Cunard liner Campania yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. T. Douglas Robinson, the former a nephew of the President, Lieut. Col. H. A. Yorke, of the Royal Engineers, and Col. Sir Charles B. and Lady Evan-Smith.

On the American liner St. Paul, also in yesterday, were Lieut. Col. C. H. Cowie of the Northwestern Railway of India; Gen. d'Almeida d'Eca of the Portuguese Railway; N. Siderides, of the Greek Railway, and several other foreign railway officials who came to attend the International Railway Congress in Washington.

REGRETS REVOLUTIONARY WAR

Better Were England and America One, Says Preacher.

The St. George's Society celebrated St. George's Day with services in the Church of St. John the Evangelist at Waverley Place and West Eleventh Street last night. The Rev. Walter E. Bentley delivered a sermon on "The Unity of the Anglo-Saxon Race." The chancel, pulpit, and galleries of the church were draped with the Stars and Stripes, the Union Jack, and the flag of St. George.

"However proud England may be of her victories," said the Rev. Mr. Bentley, "or however proud America may be of her victories, yet I cannot look back to the War of the Revolution without pain, for if we had remained one how much it would have been for civilization.

"Becoming lately the two countries are far apart, but things are gradually forming themselves to bring us together again, so that we may now ask the question, 'Why should not John Bull's garden become one with Brother Jonathan's orchard?'

"What a lot we have to learn from one another. Take the home life, for instance. I know that there are few Englishmen who know how to treat their wives. On the other hand, there are few American women who know how to treat their husbands. If we could only get on a minimum ground we would have less of the divorce courts."

THINKS CHILD KIDNAPPED.

Daughter of Head of Staten Island S. P. C. A. Missing.

Edna Anderson, nine years old, left the home of her father, on Pleasant Valley Avenue, Concord, S. I., at 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and up to last night had not returned nor had any trace been obtained of her. Her father asked the police last night to send out an alarm for her. He believes that she was stolen or enticed from home. The father is Gilbert Anderson, head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in

MARIE CAHILL LEAVES LEW FIELDS COMPANY

Victor Herbert Made Her Do It, She Says.

TROUBLES WITH ORCHESTRA

Would Purposely Run Away from Her, She Says, and She Just Won't Stand It Any Longer.

Marie Cahill is no longer with the Lew Fields forces, and to effect the parting she broke a contract which at the time of its signing was the talk of Broadway by reason of its liberality. The company went to Boston without her last night and she will not appear with it again. The storm broke at Saturday evening's performance, when, after asking the audience to excuse her, she walked off the stage. When she came in she told Mr. Fields that she intended to quit, as she was unwilling to continue to sing with an orchestra controlled by Victor Herbert. She left the stage at that time to be recalled by applause.

"You are very kind," she said to the audience. "I will try to sing without the orchestra, it is so intentionally bad." As she began to sing some of the musicians hissed, but there were cries of "Shame!" from the house, and she completed her song. Then there were calls of "Speech."

"I do not wish to inflict my personal troubles upon an audience," she said. "I would like to please you, but it is hopeless for me to continue under the conditions which have been forced upon me."

The incident was the culmination, so Miss Cahill said last night, of continued unfairness on the part of Mr. Herbert.

"Under my contract," she said, "I had the right to interpolate songs if I so chose, and Mr. Herbert from the first made things as unpleasant for me as he could. When my songs were reached he would resign his baton to Max Hirschfeld, the regular house leader.

"When Mr. Hirschfeld became ill Mr. Herbert picked musicians seemingly at random to lead while I was singing the interpolated songs. During the last week I was forced to face four different leaders in as many days. I naturally feared that my songs would be spoiled at Boston, and Mr. Fields agreed to supply a leader. Mr. Herbert refused the man a place in his orchestra.

"The finish came last night when I was attempting to sing 'Any Old Tree.' The orchestra ran ahead or me and then behind. I did the best I could. The fact that I have broken my contract at a cost of $12,000 is the best evidence of how serious the situation was. Mr. Fields and I, however, have always been on the most friendly terms."

Mr. Herbert, after his concert last night at the Majestic Theatre, took the train for Boston. He declined to discuss the case of Miss Cahill further than to say that he understood that she had left the company. Mr. Fields was not more talkative.

SIR GEORGE WILLIAMS ILL.

Founder of Y. M. C. A. Unable to Attend Jubilee Festival in Paris.

PARIS, April 30.—There was an immense audience at the Trocadero this afternoon when the jubilee festival of the World's Alliance of the Young Men's Christian Associations was celebrated under the Presidency of Dr. Charles Monod of the Academy of Medicine.

Sir George Williams, who founded the first Young Men's Christian Association sixty-one years ago, was unable to attend owing to illness.

He forwarded a message recalling with delight the work which has been accomplished since the beginning of the association in building up a strong type of Christian manhood.

CHURCHES AFTER PEANUT MEN

Who Get Children's Pennies Before They Reach Sunday School.

BAYONNE, April 30.—The police of Bayonne began a crusade to-day, which resulted in an increase in the receipts of the various Sunday schools. For some time it has been noticed that there was a falling off in the contributions of the children. The matter was discussed among ministers and teachers and an investigation was started.

It was soon discovered that several peanut vendors had regular routes laid out so as to catch children on their way to the churches. The variation in the hours allowed one man to catch the children of from two to four churches. When the children reached Sunday school they had peanuts but no pennies. Chief of Police Magner was consulted and to-day the vendors were warned away.

POLICEMAN'S AMBITION FADES

Too Easy, Says Worn-Out Probationer —Gives Up Career.

Just two days' experience as a New York policeman was enough for Probationary Patrolman John W. Hayes of the Hamilton Avenue Station. Hayes was made a member of the force on Friday, and was assigned to duty in the Hamilton Avenue district. He had long been ambitious to be a policeman, and was elated when he donned a uniform and started out on patrol duty.

Two nights of it on the dark and dreary Red Hook water front, in the rain, fog, and wind, caused Hayes's enthusiasm for a police career to wilt and die. Yesterday he walked into the station house, placed his shield on the desk, and said to the Sergeant:

"I'm done. I quit being a policeman right now."

"What's the matter?" asked the astonished Sergeant.

"Oh, I don't like the work; it's too easy," returned Hayes.

MADE TOURNIQUET OF BRIDLE.

Policeman's First Aid Knowledge Saved Man Injured by Horse.

His skill in first aid to the injured treatment enabled Mounted Policeman Keresey of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second Street Station to save Thomas Byron, a Columbia law student, from bleeding to death last evening. Byron, who was out horseback riding, was thrown under the hoofs of his horse, and received a fracture of his right leg and an ugly gash in the groin, from which Dr. Norton of the J. Hood Wright Memorial Hospital said he would have died within fifteen minutes had it not been for the treatment the policeman gave him.

Byron was riding up Seventh avenue about dusk when a friend hailed him. He dismounted and spent some time in conversation. When he tried to mount again he missed the stirrup. The horse took fright at something and dashed up the avenue, dragging Byron, who was caught in the bridle. At the corner of One Hundred and Twentieth Street the horse ran into a cab. Byron was thrown under the horse and the animal stepped on

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

The Situation Unchanged—Demand for Cotton Cloth Continues.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, April 30.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"The general commercial and industrial situation may be regarded as practically unchanged.

"The recent cold weather does not appear to have impaired agricultural conditions to any extent. Business in the grain markets continues restricted, and, with the exception of oats, which are dearer, the tendency has been downward.

"The cotton trade has become slightly more active in the raw material in the last day or two, and prices are hardening. In yarns business has been quieter and in cloth the situation continues extremely satisfactory. The demand is well maintained and prices are good, but in many cases orders have to be refused because early delivery cannot be arranged.

"Fine wools show an improving tendency. Low and medium grade woolens continue in the best request, but there are indications that fine worsteds are growing in favor. The orders expected from Japan have not yet come.

"Speculative operations still govern the pig iron market and embarrass consumers by forcing up prices. A new high record for the year was made in the past week. In finished products the situation is without material change."

NEW EAST SIDE SETTLEMENT.

Institution to be Located in Densely Populated Third Street.

An institution on the Settlement plan soon will be added to the number of those already existing on the east side. This will be molded somewhat on the lines of the Educational Alliance, though on a smaller scale. It will be situated at 311 Third Street, in a densely populated section, where it will be the pioneer institution of its kind.

Civil Justice Benjamin Hoffman has been at the head of the movement inaugurated by residents of the neighborhood for the purpose of raising the necessary funds. On Saturday a lease was obtained on the Third Street property for three years. The house will be remodeled and probably will open its doors some time this month.

The educational feature will be emphasized. There will be day classes for the younger boys and night classes for those old enough to be at work during the day. In addition to this, there will be a gymnasium and all facilities for boys' club work.

Among those interested in the Settlement are Justice Gliegerich, Judge Newburger, Rabbi Philip Klein and Rabbi Michaelson of the Columbia Street Synagogue, Borough President Ahearn, Moses Zimmerman, and Samuel Guggenheim.

WILL APPEAL TO MAYOR.

Labor Men Say Eight-Hour Rule is Broken at Reservoir.

The Central Federated Union appointed a committee of three yesterday to inform Mayor McClellan that the eight-hour workday rule is being violated at the Jerome Park Reservoir, where there is a general strike. Ex-Assemblyman Samuel Prince said:

"The eight-hour law was not in force when work on the reservoir was started, he said, "and Mr. McDonald, when I saw him about the eight-hour law, had passed, said that he had not undertaken the contract on the eight-hour basis. It was arranged that I would get a bill introduced to enable him to comply with the eight-hour law. I had the bill introduced, providing $600,000 for the purpose, and the money was paid."

Delegate Holland of the Eccentric Firemen's Union said that some of the striking motormen of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company were working in place of striking engineers at the reservoir. He asked them why they were working after they had struck themselves, and they told him that they had been fooled into striking against the Interborough Company.

Products that are a local success would be a national success.

It would be interesting to know how many manufacturers there are in this country whose goods meet a ready local sale, but who lack the courage to advertise them nationally.

Such men say their goods sell well at home because people know how good they are, but that they fear to embark upon a national campaign.

Human nature and human likes and dislikes are the same in all parts of the country. Goods that please people in Maine will please people in California. The way to make their merits known is to advertise them. Tell people all over the country what the home people know — that your goods are desirable and superior—and tell them why. Then you will have a chance to grow. You will not have to depend on the limited local market.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST is a national magazine of the highest grade. It covers the country thoroughly. It goes regularly into 800,000 homes and is read by 4,000,000 people. Why not secure your share of the trade of this army of intelligent, desirable people? You can get it if you ask for it in the right way.

JOSEPH JEFFERSON IS BURIED AT SANDWICH

Distinguished Assembly Honors His Memory in This City.

FAMOUS CHURCH CROWDED

"Little Church Around the Corner" Filled to Overflowing—Crowd Besieges Doors.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., April 30.—Following services that were impressive in their simplicity, the body of Joseph Jefferson was laid away to-day at the Bayview Cemetery, Sandwich. Mr. Jefferson's five sons, a score of intimate friends, and a hundred or more villagers gathered about the open grave while the commitment service was read. To-night a police officer remained at the grave, and this guard will be continued for several days.

At 11 o'clock this morning a brief service was held at Crow's Nest, the Jefferson Summer cottage here. Only immediate relatives and intimate friends were present. Ex-President Cleveland was unable to attend.

There were no honorary pall bearers, the acting pall bearers being Glen MacDonough and Charles J. Rolf, who married granddaughters of Mr. Jefferson; Samuel Phelleps, Mr. Jefferson's former stage manager; Carl Kettler, his personal attendant; Richard Watson Gilder, Edward Black, Dr. George Barry, and J. A. Walker.

While the procession was on its way to the cemetery a public memorial meeting was held in the Sandwich Town Hall, at which all the clergymen of the town participated. A eulogy was pronounced by the Rev. O. L. Griswold, pastor of the Methodist Church.

To the memorial services in honor of Joseph Jefferson at the Church of the Transfiguration, better known as the "Little Church Around the Corner," yesterday afternoon went nearly every well-known actor and actress in New York. The tiny church, so dear to the hearts of player folk, was packed to the doors, and a hundred or two people stood outside in the yard and in Twenty-ninth Street. The ushers were David Warfield, Harry Woodruff, Vincent Serrano, Joseph Kilgour, John Malone, Henry Benrimo, and Wright Kramer.

The services, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Houghton, were held under the auspices of The Players, of which Joseph Jefferson was one of the founders. Mrs. Edwin Booth Grossman, daughter of Edwin Booth, was present with her husband, Ignatius Grossman, and her daughter, Miss Grossman. Also there were Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Edmund Clarence Stedman, Daniel Frohman, Miss Margaret Illington (Mrs. Daniel Frohman), Miss Margaret Merrington, Mme. Modjeska, Charles Genung George Irving, Milton Nobles, Fred Thorne, James L. Metcalfe, Giles Shine, William Hazeltine, William Norris, George Denham, Charles S. Abbe, Julius Steger, John Jack, Verner Clarges, Miss Ffolliott Paget (the three latter members of Jefferson's last company), Barton Hill, Charles Dade, Frank Aiken, Anton Reiff, Willard L. Metcalf, F. M. L. Tonetti, David A. Munro, Edwin T. Emery, Charles Lothran, R. U. Johnson, John Glendinning, E. L. Walton, Henry B. Shepherd, Ada Dillman, Paton Gibbs, Charles Stevenson, Marcus Mayer, Mabel Norton, Howard Kyle, Joseph Holland, Mrs. Hart, F. F. Mackay, William A. Crozier, Dr. Ramon Guiteras, Col. William C. Church, Jesse Lynch Williams, William W. Ellsworth, Albert A. Boyden, Lorlye Elton Rogers, E. F. Gethner, Rankin Duvall, Royal Cortissez, Joseph Weaver, Booth Tarkington, Arnold Brunner, Guy Nichols, W. K. Otis, Campbell Gollan, and William Sage.

David Bispham was in the choir, and sang "Crossing the Bar."

When the service was over there was such a crush at the door that those inside could hardly get out. Five or six policemen had been sent over from the West Thirtieth Street Station, and proved equal to the occasion. The cause of the crowding was the desire on the part of the curious to see stage favorites.

GRAND LODGE TO MEET.

Many of these representatives are already in town, and the Masonic Temple, at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, where the sessions of the Grand Lodge will be held, will be a busy place the three days of the meeting.

The Grand Lodge will be called to order at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon by the Grand Marshal, William H. Frangen of Hornellsville, and the grand officers, headed by Grand Master Robinson, will march into the large hall in which the annual communications are always held.

The Marriage of William Ashe

What is there about Lady Kitty to set two continents talking? She isn't a proper young woman, that is certain; she isn't good—at least not by conventional standards, and yet she seems far removed from censurable wickedness. Why do the critics and the clergy speak well of her? Is it that they place her Fault at the door of her perhaps too good husband? Is it that they feel he is to blame for her down-going because he chose power in place of love?

Says the Philadelphia Inquirer:

"There have been loves in this world which have had terrible consequences, and though Mrs. Ward attempts no Cleopatra theme, she has sounded the heights and depths of passion and its opposition to social convention in a way that has seldom been achieved."

"It reveals new depth and beauty with each reading. One appreciates how superbly the author has triumphed. . . . Its place is with the books that do not die. Its author stands among the few living authors to whom the immortals have passed the torch."—New York Times.

"In all Mrs. Ward's long gallery of distinguished heroines, Lady Kitty most vibrates with life, and her story is likely to leave with its readers most of that fragrance of rosemary which is for remembrance."—New York Globe.

Sanna

The Island of Nantucket forms an ideal background for romance. Miss Waller, author of The Wood-carver of 'Lympus, has employed the charming setting for her new tale. Everyone will agree that Sanna is altogether bewitching in her girlish coquetry and charm.

3. All other chattels and personal property of said American Cotton Company appertaining to or forming a part of its business, excepting merchandise, accounts receivable and cash.

The said property will be sold as an entirety and in one lot or parcel, without covenant or warranty of any kind, nature, or description whatsoever.

All the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey is to be sold upon conditions as follows:

First: The sale and conveyance thereof are to be subject to all Government taxes and annuities which are now payable and which shall hereafter become payable upon said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey, or upon any of them.

Second: All notarial fees, Government taxes, and annuities and other expenses required to be paid for assigning and conveying all the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned Letters Patent of foreign countries to the purchaser or purchasers thereof shall be paid by the purchaser or purchasers thereof.

Third: If any of said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey shall have lapsed or become forfeited for non-payment of any taxes or annuity or by reason of failure to work the invention covered thereby, no deduction or abatement shall be allowed from the amount of the bid of the successful bidder for all right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to all of said Letters Patent of foreign countries.

No bid will be received from any person who shall not first deposit with the undersigned or the aforesaid auctioneers as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance the sum of $10,000 in cash or by certified check on some incorporated bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or indorsed payable to the order of the Central Trust Company of New York. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property shall be struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be retained as part payment of the purchase price of the property so sold. On acceptance of any bid the successful bidder shall forthwith enter into an agreement in writing in appropriate form, whereby he shall bind himself to pay the balance of his bid at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York City, No. 54 Wall Street, New York City, on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The successful bidder, upon payment in full of the purchase price bidden in the manner and within the period herein limited, shall be entitled to receive the certificates representing the shares of stock enumerated in subdivision (AA) hereof, and the instrument or instruments executed by the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee aforesaid, transferring or purporting to transfer such right, title, and interest as it may have as such Trustee of, in, and to the property herein described or intended so to be (other than that set forth in subdivision (A) hereof,) together with such documents as may be in the possession of the Trustee (other than the original deed of trust securing said debentures) evidencing its right, title, and interest to such property or to any part or portion thereof.

Intending bidders during business hours of any day (Sundays and legal holidays excepted) prior to the sale of said property pursuant to this notice, at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York, 54 Wall Street, New York City, may examine any and all documents in the possession of said Trust Company evidencing its right, title, and interest to the property to be sold or to any part or portion thereof.

In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said auctioneers, or shall fail to make such acceptance to comply with the terms thereof, or shall fail to pay the balance of the purchase price, then the sum deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or by certified check, shall be and be forfeited as a penalty for such failure, and such bidder shall be held responsible for the payment of the expenses of the sale or of a resale, and for any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price at such re-sale.

So much of the purchase price as shall not be required by the undersigned Trustee to be paid in cash can either be paid in cash or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid in whole or in part by returning in to be canceled or credited the six per cent. gold debenture bonds and the coupons thereto appertaining of the American Cotton Company outstanding under said deed of trust dated April 1, 1902, and the purchaser will be credited on account of such bonds and coupons with such sums as would be payable in cash on account thereof out of the proceeds of sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were paid in cash.

The right is reserved to re-sell the property upon such notice as the Central Trust Company of New York may determine as sufficient, or without notice in the event that the purchaser shall fail or omit to make any payment on account of the unpaid balance of the purchase price on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The Central Trust Company of New York reserves the right to adjourn said sale from time to time, and to sell upon such adjourned day without further notice or upon such notice as it may in its discretion deem sufficient.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

Executive Offices,

120 Broadway, New York, April 4, 1905.

To the Stockholders of UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

Of the $100,000,000 First Lien Convertible Bonds originally issued by your Company $54,235,000 have been converted up to date into common stock, and it is assumed that the remainder will likewise be converted before May, 1906. Fixed charges have thereby been greatly diminished and the equity behind the preferred stock correspondingly increased, and with the enhanced credit of your Company the market value of the preferred stock is and for some months has been about par. This situation enables the company to pursue the wise and conservative policy which requires that a corporation, whenever possible, should finance at least a part of its capital requirements—especially such as arise in connection with the acquisition of stocks of other companies—through the issue of stock rather than through the creation of fixed interest bearing obligations. The advantages of such a policy are obvious and will enure to the benefit of the holders of both common and preferred stock in that the creation of additional bonded indebtedness ranking and carrying fixed charges ahead of the stock may be avoided and the credit and position of the Company further advanced. Your company will, moreover, will be placed in a position admitting in due time of a more liberal attitude towards the distribution of its surplus income.

As the common share capital has been and will be further added to by the conversion of the convertible bonds, your Directors are of the opinion that the common stock should not in the near future be still further increased; they do, however, consider it prudent that your company should prepare at this time to finance coming requirements through issue of preferred stock, at par, when practicable, to an extent re-establishing the formerly existing proportion between the common and preferred stock.

Your Directors, therefore, recommend the creation of an additional issue of preferred stock, equal in every respect to the preferred stock at present outstanding, and to that end have called a special meeting of the stockholders to convene at the office of the company at Salt Lake City, Utah, on the 5th day of May, 1905, for the purpose of authorizing an increase of the preferred capital stock by the amount of $100,000,000, and its issuance from time to time, as needed, thus making the authorized capital stock of the company $386,178,700, consisting of $200,000,000 of preferred stock and $196,178,700 of common stock.

By order of the Board of Directors.

E. H. HARRIMAN, President.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Effect of Last Week's Liquidation Felt Through Entire Market.

Northern Securities Group Conspicuous in Decline—Selling Based on Considerations Other Than Intrinsic Values.

It has been a long time since the stock market moved with as much uniformity as it did last week. True, there was much irregularity in the course of prices through the week, but in the final count there was no division or practically no division of the net results. Stocks that moved a point or more numbered 186, and of these 173 declined and 13 advanced. If the superstition of 13 had any significance it would probably indicate in this connection that these 13 stocks would go down this week, having advanced last week, and on the contrary, that the other 173 would go up. Such an outcome, judging by the tone of the market at the close of last week, is devoutly to be wished for, but scarcely to be expected. The liquidation extended likewise to the bond market, though the larger proportion of the issues dealt in succeeded in holding their own, the declines numbering 36 and the advances 14. So general was the fall in prices that there can be little doubt of the comprehensive character of the liquidation that brought it about. Of the twelve most active issues Amalgamated and American Smelting were the ones that suffered least and they each lost 3 3-8 points. The dozen included falls of 9¼ points in New York Central, 8¾ in Union Pacific and 7⅝ in St. Paul. These three leaders of the decline are all associated in one way or another with the Northern Securities' group, and when to them is added Northern Securities itself, which fell 10¼ points, it seems fair to draw the inference that the questions connected with the dissolution of that company were factors of considerable importance in causing the week's liquidation. Another stock of the same group, Great Northern preferred, as if to emphasize the above fact showed the maximum decline of the week, of no less than 48¼ points.

Apart from Great Northern, however, the market showed relatively few declines in inactive issues much in excess of the declines in the active stocks. The others that showed losses of ten points or more were Atlantic Coast Line 15½ points, Buffalo, Rochester, and Pittsburg 11½, Chicago and Northwest 11, Colorado Fuel 10¾, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western 17½, Sloss-Sheffield 10, and Tennessee Coal and Iron 15½. Norfolk and Western on the disappointment felt at the failure of the Directors to increase the dividend fell 6¼ points, or less than the decline in a number of other issues which had less specific reason for showing a loss. This is confirmatory of the opinion that stocks were sold on other considerations than those of intrinsic values. The fact is not in itself reassuring for the reason that were intrinsic conditions the controlling factor in the stock market the end of the selling would already be in sight, for conditions certainly have not altered for the worse, but it is harder to gauge the extent to which selling may go which is prompted by considerations but partially known and consequently not fully understood.

AHEARN LAUDS THE WORK

Salvation to the East Side from Within Itself, Says Dr. Blaustein—Equipment of the Clubhouse.

The Young Men's Benevolent Association, an east side organization, established for educational and social purposes, threw open yesterday its new clubhouse at 311 East Broadway. The celebration was attended by a great number of invited guests, who had come to offer their congratulations to the young men, to whom the completion of the building meant the fruition of sixteen years of patient labor.

The new clubhouse is one of the handsomest buildings in that section of the city. It is a three-story edifice, built from brick and granite, and contains a free circulating library, reading room, buffet, bowling alleys gymnasium, billiard room, an assembly and lecture hall, social parlors, spray and shower baths, administrative offices, and many smaller meeting rooms. The cost of building and equipment was in the neighborhood of $50,000, all of which was contributed by members of the organization, which at the present time is composed of some 400 young east siders, mostly in the humbler walks of life.

The great assembly hall on the second floor was crowded to the doors when the ceremony began. After an opening prayer by the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, Stanislaus N. Tuckman, Chairman of the Building Committee, went through the formality of handing over the key and with it the building to the President of the association, Marks Wolff, who took the chair. He introduced as the first speaker President Ahearn of the Borough of Manhattan, who was present as the representative of Mayor McClellan.

"It was no small nor easy task for you to erect this splendid edifice," he said. "It was a task from the carrying out of which older and wiser heads might have discouraged you. But you have succeeded splendidly and are to be congratulated."

Dr. David Blaustein, President of the Educational Alliance, was the next speaker. He said in part:

"Your organization has sprung directly from the people of the lower east side. You will have a splendid opportunity to show to all the people what freedom does for man. You, or your parents, have come from countries of oppression where there were no opportunities for our race. In this country we can proclaim aloud and without fear that we are good Jews in order to be better citizens.

"You are to be congratulated upon the fact that this work is your own. You bring salvation to the east side from within itself. I also congratulate you upon being the only permanent organization of this section. The majority of organizations down here begin work about the first of October and disappear on the Wednesday following the first Monday in November, never to be heard from again.

"The east side has a shifting population. From my observations I should judge that it changes once in every six years. Every year brings about 50,000 newly arrived Jewish immigrants to this part of the city. To the majority of these, however, the lower east side is merely the gateway of the New World. But it is nevertheless true that to these new-comers America is what the east side is. They learn their first lessons here. If they find high ideals and pure politics on the east side, they will develop into good citizens. If they find on the east side the demagogue and the yellow press they will grow to curse the day that Columbus discovered America."

The Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes pleaded with the members of the club not to neglect physical training.

"When you go to your gymnasium," he said, "do not look upon it as merely a pleasure, but as a duty you have to perform. It is a religious duty to develop your physical powers, a duty which you owe to your employers in the present generation and to your children and children's children in generations to come."

The dedication ceremonies were followed by a reception and inspection of the club premises.

TO LEAVE ORPHAN ASYLUM.

Dr. Coffee Resigns from Jewish Institution to Enter Ministry.

At the annual meeting of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum held yesterday morning at the institution, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee, who has been in charge of the children for the past two years, tendered his resignation as Superintendent. Dr. Coffee is twenty-six years old, and is said to be the youngest Superintendent of a large charitable institution in the United States.

President Louis Stern read his annual report, which showed the asylum to be in a prosperous condition and doing excellent work. Receipts for the year which were consumed by the running expenses amounted to $96,000 from the city, $47,000 from patrons and members, and $30,000 in bequests. Dr. Coffee, among other things, said in his report:

"More than passing importance should be given to the clothing of our children, and the recent change which has taken place. Although the uniform has been abolished in our Home, the clothing which was later given to our wards made it possible for the average outsider to infer that here was an institution child. To-day such is not the case. There is absolutely nothing in their attire to give the slightest hint of an institutional home. Our boys and girls, who are in the same class, have as many points of difference in their attire as two brothers or sisters in any private family. A forward step was taken when we did away with the old practice of cutting the hair close of all our wards."

Of his resignation Dr. Coffee said:

"For two years I have enjoyed the rare privilege of working under you, which honor I have esteemed most highly. But, having graduated to enter the ministry, I feel the limitations of such a home as this, where the onerous duties have not afforded me sufficient opportunity for further study."

President—Louis Stern; Vice President—Henry Rice; Treasurer—Martin Beckhard. Trustees to serve for three years—Edward Lauterbach, N. Necarsulmer, Sol Moses, Samuel Ullmann, William I. Spiegelberg, Edwin Mayer, and Albert Plaut.

A NIGHTLY BOMBARDMENT.

Denton's Debt Collecting Method—Wrong House, Say Honahans.

John and Martin Honahan, who live in Lyvere Place, near West Farms Road, in Westchester, were awakened early yesterday morning by sounds of heavy missiles striking the side of their house. They arose quickly enough to see a man running away, and, giving chase, they captured him. He said he was Frank Denton, and they turned him over to Policeman Burns.

In the Morrisania Court later Denton told Magistrate Breen that the Honahans owed him money for work, and that he was determined to keep them awake nights until they paid him. The Honahans said that they never knew Denton.

SAY BILLS ARE NOT GRAB

August Belmont and Arthur Turnbull Defend Pending Measures.

August Belmont, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and Arthur Turnbull, President of the New York and Long Island Railroad Company, have issued a defense of measures now pending in the Legislature, which have been denounced as being of the "grab" variety. Mr. Belmont and Mr. Turnbull say they are not grab bills, but, on the other hand, are bills designed to improve the transit facilities between Manhattan Island and Queens.

"It has been the object of the Interborough," they say, "to connect the various boroughs of the city with the least possible delay and in the most satisfactory, convenient, and practical manner. To that end it has undertaken to expend $8,000,000 of its own money in building the Manhattan-Brooklyn extension of the Subway. It has recently become interested in the so-called 'Steinway franchise' for a tunnel under the East River connecting Manhattan and Queens at Forty-second Street."

The two railway Presidents point out that the franchise was granted to the New York and Long Island Railroad by the Board of Aldermen in 1890 and by the Common Council of Long Island City in 1891. Since then tunnel construction has been improved, and now a practical connection between Queens and the Manhattan Subway system is possible.

"In order to facilitate these changes," Mr. Belmont and Mr. Turnbull say further:

"Bills have been introduced and are now pending in the Legislature which rival interests have indicated as 'grab bills,' seeking thus to give the impression that an effort was being made to procure franchises without the consent of the city authorities and without making compensation. The city authorities have given their consent for this tunnel railroad, which will serve a great public purpose, and have made provisions in the ordinance granting its consent for the payment to the city of a percentage of the gross receipts in compensation for the franchise granted. The original charter line of the company embraced rights which the city authorities have not consented to, and one of the pending bills would enable them to abandon this unconstructed route, while another bill authorizes amendments to cure technical omissions and defects.

"The passage of all these bills is believed to be in the public interest, and peculiarly to the advantage of the property owners above described, whose interest it is to promote the development of transit facilities between the large and neglected Borough of Queens and the more densely populated portions of the city.

"For the city at large it will create a new and heavy taxpayer in the New York and Long Island Railroad Company and many new and additional taxpayers in the Borough of Queens, whose growth will be enormously increased by this proposed transit facility."

EX-POLICEMAN'S FALL FATAL.

Hotel Clerks, Who, Brothers Say, Threw Him Downstairs, Arrested.

As the result of either falling or being thrown down the stairs of the Florence lodging house, 208 Eighth Avenue, early yesterday morning, Peter W. Connor, an ex-policeman, died in the New York Hospital, and Robert McKenna and Edward Miller, clerks in the lodging house, are under arrest on a charge of homicide. Coroner Goldenkranz held both men in $2,500 bail to await the inquest.

Connor lived at 334 West Twenty-first Street with his father and younger brothers, Thomas, George, and John. The father is a policeman who has been thirty-three years on the force, and is now attached to the Macdougal Street Station. It had been the habit of the brothers when Peter came home the worse for drink to get him to some lodging house and keep him quiet. He came home shortly after midnight on Saturday morning and was inclined to be boisterous. Thomas and George took him to the Florence lodging house.

The entrance to the house is up a long narrow flight of stairs. They assisted him up the stairs and into the large reading room and office. Edward Miller, who is the night clerk, and Robert McKenna, his assistant, were behind the desk. Seeing the man's condition, they refused to allow him to stay there.

Peter was escorted, protesting, down the stairs. He refused to go with his brothers and started back. He reached the head of the stairway, his brothers say, where McKenna and Miller were standing. There is a difference of opinion as to just what happened when the men met. The clerks say they were seeking to prevent the man from entering when he lost his balance and fell down the stairs. The brothers of the dead man declare he was thrown down.

Connor was unconscious when he was picked up. George Connor ran out and got Policeman Schiedel of the West Twentieth Street Station, who made the arrests. An ambulance was summoned from the New York Hospital and the injured man was taken there. He never regained consciousness and died about 5 o'clock.

Connor was dismissed from the police force during the Roosevelt administration. Later he was reinstated, but was again dismissed. Both times he was charged with intoxication.

EVIL EMPLOYMENT AGENCIES.

Miss Keller Tells of Their Treatment of Negro Girls of the South.

A mass meeting in the cause of education was held yesterday afternoon in Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, at 229 West Twenty-fifth Street. The meeting was held under the auspices of Morris Brown College and the Wilberforce University, two well-known educational institutions for the negro race.

Miss Frances A. Keller of this city delivered an address on the subject, "The Protection of Southern Girls in the North," in which she denounced the negro employment agencies.

"There are about twenty-five agencies in this city which supply colored female servants, and of that number there are but five of those which conduct their business honestly and respectably. These agencies by methods of deception secure in the Southern States hundreds of colored girls who are anxious to secure work in the North. They are compelled to pay $27 for transportation to the North, which will allow the Southern representatives of the New York agencies to pocket a big share of this first cost. If they have any money when they leave the South it is taken from them in the lodging houses to which they are taken as soon as they arrive here. They must also sign an agreement whereby they must work two months for nothing. Whatever they have earned during that time must be turned over to the employment agency."

Other addresses were by Prof. H. Y. Arnott, Financial Secretary of the Wilberforce University, on "The Oldest School Managed and Controlled by the African Methodist Episcopal Church"; the Rev. R. D. Stinson, Commissioner of Morris Brown College of Atlanta, Ga., on the "Practical Education for the Masses of the South"; Dean M. Leonard Frazier of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, West Fortieth Street, on "The Relations of the White and Colored Races of the South Ecclesiastically," and the Rev. M. W. Gilbert, pastor of Mount Olivet Baptist Church of this city, on "The Influence of the Church Over the Youth of the Present Generation."

Lost Eye on Way to Ball Game.

Joseph Fuchs, nineteen years old, of 681 East Thirteenth Street, Manhattan, went to Jersey City yesterday to see a baseball game. While crossing the Central Railroad tracks he found a railroad torpedo. This he placed on a rail and exploded it with a stone. The fragments of the torpedo struck him in the face, and one of his eyes was so badly injured that it will have to be removed.

STRIKES THREATENED INVOLVING 34,000 MEN

Rockmen and Excavators' Unions Will Furnish 30,000.

TRUCKMEN TO GO OUT TO-DAY

Strike of 1,000 Expected in Downtown District—Bakers to Fight to Preserve Ten-Hour Law.

Though May Day starts this year without any general strikes in the building trades, strikes are threatened within a few days which will involve at least 34,000 men. Of these the greatest number will be from the Rockmen and Excavators' Unions, which made demands over a month ago on the Contractors' Protective Association for a new wage scale and recognition of the union, to take effect to-day. A mass meeting of the union was held yesterday at Webster Hall, Eleventh Street, near Third Avenue, which was attended by about 4,000 members. The main hall could not accommodate them all, and overflow meetings were held in some of the smaller halls.

After the meeting it was said that a letter had been received in reply to their demands from the Contractors' Protective Association, which was regarded as evading the question. Tito Pucelli, President of the Rockmen and Excavators' Union, said:

"The men have been ordered to go back to work to-day pending the orders from the strike committee. Before we order the strike we will wait to see what the employers mean to do. The reply we received from the Contractors' Protective Association was a very vague one. While it does not directly state that the demands are refused, it can be construed only as a refusal. As far as I can see a strike appears inevitable. It would involve 26,000 rockmen and excavators and 4,000 rock drillers, holster runners, and others.

"We must have the eight-hour workday. Many of the excavators are working eleven hours a day for $1.25 and $1.50. Some of the rockmen are working ten hours a day for $2.25, but not all. What we want is recognition of the union, a uniform wage rate of 25 cents an hour for rockmen, 20 cents an hour for excavators, and 30 cents an hour overtime for the rockmen."

Truckmen to the number of 1,000 employed by the down-town section of the New York Truck Owners' Association in the warehouse district threaten to strike to-day because their employers will not allow them to dictate as to the workmen who will be laid off in slack periods, and will not agree to force their employes who are in arrears to the union to pay up their dues. Though no notification has been sent officially, so convinced are the employers that the downtown truckmen intend to strike that they will hold a meeting this afternoon at the Broadway Central Hotel to prepare for trouble.

The bakers are organizing for a strike this month, for the ten-hour work day in case the employers take advantage of the decision of the United States Supreme Court that the ten-hour law is unconstitutional and return to the old system of eleven, twelve, and thirteen hours a day. Strikes will be ordered in every bakery where the ten-hour rule is ignored. There are 3,000 union bakers in the city, of whom 2,000 have an agreement with their employers beginning to-day, based on the ten-hour work day. There are also 6,000 or more non-union bakers.

The Journeymen Bakers and Confectioners International Union will send organizers among them this week to organize as many of them as possible preparatory to enforcing the ten-hour law.

General strikes of garment workers are scheduled for this Summer, but most of them will not take place before July. The Cloak Makers' Union, which has about 11,000 members, will be the largest of the unions to strike.

C. F. U. OFFERS LAST CHANCE.

Delegates Asked to Appear at Meeting to Prove Charges.

The committee appointed several weeks ago by the Central Federated Union to investigate the Civic Federation and compel those who had made charges against labor members of the federation either to prove them or to admit that they were false, made a report at yesterday's meeting of the Central Federated Union that it had held two meetings and none of the delegates would come forward to prove their charges.

The committee will hold its final meeting next Friday and give the delegates a last chance. As the delegates were ordered to go before the committee, and made speeches to the effect that they were prepared to prove their charges before the committee was appointed, they will in all probability be disciplined if they do not appear before the committee next Friday.

RAID 2-CENT LODGING HOUSE.

Police Find 15 Women Asleep on Floor —Three Months' Sentence for Each.

Fifteen unkempt, ragged women, whose ages ranged from forty to sixty-five years, were arraigned before Magistrate Moss in the Tombs Court yesterday morning as the result of a raid made by the police of the Oak Street Station on a women's lodging house at 4 James Slip. All received sentences of three months in the workhouse on charges of vagrancy and disorderly conduct.

The house raided, an old three-story brick, which in times past was a building of consequence, is now run as a two-cent lodging house for women. The lodgers are women who live as best they can. The police say that for two cents each woman received a space allotment for the night on the sawdust-covered floor. Some of the neighbors complained to the police that the women in the place at night became so disorderly that no one could sleep. Acting on these complaints, Capt. Hodgins and Detectives McGee and Roy on Saturday night descended on the house.

When the police entered the place they saw a boy of about six years propped up in the corner of the room asleep. During the round-up of the women the boy disappeared. The police got the boy's mother, one of the youngest of the prisoners, who said she was Bridget Finn. The woman who kept the place was in court. She admitted that sometimes she women drank, but she insisted that

CAREFUL CARPET CLEANING CO

PUSHCART MEN TO FIGHT.

Charge Extortion by Street Cleaning Employes and Others.

Hints that blackmail was being extorted from east side peddlers by employes of the Street Cleaning Department were made at crowded meetings held yesterday under the auspices of the United Citizens' Peddlers' Association of Greater New York.

Sigmund Schwartz, President of the association, who addressed the meetings, declared that "graft" reports had come to him from many persons who were in a position to know what they were talking about, that he was convinced the reports were true, and that sensational disclosures would be made before long.

"I wrote to Commissioner Woodbury, but the Commissioner does not like me and has not considered it worth while to send a reply to my letter," said Mr. Schwartz.

There were three meetings of pushcart peddlers held on the lower east side yesterday, all three for the purpose of considering ways and means to fight Commissioner Woodbury if he attempts to carry out his threat to sweep the east side peddlers from the streets.

The biggest meeting was held at the Grand Lyceum, 85-89 Forsyth Street. About a thousand peddlers met there at 2 o'clock and remained until nearly midnight.

President Schwartz did not talk at any length on the graft proposition, but hinted that in making his investigation he had made frequent trips to the new fish market established by the Street Cleaning Department under the Williamsburg Bridge. He also said that grafting on a different line was carried on by storekeepers on certain east side streets, who collected monthly toll from pushcart peddlers for permitting them to stand in front of their stores.

The report of the Pushcart Commission, consisting of Commissioners McAdoo, Darlington, and Woodbury; Dr. Brown of the Academy of Medicine, and Miss Lillian Wald of the Nurses' Settlement, is expected this week.

The Executive Board decided that if the report of the Commissioners should be adverse to their interests, the peddlers should call a mass meeting at Cooper Union and further emphasize their attitude by taking all pushcarts from the east side streets for three days and marching in a body to the City Hall to see the Mayor. The question also will be taken to court.

JUSTICE HOOKER UNFIT, COMMITTEE FINDS

Removal from Bench Is Recommended Unanimously.

EXTRA SESSION NECESSARY

Declares Justice's Acts to Have Been Immoral and Corrupt—Procedure Setting Important Precedent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 1.—The removal of Justice Warren B. Hooker of Fredonia from the Supreme Court bench is recommended in the report of the Assembly Judiciary Committee, which was made to the Assembly to-night. The report was at once made a special order for Thursday.

The recommendation is made as the unanimous action of the eleven members of the committee which held the investigation. Two members, Mead of Albany and Wemple of Schenectady, attach a memorandum saying: "We have signed the report with great hesitation, believing there is grave doubt as to the interpretation of Section 11, Article 6, of the Constitution."

A special session of the Legislature early in the Summer to hear Justice Hooker seems probable.

The committee thinks that the proceedings should be taken under Section 11, Article 6, of the Constitution, providing as follows:

Judges of the Court of Appeals and Justices of the Supreme Court may be removed by concurrent resolution of both houses of the Legislature, if two-thirds of all the members elected to each house concur therein. * * * But no officer shall be removed by virtue of this section except for cause, which shall be entered on the Journals, nor unless he shall have been served with a statement of the cause alleged, and shall have had an opportunity to be heard. On the question of removal, the yeas and nays shall be entered on the Journal.

There is no precedent for removal under this clause of the Constitution. Both sides, during the hearing in committee, have urged caution in procedure, inasmuch as this case will establish a precedent likely to prove of profound importance to the State judiciary.

FIVE COUNTS ARE SPECIFIED.

There are five counts in the committee's indictment. They cover various appointments to the Fredonia Post Office obtained through Justice Hooker's influence and the Wirtner judgment obtained by Hooker and his former law partner, State Tax Commissioner Lester F. Stearns of Dunkirk, relative to an easement for light and air for the Post Office building. This case is the one in which Justice Truman C. White of Buffalo granted a judgment in favor of Hooker and Stearns without knowing all the facts. When he learned the facts two years later Justice White had the judgment vacated. The original judgment kept the City of Dunkirk from building on its own property.

The conclusions of fact follow:

BEAVERS IN COLLUSION.

"First—That, in our opinion, said Warren B. Hooker and George W. Beavers both knew that the appointments of said Frank P. Ball, as laborer and clerk in the Fredonia Post Office, were unnecessary and that by reason of the acts of said Hooker and Beavers and the acts of Ball in connection therewith, the United States was defrauded of said sum of $2,532.07, and that the reason and motive which influenced Warren B. Hooker in procuring the appintment of Ball, first as laborer and then as clerk in said Post Office was that Ball might thereby obtain money with which to pay the said note of $3,040 upon which Mrs. Hooker was indorser; that the said acts of said Warren B. Hooker were immoral and show a personal unfitness in him to occupy the position of Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Second—That, in our opinion, said Warren B. Hooker knew that the appointment of Maurice Hooker to the position of laborer in the Fredonia postoffice was unnecessary. That, by reason of the acts of said Warren B. Hooker and Melvin H. Taylor, and the acts of said Beavers and Maurice Hooker, connected therewith, the United States was defrauded of upward of the sum of $500; and that said acts of said Warren B. Hooker were immoral and show a personal unfitness in him to occupy the position of Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Third—That, in our opinion, said Warren B. Hooker and George W. Beakers knew that he appointments of Thomas O'Neill, Henry J. Pemberton, George Cooper, Minerva Jeffrey and Ora Caldwell were unnecessary, and that, by reason of the acts of said Hooker and Beavers in connection with the appointment of said Ora Caldwell and Thomas O'Neill, the United States was defrauded of the sum of $276.66, paid to said Caldwell, and the sum of $126.66, paid to said O'Neill. That the acts of said Warren B. Hooker in connection with the appointment of Caldwell and O'Neill were culpable and show a personal unfitness in him to occupy the position of Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Fourth—That, in our opinion, the transaction between Katherine K. Clark, Melvin H. Taylor, Warren B. Hooker, and George W. Beavers, regarding the appointment of said Clark to to position in the Fort Plains Post Office and her transfer thence to a clerkship n the postoffice at Fredonia, was an evasion of the United States Civil Service law; that the transaction was immoral and corrupt, and shows an unfitness on the part of said Warren B. Hooker to be and remain a Justice of the Supreme Court.

"Fifth—That, in our opinion, the acts of said Warren B. Hooker in connection with the procurement of the judgment against the City of Dunkirk were corrupt and immoral and show a personal unfitness on the part of said Warren B. Hooker to occupy the position of Justice of the Supreme Court."

It has not been determined yet whether the hearing to Justice Hooker should be given by each house separately or by the Legislature in joint session.

Beavers Goes to Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—George W. Beavers, formerly chief of the Salary and Allowance Division of the Post Office Department, who will appear in court to-morrow to answer an indictment in connection with Post Office irregularities, arrived here from Brooklyn to-day.

SPECULATION CLOSES BANK.

SAG HARBOR, L. I., May 1.—The Peconic Bank, a State institution, with a capital of $25,000, closed its doors this morning. It expects to resume business on May 4 at the latest, as the cause of its temporary closing, a shortage in accounts, has been made good or guaranteed. A State bank examiner is at work on the books, and his work will probably be completed to-morrow.

The Peconic Bank was largely a one-man affair, and the man was Francis H. Palmer, the cashier. Operations in Wall Street so involved him that he called the other officers of the bank in consultation, and then the trouble became known. He is said to owe the bank $40,000. H made over at once some $30,000 in real estate, and $3,800 in personal property. The other Directors pledged themselves to a total of $10,000 to uphold the bank, and of this sum the needful $6,700 was at once made available.

Although the bank failed to open its doors at 9 o'clock this morning, it was after banking hours this afternoon before the fact became generally known. The day being Monday, there was very little business, and those who called to deposit or draw money were taken into the office of President John M. Hildreth and the situation was explained to them. If it was a man needing money on a check he was cared for, but not at the bank. There was no attempt at anything like a run, and not until late in the afternoon did a crowd gather about the bank, and then it was drawn by curiosity.

Mr. Palmer, who has lived here eighteen years, practically founded the bank, and the details of its management were left to him. He owns the tract of land known as Palmer's Terrace, and is interested in and an officer of the Sag Harbor Savings Bank, which is in no way involved in the Peconic's trouble; the glass works, one of the principal industries, and the electric lighting company. He is a Mason and prominent in the Presbyterian Church. The other officers of the bank are John M. Hildreth, President; Henry F. Cook, Vice President, and J. J. Harrison, Olin M. Edwards, William E. Dennison, and Cleveland F. Stillwell, with the officers, Directors.

According to the story told by President Hildreth, Directors Dennison and Harrison and W. C. Greene, the bank's attorney, Mr. Palmer has been speculating in stocks since long before the bank was conceived. He at times borrowed from the bank, but always on securities, and kept his borrowings within the legal limit.

President Hildreth said this afternoon: "Every depositor will be paid in full. The bank is sound and its soundness is guaranteed by the Directors, and by Thursday, when we hope to have the doors open again, we expect to be able to stand any run that might come. In round numbers, we have about $100,000 on deposit. We have a surplus of $6,000. The loans we have made are all secured by the best of securities.

"The estimates of value on Mr. Palmer's property which he made are low. In fact, it has been figured that if there is no forced sale of the real estate there will be but a small discrepancy, say $2,000, to be made up by the Directors."

Mr. Palmer at first figured a difference of $6,700 between the value of his property and the amount he owed, and to make the matter absolutely certain was the reason why the Directors pledged themselves for $10,000.

BROKER A SUICIDE IN HACK.

Christian Young, Jr., Rides Two Hours, Then Shoots Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, May 1.—After a two-hour drive through the most fashionable section of Chester Hill, Christian Young, Jr., said to be a broker and living at 23 South Terrace Avenue, this city, committed suicide to-night by sending a bullet through his right temple. Young was in Morris Levine's hack and was passing through North Fulton Avenue shortly after 11 o'clock when he killed himself. He left in the carriage a note hastily written, which said:

"My name is Christian Young, Jr., and live at 23 South Terrace Avenue. Kindly notify my wife."

There was no money found on Young. He had given Levine his last $1.50. According to Levine, Young got off the 9:16 train on the New Haven Road and entered his carriage. He was apparently jovial, and said to the hackman, "How much will you charge to drive me around for a couple of hours?" "I guess $1.50 will be enough," was the hackman's answer. Young paid the money and closed the carriage door. Nothing more was heard from him until the shot was fired.

Among Young's papers was a pass and check book, showing he had an account with the Fifth Avenue Trust Company of New York. From a memorandum bearing the name of Stoppani & Hotchkin, brokers, of 61 Broadway, it was evident that Young was a trustee for an estate, and up to recently had a balance with them of $19,726. Nothing much is known of Young in Mt. Vernon, except that he was reputed to be a well-to-do broker and lived a quiet life.

Rockefeller Offers Oil for Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, May 1.—William Rockefeller, who owns a half dozen large automobile and touring cars, is showing great interest in the improvement of the highways in the towns along the Hudson. His latest proposition to the local authorities is to sprinkle the Albany Post Road and other thoroughfares near his home with crude oil. Mr. Rockefeller believes that the oil will allay the dust during the Summer and harden the roads until they will resemble macadam. If the authorities will adopt the suggestion he will supply the oil free of cost to the towns from the cars of the Standard Oil Company.

HAMMERSTEIN DEFEATS M'ADOO'S CLOSING ORDER

Gets Injunction When License for the Victoria Is Refused.

AUTO CHASE FOR A JUSTICE

Police Guarding Doors When Court Order Arrives—Manager Ignored Warning, Hopper Says.

With great suddenness came trouble to Oscar Hammerstein again last evening, and for a time it looked as though the city authorities would be able to keep the Victoria Theatre from opening its doors for the night performance. A squad of police was already at the doors to see that they remained closed, and several hundred persons who had bought their tickets in advance were waiting to enter.

To make matters worse a crowd of newsboys arrived at the awkward moment when the manager was trying to pacify the waiting crowd, crying:

"Wuxtra! Hammerstein's theatre closed! The Victoria dark!"

That was too much for the hitherto complacent manager.

"For Heaven's sake get those boys out of the way!" he shouted to George Strebel, the policeman who stands at his door every night.

Strebel did his duty the best he could. But from the distance still came that annoying yell:

"Hammerstein's theatre closed!"

At that dramatic moment—it was just five minutes to 8 o'clock—a red automobile came whizzing through the crowd, which then numbered fully 500 persons. Out of the machine jumped a man. He was Lawyer Emanuel Blumenstiel. He held in his hand an injunction signed by Justice Truax restraining the police from keeping the doors of the Victoria closed.

In another minute the squad of police whom Sammerstein had by some hook or crook kept well in an alcove of the lobby walked impotently out of the place. The doors of the theatre swung open. The crowd cheered.

Many and varied had been Mr. Hammerstein's experiences before that moment, however. He had been very busy since 4 o'clock, when he received a telephone message from Commissioner McAdoo informing him that the Building Department had refused to grant him his license for the coming year, and, that being true, the Commissioner could not issue it. The same, he was informed, was also true of the Lew Fields Theatre.

Mr. Hammerstein did not hesitate long over the situation. He first notified his lawyer. Then he hurried down to Commissioner McAdoo's office. What happened at that interview Mr. McAdoo won Mr. Hammerstein's good-will, for the latter strenuously refused to say anything he kept on repeating over and over again:

"Mind you, Commissioner McAdoo can't help this; it comes from another source."

After having seen the Commissioner Mr. Hammerstein met Blumenstiel, his lawyer, and a hasty affidavit was drawn up rehearsing the troubles which Mr. Hammerstein has had recently with various officials, including District Attorney Jerome. Fortified with this affidavit Lawyer Blumenstiel hurried to the home of Justice Truax at 12 East Sixty-fifth Street in an automobile. The Justice signed the injunction making it returnable to-morrow.

Meanwhile the theatre crowd was beginning to gather. The police kept them outside the doors. The crowd grew more and more impatient as 8 o'clock approached, and began to say unpleasant things. Not so with a string of boys who wanted to occupy the gallery.

They had implicit confidence in Mr. Hammerstein and yelled from time to time:

They cheered the loudest when the doors were swung open. As the crowd began to move into the theatre Mr. Hammerstein took occasion to shake hands and to notify all those he knew not to be afraid, that the theatre was perfectly safe and that he was merely being persecuted.

When Mr. Hammerstein saw the audience safely inside the theatre he said:

"I didn't know a thing about this until 4 o'clock. The trouble is about my skylights. They were put in at the request of the former Building Inspector Superintendent, Perez M. Stewart. They were regularly inspected and put in when this place was run as a music hall. My place is thirty-five feet high, and in any place over thirty-five feet you have to put in skylights. If I had put them in the centre as they want me to at present my place would be a regular fuel feeder. The skylights are for nothing more than ventilation.

"The trouble about these skylights dates back to January last, after I had my trouble with Mr. Jerome. Mr. Hopper notified me then that I would have to change them. He and his men approved them last year. On Friday last my son William made an application to Mr. Gorman of the Department of Buildings for the regular license.

"Mr. Gorman told my son that we would have time to make any changes. But at 4 o'clock this afternoon I was suddenly apprised of the fact that I had not received a license. I went immediately to Commissioner McAdoo and he told me that he was sorry, but that he was merely a sort of countersign for Hopper, and that as Mr. Hopper had not signed the permit he could not countersign it. I then consulted with my lawyer, and he certainly did hustle. I have got them beat, and I know it.

"It was a most infamous piece of business. I intend to make the same application in respect to the Lew Fields Theatre that I have made in this case."

Superintendent Hopper said last night that he was sorry that he had been compelled to take the stand he had taken. He said that Mr. Hammerstein received ample warning that he would have to change the skylights, but that he had paid no attention to the order. May 1, he said, was the time when all theatres renew their licenses, and all managers had been notified ahead of time what changes they were required to make. All he said had complied with the law except Mr. Hammerstein. He said that it was not his wish to harass any theatre manager, but his Inspectors having reported that the Lew Fields Theatre and the Victoria had not complied with the law, there was nothing left for him to do but to withhold the licenses.

KILLED BY HIS WOMAN CLERK.

Franklin Havens of Albany Shot by Miss Craver, Accidentally, She Says.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 1.—Franklin Havens, Secretary of the Albany Board of Fire Insurance Underwriters, was shot by Miss Julia Craver, a clerk in his employ, late this afternoon in his office, and died late to-night in the Albany Hospital. Miss Craver, who is under arrest, says that the shooting was accidental, and the police say they have found no evidence to cast doubt upon her story. Havens never regained consciousness. Miss Craver, who is almost prostrated over the affair, is confined to-night in the House of Detention of the local Humane Society. She says that she pointed the revolver, which was the property of Havens, and which has been in a pigeon hole in a cabinet in Havens's office for a long time, at him in a spirit of fun as he was entering the room in which she stood, commanding him to throw up his hands.

He had told her, she asserts, that the weapon was not loaded, and she declares that she pulled the trigger three times before the weapon exploded. An examination of the pistol confirms this statement. It contained six cartridges, and two of them, in addition to the one discharged, had indentations from the hammer.

The bullet entered Havens's right temple and penetrated the brain. Mr. Havens was thirty-five years old, and of a well-known family. He was married and the father of two children. Miss Craver, who is twenty-two, bears an excellent reputation. She has been employed in Havens's office for more than a year.

PLEA FOR BIG UNIVERSITIES.

Need Financial Aid, Too, Is Goldwin Smith's Hint to Carnegie.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Ontario, May 1.—Prof. Goldwin Smith, asked for his views on Andrew Carnegie's donation of the proceeds of $10,000,000 for the benefit of aged and retired university professors, gave out to-day the following statement in reply:

"I am not now prepared to say more than that the object of the benefaction is excellent. Difficulties in the administration of the gift may possibly suggest themselves. With these, I have no doubt, Carnegie as a first-rate man of business is perfectly prepared to deal.

"I can't refrain, however, from expressing my conviction that the thing now most urgently needed in the sphere of higher education is help for the great universities. The small university, however good its management, however strong the attachment of its alumni may be to it, can hardly meet the needs of the present day.

"Formerly, when only classics and mathematics were taught, a limited staff sufficient for teaching and the contents of a few book cases were an adequate outfit. Now that science, practical as well as theoretical, is taught and the university has become, instead of a gymnasium of culture, an amphitheatre of knowledge, a very large staff and very costly apparatus are required. The great universities are evidently feeling the financial pain."

"PUD" SHERWOOD KILLED.

Victim Noted for His Daring in Making Speed with Trains.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 1.—To avoid a north-bound train at Binstead this afternoon Harry E. Sherwood walked directly in front of a south-bound express on the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad and was instantly killed.

"Pud" Sherwood, as he was known in railroad circles, was the pluckiest engineer on the Maryland Division, and was noted for sensational runs with express trains. Taking express trains from one division to another, he frequently made up what appeared to be impossible delays. While running a south-bound mail some time ago Sherwood below Claymont made five miles in three minutes, or at the rate of 100 miles an hour.

Sometimes he ran the trains on which President Roosevelt and other dignitaries were passengers.

TROOPS AT NEGRO'S TRIAL.

The Court House at Decatur, Ala., Surrounded by Soldiers.

DECATUR, Ala., May 1.—With the Court House surrounded by a company of soldiers, the building thronged with interested spectators, and a tense feeling in the whole community, Harvey Smith, a negro, was placed on trial to-day charged with the murder of Miss Belle Bloodworth, daughter of a prominent merchant of New Decatur, whose body was found within a block of her home on the night of Jan. 21.

The most damaging witness to the defendant was his own little son. The boy testified that his father came home breathless on the night of the crime, that John Collier, who is indicted on the same charge, came to the house the following morning, and that the men quarreled and accused each other of the murder.

Feeling in the community is high, and there is considerable indignation over the presence of the soldiers.

NEW CORNELL BUILDING.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, May 1.—Ground was broken for the $250,000 college of agriculture at Cornell University to-day by 500 students and members of the Faculty. The students pulled a plow which was guided by Director Bailey.

Andrew D. White made the principal speech, saying: "This is a great step toward realising Ezra Cornell's dream of founding an institution where any person can find instruction in any study."

The builders' contract calls for completion of the building in July, 1906.

NEW TERMINAL FOR TRAINS.

New Haven Road Transfers Suburban Passengers at 132d Street.

Beginning yesterday the suburban trains of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad were stopped at Willis Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-second Street, instead of crossing the Harlem River to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street.

The changing of the terminal was due to the substitution of heavy passenger coaches for the smaller cars heretofore in use. The passengers are now taken across the river in a shuttle train of the Interborough system. It was stated yesterday that a new station would be built on the Willis Avenue side of the river, and that the present station would be remodelled.

CUP YACHT MAYFLOWER NOT BACK ON TIME

Sister of Owner Anxious as to Sunday Party's Whereabouts.

HAD A SMALL CREW ABOARD

Was to Return Sunday Evening—Mrs. Mally Seeks in Vain for Report of Yacht.

With eight or ten persons aboard her the yacht Mayflower, which was the successful America's Cup defender in 1886, has not returned yet, it was reported last night, from a trip that she took on Sunday, and the sister of the owner is anxious as to what has happened. The present owner is Mrs. E. M. Barker. She took out a party Sunday morning, intending to take a few hours' sail and return on Sunday evening. No word of the boat has been received here.

Mrs. Joseph B. Mally, who lives with her husband in the Trouville, at 2,783 Broadway, is the sister of Mrs. E. M. Barker. Edna Mally, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mally, accepted her aunt's invitation to be one of the party. Her mother is now troubled as to what has happened.

The Mayflower is equipped with an auxiliary engine, being now a schooner yacht. She is 100 feet over all and 85 feet on the water line, with a 19-foot beam. Mrs. Mally says that she does not know anything about the present condition of the Mayflower, except that her owner had to make several repairs in her.

Mrs. Mally fears that the boat went outside the Hook Sunday afternoon and was blown out to sea by the strong northwest wind that has been blowing for the last two or three days. Every possible putting-in place, such as Erie Basin and City Island, has been searched, and there is no trace of the lost boat.

Mrs. E. M. Barker bought the Mayflower several weeks ago. It was then in some Southern port. It was her intention to take a Southern cruise immediately, but the engine with which the boat had been fitted was found to be in bad shape. So she decided to have a new engine installed, and the yacht was brought to New York so that it could be put into commission for a Summer trip.

Mrs. Barker, however, decided to try the boat a little earlier. On Wednesday she sent a note to her sister, Mrs. Mally, inviting the latter, her husband, and daughter to go with her for a sail on Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Mally is not fond of the water, but the girl looked forward to the sail with great joy.

Then it was postponed. Mrs. Barker sent word that the boat could not be ready in time. On Sunday, however, at about 10 o'clock in the morning, she sent word down to Edna Mally to hurry and join her. She had changed her mind once more, and was going out right away, she said.

The girl, greatly excited and pleased, made all haste to get on her yachting clothes and leave. The party carried no provisions, Mrs. Mally understands, except luncheon for the one day.

The fact that only four men were in the crew makes Mrs. Mally all the more fearful of trouble. Besides Mrs. Barker and Edna Mally there were two other women on board, and a Mr. Campbell. Whether there were any more, Mrs. Mally does not know. She refused last night to tell just who the others besides her daughter were.

Mrs. Mally does not even know where the yacht's anchorage was. She has an impression, though, that it was off South Brooklyn.

MRS. EMILY CASSATT TO WED.

Former Wife of Railroad Man's Son to Marry G. E. Batcheller.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—A license was granted to-day for the marriage of Mrs. Emily I. Cassatt of this city and George E. Batcheller, a broker of New York. Mrs. Cassatt was once the wife of Capt. Edward Buchanan Cassatt, a son of A. J. Cassatt, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. She got a divorce on statutory grounds on April 4, 1904. Capt. Cassatt is in command of Troop L, Thirteenth Cavalry, and is with his regiment in the Philippines.

Mrs. Cassatt is a daughter of Mrs. Fullerton Phillips and a granddaughter of the late Moro Phillips, from whom she inherited a fortune. She is a sister of Miss Julie F. E. Phillips, who made her début in 1903. Mrs. Cassatt lives at 230 South Twentieth Street. She declined to-night to give any information as to the time or place of her approaching marriage.

George E. Batcheller is a member of the University Club, the Strollers, Country, Raequet, and Yale Clubs. He was graduated from Yale in 1895. His home is at 14 Fifth Avenue.

FIRE BLOCKS THE B. AND O.

Orange Grove Flouring Mills in Maryland Destroyed.

BALTIMORE, May 1.—The Orange Grove Flouring Mills of the C. A. Gambrill Manufacturing Company, at Orange Grove, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, about ten miles from Baltimore, were destroyed by fire to-night, entailing a loss of about $250,000, which is covered by insurance.

The railroad station and two small dwellings near by were also burned. The mill buildings were situated alongside the railroad, and falling walls blocked the tracks completely for some hours. They were later cleared by a wrecking train. Telegraph communication was also interrupted.

The Orange Grove Mills were the largest in the State, having a capacity of 1,200 to 1,500 barrels a day. In the great Baltimore fire the company's big mills near the water front were destroyed, and now that its plant at Orange Grove is gone it will have to fall back temporarily on the old stone mills, built by Charles Carroll of Carrollton, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. This antiquated mill is near the works burned to-night.

PRESIDENT TO HEAR STRIKERS

Agrees to Receive a Delegation of Teamsters in Chicago.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., May 1.—President Roosevelt has agreed to give the striking teamsters of Chicago an opportunity to present their petition when he reaches Chicago on May 10.

Word to-day reached the President in his camp on West Divide Creek that the strikers are preparing to ask him to use his influence in their behalf in a manner similar to that in which he effected a settlement of the anthracite strike three years ago.

He has given the strikers no encouragement other than agreeing to receive a delegation from the petitioners should an audience be requested.

The President and members of his hunting party were in the saddle from 8 until 4:30 o'clock to-day, returning without a pelt of any kind. They did not even sight any game.

The machine was nearly wrecked and Mrs. Seymour was thrown violently out upon the road. Her right shoulder was sprained, but it is believed she was not otherwise injured. Mr. Seymour, who was steering the machine, retained his seat and was not hurt. Mrs. Seymour was taken to her home.

PETTICOAT SAVES A TRAIN.

Little Mountain Girl Warns Engineer of Danger.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 1.—A combination freight and passenger train carrying a score of passengers and forty heavy cars was saved to-day from being wrecked at Mud Creek, on Black Mountain, by a thirteen-year-old mountain girl.

Nanny Gibson, who lives in a mountain cabin, heard a cave-in on the mountain. Barefooted and bareheaded, she started down the railroad track. As G. W. Brown, the engineer, rounded a curve he espied the little girl waving her red petticoat with might and main. The train was brought to a full stop. Had it gone ten feet further it would have been hurled thousands of feet down the mountain. The girl was liberally rewarded.

ASBURY PARK, May 1.—George Schmidt, ninety-five years old, and Mrs. Ellen Day Swarts, fifty-seven years old, were married Easter morning at the Summer home of the aged bridegroom, 35 Abbott Avenue, Ocean Grove. Both are from Newark. The wedding, which was performed by the Rev. S. H. C. Smith, a Methodist divine, was kept secret until to-day because of family reasons.

The bridegroom, who was formerly one of the managers of Washington Market, New York, has never drank liquor, chewed or smoked tobacco, or known a sick day. He has children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren.

TWO GIRLS SAVE A MAN.

When Canoe Turns Turtle They Swim Ashore with Him.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 1.—Their expertness as swimmers enabled Miss Clara and Miss Freda Wortke to save themselves and Howard Holly from a watery grave in the Rippawam River here to-day.

The girls with Holly were in a little canoe which had passed Broad Street Bridge when a brother of Holly hailed the party. Holly swung the canoe around suddenly, and it turned over.

The river is deep at this point and a strong current sweeps toward the Sound. The girls were weighted by heavy Winter coats and stout walking shoes, and the fact that Holly couldn't swim made their danger greater. Each girl took a position on either side of him, and, supporting him between them, swam to the river bank. Exhausted as they were, they could not drag themselves out of the water for several minutes.

They made little of their plucky action. "The water wasn't a bit cold," said Miss Clara Wortke. "We are fond of swimming, and didn't mind the bath at all. Mr. Holly helped us all he could. He thought more of the danger we were in than he did of himself."

TROOPS IN WARSAW SHOOT NEARLY 100

Fire Without Warning at Orderly Procession of Workmen.

MAY DAY SCENES OF TERROR

Bombs Thrown and Cossacks Retaliate by Killing Inoffensive Citizens.

WARSAW, May 1.—Nearly one hundred persons were killed or wounded by the troops in various quarters of Warsaw to-day.

The soldiers apparently were uncontrollable and violated all orders to act with moderation. They fired into crowds of demonstrators, and workmen in retaliation resorted to the use of firearms and bombs.

Many women and children are among the dead and dying.

What approaches a reign of terror exists to-night; the city presents a most gloomy aspect, and the temper of the entire community augurs ill.

May Day opened with every prospect that the recent forebodings would prove unfounded. Glorious weather ushered in the celebrations, and all factories, shops, and offices of every description were closed. The streets were crowded from early in the morning with gayly dressed people and troops. Children everywhere enjoyed themselves in the warm sunshine. No street cars or cabs were moving.

The presence of numerous patrols of Cossack cavalry and infantry was the only reminder of lurking danger. No untoward incident was reported until the afternoon.

The first disturbances occurred between 1 and 2 o'clock, when a procession of several thousand workmen carrying red flags marched along Zelanas Street. The demonstration was quite orderly and proceeded without molestation for some distance. Suddenly several squadrons of Uhlmans appeared, without interfering with the procession, and took up a position along the sidewalks while the workmen passed through the lines.

Then a company of infantry appeared from the front, and immediately the cavalry charged into the procession, dispersing it with the flats of their swords into a disorganized mass. When the cavalry withdrew the infantry fired a volley, whereupon the demonstrators turned and fled. The infantry continued to discharge volleys into the retreating, shrieking multitude.

Thirty-one persons were killed. Many were wounded, and it is believed that fifteen of them will die.

The shooting is described as having been quite unprovoked. It aroused the most intense indignation among all classes in Warsaw. Many of those who were killed or wounded were shot in the back, showing that they were running away when they were struck.

Another terrible scene was enacted at 5 P. M. at the corner of Ziots and Sienowa Streets. Workmen fired from behind a wall at a patrol, which immediately opened fire on the passing crowds, killing or wounding twenty persons.

The first bomb throwing occurred at 9:35 o'clock to-night, when a bomb was thrown into a Cossack patrol near the Vienna Station. Three Cossacks and one policeman were killed and two ladies who were leaving the station at the time were severely wounded by the explosion of the bomb.

Cossacks and infantry fired a number of volleys, and it is reported that many persons were killed or wounded. Troops surrounded the whole neighborhood.

It has been impossible up to the present time to secure accurate information as to the casualties in this affair.

At 10:45 P. M. disturbances broke out at the Zombkowska Gate of the suburb of Praga, across the Vistula River. A great crowd had assembled there, and was threatening the troops when Hussars fired upon the crowd and killed four and wounded many others.

In Jerosolini Street a man fired into a patrol from the roof of a house, but without result. In Nawrot Street a patrol killed a woman.

It was reported by telephone from Lods this afternon that a crowd there had stoned a military patrol, whereupon the soldiers fired and killed two men and wounded a boy. Later a similar scene occurred in Balueki Square, in Lods, where two persons were killed.

In Lods at 9 o'clock to-night a bomb was thrown at a patrol, but it was not effective. The patrol fired into the crowd and killed three and wounded two persons.

A student who was distributing proclamations in Wola, a suburb of Warsaw, to-night was killed by a patrol.

To-day's bloodshed is likely very seriously to affect the situation and may cause a general strike. The temper of the people is at white heat, and there is much apprehension regarding possible events on May 5, the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the proclamation of the Polish Constitution, when disturbances and demonstrations always occur.

To-night there is every indication of trouble. All the ground that had been gained since the disturbances of last January has been lost.

Only passenger trains are leaving Warsaw to-night, and these are crowded with refugees and manned by officials of the engineering department, all the regular drivers, firemen, and porters having quit work.

CONSPIRATORS' BOMB EXPLODES.

Two Men Injured in a St. Petersburg Apartment House.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 1.—A bomb exploded this morning in a room in an apartment house here in which were two men. Both of them were injured, one of them a Russian raining student named Donbinin—seriously. The other man was only slightly hurt. It is believed the men were preparing the bomb for use when it exploded.

Dubinin, who arrived at St. Pe spent the night with him. The visitor is in a hospital, and Donbinin is under arrest.

The evening papers do not mention the affair, and the police are trying to keep it secret.

The explosion, while not connected with any plan of rioting, indicates that the Terrorists are still preparing to execute vengeance against individuals, undeterred by the arrest of a score of participants in one plot.

WANT RED FLAG UNFURLED.

Russian Revolutionists in Paris Issue a Call to Workmen.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 1.—The Russian Socialist Revolutionary Party here has issued a May Day Pamphlet in Russian entitled "The Red Flag."

It declares that the Russian working class has to-day attained its majority and proposes henceforth to organize society on the basis of an assured existence for every honest worker.

The authors of "The Red Flag" call upon the Russian workingmen to parade the streets in their thousands with the red flag unfurled and to demand an eight-hour working day and the nationalization of the land.

OLD BELIEVERS THANK CZAR.

Their Church at Moscow Unsealed After Forty-nine Years.

MOSCOW, May 1.—The removal of religious disabilities by the imperial decree enabled the Old Believers of Moscow to celebrate Easter in their church in the Rogoshk Quarter.

The church, which had been closed for forty-nine years, was unsealed in the presence of the authorities. Many priceless paintings and ikons were found to be irretrievably ruined by damp.

The principal service was attended by the Prefect of Police and Gen. Galitzin, Aide de Camp of the Emperor, who was the bearer of the imperial decree granting religious freedom. The worshippers kneeled before Gen. Galitzin and begged him to express their gratitude to the Emperor, and many of the congregation loudly invoked the Almighty's blessing on his Majesty.

REST OF RUSSIA CALM.

Semi-Panic in Baku Cathedral, but No Serious Disorders Anywhere.

ST. PETERSBURG, Tuesday, May 2.—Aside from the disorders in Poland, order prevailed yesterday throughout Russia. There was hardly a sign even of a desire to stir up trouble, indicating the baselessness of rumors that had been current for some time of plans of rioting and pillage on the second day of the Easter holidays.

Associated Press correspondents at Moscow, Odessa, Kieff, Minsk, Kishineff, and other points, state that Russians of all political faiths took part in the customary holiday festivities with apparently no thought of disorder, and in St. Petersburg even the industrial quarter, which had previously been throbbing with discontent, devoted itself to merrymaking and feasting.

Governor General Trepoff, who is closely in touch with the situation, early realized the state of public feeling, and, while he did not withdraw the troops or police from strategic points, issued orders that they keep out of sight and avoid any unnecessary display of force.

In the course of a service in the cathedral at Baku yesterday a semi-panic was created by a revolutionist who shouted, "Down with the Aristocracy!" and threw a bundle of proclamations among the worshippers. The congregation, fearing that this was the prelude for a bomb attack, commenced to rush for the exits, but recovered confidence when no explosion occurred. Nobody was badly hurt.

TELLS OF POOL LAW BRIBE.

Philadelphia Track Lessee Loses Suit to Recover Money.

Special to The New York Times.

ALLENTOWN, Penn., May 1.—Joseph J. Kennard, formerly lessee of the Belmont track, Philadelphia, testified in court to-day that during the legislative session of 1901 he gave to Henry A. Groman, Secretary of the Bethlehem State Fair, $750 to get the influence of a State Senator in favor of the racing pool law, then before the Legislature. If the bill failed to become a law he was to get his money back.

This testimony was adduced in the trial before Judge Trexler of Kennard's suit against Groman to recover $300, the balance, he said, of the $750. The jury decided for the defendant.

TRIBUTE TO FITZHUGH LEE.

Many Friends Attend Funeral Services in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—An affectionate and imposing tribute was paid to-day to all that is mortal of Brig. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee. Formal funeral services will be held in Richmond, Va., on Thursday. It was found necessary to delay them until then in order that the General's son, Lieut. George Mason Lee of the Seventh Cavalry, who was in San Francisco with his regiment en route to the Philippines, may be in attendance.

Brief services were held to-day, however, at the Church of the Epiphany on G Street, many of the personal and official friends of Gen. Lee embracing the opportunity thus afforded to pay a last tribute of respect to his memory.

The honorary pall bearers included the Secretary of War, Major Gen. George L. Gillespie, Brig. Gen. John F. Weston, Brig. Gen. George B. Davis, Brig. Gen. George H. Burton, Brig. Gen. Andrew S. Burt, Brig. Gen. Edward M. Hayes, Brig. Gen. Tully McCrea, Senator Daniel, and Senator Culberson.

A detail of eight non-commissioned officers of the Seventh United States Cavalry acted as body bearers. The military escort consisted of a squadron of the Seventh Cavalry, a battery of Field Artillery, and two companies of United States Engineers. Shortly after noon the body, headed by a band, moved to the railroad station, via Pennsylvania Avenue.

RICHMOND, Va., May 1.—The special train bearing the body of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee reached Richmond about 9:30 P. M. to-day. A rest at the station by State mili-

EXPECTS NAVAL BATTLE WILL COME THIS WEEK

Washington Believes Peace Negotiations Will Follow It.

RUSSIANS STILL NEAR SAIGON

Japanese Renew Discussion of France's Attitude and Further Representations May Be Made.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Secretary of the Navy Morton will arrive in Chicago next Friday or Saturday in order to meet President Roosevelt on Monday, when the President will arrive there from Colorado. Secretary Morton will take with him for the President the latest official information regarding the war in the Far East.

It may be stated on the highest authority that the United States Navy Department expects that a naval battle will be fought this week.

It is believed in Washington that whatever the outcome—whether Rojestvensky or Togo wins—peace negotiations will follow, and that in these negotiations the United States will occupy an important position.

By The Associated Press.

SAIGON, May 1.—The Russian squadron is lying off Port Dayet (forty miles north of Kamranh Bay) and in Biuhkang Bay, (near Kamranh Bay,) outside of territorial waters.

Russian, German, and British transports are off Cape St. James (near Saigon) and in the Saigon River.

The French naval division has been mobilized in order to preserve neutrality in French waters.

TSING-TAU, May 1.—The German cruiser First Bismarck received off Tsing-Tau yesterday a number of wireless messages which are believed to have come from a distance of about twenty-five miles.

The officers were unable to translate the messages.

TOKIO, May 1.—It is believed that Admiral Rojestvensky continues to use the ports of Indo-China for the purpose of obtaining coal and other supplies and for maintaining communication with St. Petersburg.

The Japanese press is again questioning the good faith of the recent assurances of France. The Government here is silent, but it is believed that the Ministers are preparing to renew the neutrality question with France.

PARIS, May 1.—The renewed agitation in the Japanese press relative to France's alleged non-observance of neutrality attracts attention here, but the Foreign Office says there has been no further official consideration of the subject and that none is expected, as France has given the most ample assurances that she intends to observe neutrality, and these are being fully carried out.

Consequently the Government view is that the question is closed so far as France is concerned, as she has done everything within her power to secure the observance of neutrality.

This doubtless will be the response if Japan makes further representations, which, however, has not been indicated by any action on the part of Dr. Motono, the Japanese Minister.

DIPLOMACY AIDS LINEVITCH.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 1.—The operations in Manchuria are assuming a distinctly novel phase, inasmuch as the capture of Tung-hu-Siang precludes the existence of the supposed formidable flanking movement north of Fengwang-Cheng toward Vladivostok.

According to the correspondent of the Novoe Vremya at Gunshu Pass the Japanese are preparing to hurl a large force from Northeastern Korea along the Hun-Chun—Ninguta road.

Russian diplomacy is helping Gen. Linevitch by ascertaining that the frontier line of Mongolia is twenty miles west of the Da-Liao River, which will enable the Russians to extend their scouting operations and compel any hostile flanking column to march through the trackless desert.

REWARD FOR GOLL'S ARREST.

MILWAUKEE, May 1.—A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the arrest of Henry G. Goll, formerly assistant cashier of the First National Bank, who disappeared on the day the defalcation of Frank G. Bigelow became known.

Bigelow walked down town to-day and had a short conference with John C. Brodhead. He is under constant surveillance. His son's house, where he is stopping, is watched night and day, and when Bigelow leaves it a detective follows.

That Bigelow's son Gordon was responsible for his father's downfall is not only denied by some of the banker's friends, but it is reported that the elder Bigelow was aided in his transactions by $400,000 which Gordon Bigelow had made in wheat speculation.

The Wisconsin Trust and Security Company, receiver of the Frank G. Bigelow estate, was authorized to-day by Judge Landis to make emergency sales of bonds and other securities and to take other action in the interests of the creditors without special court orders.

The receiver reports that many of the Bigelow securities are of substantial market value and are in some cases in excess of liabilities for which they were pledged.

MET SISTER THOUGHT DEAD.

Brother, Going to Cemetery with Wrong Body, Saw Her in Street.

NEW DURHAM, N. J., May 1.—While on the way to bury the body of a woman supposed to be his sister who died on April 3 last in St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken, Conrad Ritter met his sister this morning in Second Avenue, near Thirty-second Street, Manhattan. He was walking along Second Avenue to take a boat at the Thirty-fourth Street Ferry for Long Island City, when he met her face to face.

A woman named Anna Reiter died in St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken on April 3 last and the body was interred when no one claimed it. Ritter learned that the dead woman resembled his sister, and yesterday ordered that the body be disinterred and buried in a cemetery on Long Island.

ANTI-RACE SUICIDE PLAN.

Chicago Alderman After Landlords Who Object to Children.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Alderman Ruxton to-night introduced an ordinance entitled "An Act to Prevent Unjust Discrimination by Landlords Against Parents."

It set forth that many landlords refused to rent flats to families in which there were children or infants, "thereby discouraging and militating against the probable increase of population in Chicago, contrary to the injunction imposed upon our first parents upon their expulsion from the Garden of Eden, to multiply and replenish the earth, and against the policy and purpose of our National Administration."

The ordinance provides that any landlord who shall refuse to rent any house or flat to families in which there are children, shall be subject to a fine of not less than $5 or more than $100. If the landlord shall establish the fact that the "children in any such family are of a boisterous disposition, and likely to disturb the peace or dignity of such house or flat, it shall constitute a good defense."

The ordinance was referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

HELD FOR ATTACKING WOMAN.

Man Identified as Mrs. Downes's Assailant Is Arrested.

Charged with assaulting Mrs. George B. Downes, wife of the manager of the Newton Chemical Company, at 18 West Twenty-third Street, in her apartments at 160 West Eighty-fourth Street on the afternoon of April 28, a man said to be Joseph Saivel, twenty-three years old, a laborer, was lodged yesterday in the West Sixty-eighth Street Station.

In charge of Capt. Cooney and Detective Sergeant Mahoney, Saivel was taken to the bedside of Mrs. Downes late last night. They say that she positively identified the prisoner as her assailant. He is also charged with robbing her of $35.

Mrs. Downes was so badly injured by the assault, according to the police, that she has been confined to her bed ever since.

It is asserted by Detective Sergeant Mahoney that the man was engaged with a gang of men working on fire escapes on the apartment house at 160 West Eighty-fourth Street.

The Downeses live on the top floor. They allege that the work was completed in February, but that Saivel returned on the pretext that there was more work to be done on the structure.

Mrs. Downes was alone in the apartment at the time. The police say that when Saivel got out of the window to the fire-escape Mrs. Downes turned her back, and that, when he saw this, Saivel jumped back into the room and felled the woman to the floor.

They declare that he beat her into unconsciousness and then robbed a security box of $35. Mrs. Downes was found unconscious by her husband and the police were notified.

It is said that the woman was so severely injured that her life has been despaired of.

SIX ARRESTS FOLLOW DEATH.

Police Try to Solve Mystery at North Bennington, Vt.

BENNINGTON, Vt., May 1.—Six young men have been placed under arrest on suspicion, pending investigation of the death of Frederick H. Bartlett, the North Bennington young man whose body was found in the streets of that town at 3 o'clock this morning.

The prisoners all belong here and, the police say, were with Bartlett in the saloon of Charles Allen, at Walloomsac, New York, on Saturday night. The police theory is that Bartlett was murdered and his body carried to North Bennington, where it was left in front of the first National Bank Building.

At first it was thought to be a case of heart disease, but on investigation it was found that the man had received a knock-out blow on the back of the head, and there were many black and blue places on his abdomen. Drs. Newton and Gleason were of the opinion that Bartlett had been dead three hours when the body was found.

OGDEN PARTY RESTING.

Side Trips About Newport News Taken—Word from Prof. Farnam.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 1.—R. C. Ogden and his party rested here to-day. All the injured were about and joined in the various expeditions to the fort, Hampton, Norfolk, and Portsmouth. There was no regular programme.

To the surprise of the men in the party, only two of whom had evening clothes that escaped damage in the wreck, the ladies appeared in gorgeous costumes. The apparent mystery was solved when one confessed in the evening that she and others had telegraphed to New York for apparel to take the place of that burned up in the wrecked baggage car at Greenville, S. C.

A telegram was received from Prof. Farnam of Yale at Greenville that he and his wife were doing well and expected soon to start North. He said the splendid care of the Southern people would never be forgotten.

RACE ON SENATE BUILDING.

Plan to Complete It Simultaneously with House's Quarters.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—A big race has been started between the buildings authorized by Congress for the use of the Senate and the House of Representatives. They are to occupy the squares flanking the present Capitol grounds on the north and south sides. The House building was started a year ago, and the work of excavation hastened by building a railroad across the plaza in front of the Capitol.

Although the Senate building is handicapped, Superintendent Elliott Woods says he will push the work so as to have both buildings go up simultaneously. They will be of the same size and style, and are to be connected by a subway running to the new union station of the Pennsylvania Road.

The earth taken out will be carried over a trestle to fill in two blocks south of the new station so as to give a nearly level approach from the Capitol to the station. About $20,000,000 is to be spent on the two office buildings and the station.

UPHOLDS WAR REVENUE ACT.

United States Supreme Court Sustains Previous Decisions.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Supreme Court of the United States to-day denied the petitions for writs of certiorari in the cases of the Leather Manufacturers' National Bank of New York and the New York Telephone Company vs. Internal Revenue Collector Treat, thus leaving in effect the decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

In both cases the War Revenue act of 1898 was attacked. The bank case raised the question of its validity as affecting undivided profits, while the telephone case dealt with the tax on messages.

The law was sustained by the Court of Appeals in both cases.

NAN PATTERSON CASE MAY GO TO JURY TO-DAY

Defense, in Summing Up, Suggests That Young Bought Pistol.

WOMEN SENT OUT OF COURT

Score Who Showed Undue Interest in Proceedings Told by the Recorder to Leave.

Before nightfall the case of Nan Patterson, who is accused of the murder of "Caesar" Young, probably will be in the hands of the jury. Abraham Levy, leading counsel for the defense, finished his summing up at 6 o'clock P. M. yesterday. This morning Assistant District Attorney Rand will begin his closing address. It is thought that he will not speak for more than three hours. If this supposition proves correct, Recorder Goff will deliver his charge at the afternoon session of court, and the jury will then retire to deliberate upon its verdict.

Mr. Levy urged the jury to acquit the prisoner or to bring in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

"Either she killed Caesar Young or she did not kill him," he earnestly declared. "If, not quite satisfied of her guilt, you seek to ease your consciences by finding a verdict of murder in a lesser degree than that with which she is charged, or of manslaughter, you are violating your oaths, and are just as guilty of wrongdoing as many a criminal arraigned before this bar. She is either guilty or not guilty. We want no compromise."

Two explanations of the death of Young were advanced by Mr. Levy. One—that the bookmaker had committed suicide—was urged at the previous trial. The other—that he had been killed by accident—was dwelt upon at length.

In substantiation of the suicide theory Mr. Levy argued that it was entirely reasonable to suppose that Young had bought the pistol himself. He said that the description of the man who made the purchase, as given by Pawnbroker Stern, fitted Young as well as it did Smith. Young, he said, might have flourished the pistol to frighten Nan Patterson, and it might then have been discharged in a struggle.

CROWD GREATER THAN EVER.

The closing scenes of the trial are arousing public interest to a degree almost unprecedented in the history of criminal cases in New York. An hour before the doors were opened yesterday morning the court building was besieged by a throng which numbered thousands. Some of those who sought admission said they were relatives of President Roosevelt, of Police Commissioner McAdoo, of Mayor McClellan, and other distinguished men. Even those who were connected with the case had difficulty in getting in.

As soon as Recorder Goff took his seat he ordered the room cleared of all who were without seats. In the afternoon he caused the ejectment of a score of women who were taking undue interest in the proceedings. As they moved toward the door their faces were crimson with mortification, but the order was enforced. Four-fifths of those who succeeded in getting in were women.

It was 11:08 o'clock when Mr. Levy began his summing up. He was still speaking when recess was announced for an hour at 1:30, and continued his address from the reconvening of the court, at 2:30, until 6 o'clock. He sought to discredit the methods pursued by the Assistant District Attorney in presenting his case, and once his attack was so savage that Mr. Rand, who was taking notes, rose and entered a disclaimer.

Nan Patterson, who was dressed in black, plainly realized that the critical moment in the trial was approaching.

Mr. Levy began by urging upon the jury the necessity for care in examining circumstantial evidence. "The burden of proof is not on the defendant," he said.

"Mr. Rand sought to impress upon you that the pawn tickets submitted in evidence were dated June 3. As a matter of fact they bore the date of October. I had them put in evidence as an object lesson of the unfair tactics to which the prosecutor has resorted. He also told you about $50,000 which he says was lavished by Young on the defendant when he knew the case was barren of any such evidence.

MET YOUNG WHEN SHE WAS 19.

"What is there against this girl? She went on the stage, but it was to make an honest living. She met Young when she was but nineteen years old. Who was the stronger?"

Mr. Levy declared that there was nothing to show that the defendant had been disloyal to Young. He said the letter to Coggins which Mr. Rand put in evidence to show a mercenary motive was written before she met the bookmaker.

Mr. Levy referred to the grief displayed by the defendant when she learned that Young was dead. He said that if she had meant to kill him she had ample time the night before. If she had plotted murder she could not have planned to commit it on a street in broad daylight. There was no evidence, he contended, to show that a threat had been made on the part of the defendant, except the Julia Smith letter, which was excluded.

The attorney commented upon the fact that while Stern had been called to the stand, the pawnbroker's clerk had not. He intimated that it was to leave the time of purchase open. With the pistol found in Young's pocket Mr. Levy declared that the wound might have been self-inflicted. He attacked the testimony of Mellin and McKean, on the ground that it was prejudiced.

Mr. Rand's failure to identify Smith as the man who bought the pistol was made much of. The idea that, the Smiths being known to Stern, they would go to his shop to buy a weapon with which to do murder, was scoffed at.

"They would have been driveling idiots to go together to a shop where they were known and make such a purchase. It is just as likely that Young bought it himself," said Mr. Levy.

He reminded the jury that the defendant, after having parted from Young on the night before his death, was asleep when he called for her by telephone the next morning, not once, but three times.

"Is it not plain," he asked, "that the meeting at Columbus Circle must have been sought by Young. If he did not wish to see Nan Patterson, what earthly power was there to prevent him from getting into a cab with his wife at the residence of the brother-in-law and driving to his steamship. Why should he have come all the way from One Hundred and Fortieth Street to Fifty-ninth Street unless he was trying to see the defendant?"

The District Attorney's office is investigating a story of suppressed evidence which was published yesterday morning. This story, which involved the holding of a second autopsy and the withholding of the facts shown by it, inasmuch as it failed to coincide with the findings of Dr. O'Hanlon, was denied, and now witnesses have been subpoenaed to ascertain its origin.

HANDBOOK MAN HAD RUNNERS

Police Say Nelson Did Business at Hotels by Messengers.

John Nelson, known to the police as "Doc" Hewitt, an alleged handbook man whom the police have been seeking for two months, was arrested yesterday afternoon by detectives attached to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station and charged with making book on the horse races.

Nelson, who is more than sixty-five years old, smooth in manner, and dapper in appearance, has been making his headquarters of late in a café on Columbus Avenue. From that place, the police declare, he has sent out relays of negro messengers, who have searched the hotels in the vicinity, notably the Dakota, the Majestic, the Manhattan Square, and the Endicott, looking for business.

Up to about six weeks ago Nelson, it is said, operated from an uptown hotel's cafe, in spite of efforts made by the police to [illegible]

RIFLE-ARMED DRIVERS MAN CHICAGO WAGONS

Employers Serve Out Weapons to Awe the Striking Teamsters.

TO ASK FOR FEDERAL TROOPS

Army of Strike Breakers Arrives—Girl Messengers in Carriages Fool Union Pickets.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 1.—With the arrival in this city to-day of 1,500 strike breakers brought here by the Employers' Teaming Association the strike entered upon an exceedingly ugly phase, and the association, in the absence of what it deems adequate police protection, decided to arm its men.

Over 1,000 rifles were purchased, and during the latter part of the afternoon a number of wagons went through the streets with a rifle lying across the knees of each driver and his assistant. To-morrow, whenever a wagon of the Employers' Teaming Association goes through the streets, a rifle will be carried on each wagon in open view.

The association to-day also made arrangements to call for United States troops.

"In behalf of the company," said Victor W. Sincere, counsel for the new teaming company, "I shall make an urgent request on Levi Mayer, counsel for the Chicago Employers' Association, that he demand of the Federal Government troops to be used in strike duty at once."

When Mayor Dunne was informed of the fact that rifles would be carried by non-union men, he was visibly disturbed, and declared that the police would not be permitted to authorize the carrying of arms by any one, whether in the employment of the Employers' Teaming Association or affiliated with the strikers.

"The Chief of Police will give no authority to any one to carry arms," the Mayor said. "I had not heard of the matter before, but the City of Chicago will not authorize the carrying of arms."

Chief of Police O'Neil, however, declared that if the employers armed their men the police could not legally interfere, as long as the weapons were not concealed.

"There is no law against the carrying of weapons in the open," the Chief declared. "If the men keep the weapons in full view on their wagons, or by their sides, the police cannot interfere. There is a law against shooting within the city limits, and also a law against brandishing a weapon in a threatening manner, and both of these laws will be strictly enforced by the police. I disapprove of the arming."

The City Council to-night passed a resolution directing the Chief of Police to enforce that portion of the State statutes which prohibits the carrying of rifles in the streets by unauthorized persons.

The Employers' Association took a further aggressive step to-day by which it is sought to line up additional interests against the strikers. A demand was made on five transfer and teaming companies that they deliver merchandise to the boycotted firms or take the consequences. If the companies comply their men will strike. If they do not comply they are threatened with the loss of business from interests controlled by the Employers' Association. The companies were told that the time had come when they must take their stand either with the employers or the strikers.

The vanguard of the strike breakers arrived this morning, when Frank Farley brought 346 men, mostly negroes, from St. Louis. The recruits were met at the station by 100 policemen, under command of Lieut. Mooney. The newcomers were marched four abreast to a lodging house on State Street, where 250 of them, negroes, were left. The others, mostly Greeks, Italians, and other foreigners, were taken to a hotel in Clark Street. Curry tried to have his men sworn in as deputies or special policemen, but in each case his request was denied.

The strike spread to-day to the drivers of the delivery wagons of retail grocery stores. These declared that they would not call for goods at any wholesale establishment where a strike existed. As the teamsters are on strike at almost all the wholesale groceries, the apparently visible supply of food for the citizens of Chicago is limited to the stocks now held by the retail dealers. The drivers for the latter also declared that they would refuse to handle meat if any strike occurred in the stock yards.

Girl messengers, riding in carriages driven by men wearing coachmen's conventional livery, were used by some of the department stores to-day to make delivery of urgent orders. The ruse worked well, and it was hours before the union pickets discovered that the carriers were not private conveyances of well-to-do patrons of the stores.

The Federal Government is helping Chicago department stores in a way that is beyond interference of the teamsters. Thousands of small packages are being delivered by mail through the United States Street Railway postal cars.

Rioting was more open and vicious, and the attacks of non-union men were more frequent and daring to-day than at any time since the beginning of the strike. In one instance a crowd of 500 men attacked the independent negro drivers of Marshall Field & Co. One of the drivers, becoming frightened, emptied a revolver to protect himself, and five men were more or less seriously wounded.

A mob, containing many women and numbering fully 2,000, attacked to-night sixteen non-union men who were going to the station under the guard of a squad of police. Several non-union men were injured with stones and many of the mob suffered wounds from the clubs of the policemen. A number of arrests were made.

Another crowd attacked four coal wagons, which were guarded by eight private detectives. The non-union men were pelted with stones. The detectives, drawing revolvers, charged into the crowd, and a riot call brought the police to the scene. The crowd was dispersed, and the detectives were arrested for carrying concealed weapons.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The idea of detailing an officer of the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate the Chicago strike is under consideration, and it is said that such a detail will probably be made. The investigation, if made, will be for the general information of the department, and not necessarily as a basis for action.

However, we took the initiative and provided for such an emergency long before prices for woolens ascended to their present point. As to the fashioning and tailoring of these suits, they are characterized by all the earmarks of the high class custom tailor. Single and double breasted models, both—with our "Concave" Shoulder and "Closefitting" Collar.

Involved are the popular smooth finished gray worsteds, in light and dark tones, characterized by exclusive patterns. Also blue and black Thibets and serges, cheviots, tweeds and cassimeres.

MAY DAY PESSIMISM.

Everything Out of Joint, According to Socialist Labor Orators.

At a May Day mass meeting at Cooper Union last night under the auspices of the Socialist Labor Party, the speakers scored feudalism, benevolent and otherwise, capitalism of every conceivable kind, unsocialized trades unionism, socialism of the non-belligerent type, and every other sort of ism not within the pale of the Socialist Labor Party.

It was a very large and very orderly meeting, attended by more than 1,000 well-dressed and well-mannered, clean-faced, and clear-eyed men and women, but every time one of the speakers gave a more than usually vicious shaking to the octopus, those quiet persons got on their feet and made the place ring with frantic cheers. When not occupied with capital, the orators divided their time and their epithets impartially between the Czar and Andrew Carnegie, President Roosevelt, and "the labor fakirs Gompers and Mitchell," Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts, and "Belmont's comrade, McClellan."

The centre of the stage was held by the founder of the party, Daniel De Leon, a picturesque elderly gentleman. When he rose to speak the audience set up a two-minute yell. Mr. De Leon was very mild, however, compared with Chairman J. T. Vaughan, John Keneally, William H. Carroll of Boston, and other speakers.

Bakers Call Only May Day Strikes.

May 1, which is usually the day of big strikes throughout the country, started in this city yesterday with no trouble of any consequence. The men in the building trades have had agreements with their employers, and the only trouble was with the union bakers, who ordered strikes for the ten-hour work day in fifteen small bakeries which employ from five to fifteen men each. The large bakers in the Bronx and Yorkville, who have made agreements with the unions, decided to stand by the ten-hour clause of these agreements.

BASEBALL PLAYERS FIGHT.

Catcher "Jack" Warner Hits Clymer in Neck During Game.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 1.—The long run of hard luck and the palpable effort of one Pittsburg player to spike "Jack" Warner yesterday, with the Pittsburg's success later, paved the way for a decided feeling of hostility to that team to-day, and in the fifth inning Catcher Warner hit Otis Clymer deliberately in the neck, after Clymer had bunted him out of the way on his dash for home.

The teams bunched around the combatants, and Umpire O'Day, and an interesting two minutes followed, after which O'Day drove Warner off the field, and put the strenuous right fielder of the visitors out of the game.

Serge Suits

Officially designated by the exclusive to-order tailors as Raymond Blue—and a dignified blue it is. The serge is a rough surface weave altogether new. Ready-for-service we have suits of Raymond Blue serge in the two new single-breasted sack models—one straight edge and the other slightly cutaway, half lined with mohair. The little knacks in which the to-order tailorman delights, such as false cuffs, deep vents and silk piped inside seams, all help to establish these suits as distinctive.

PANAMA LOTTERY DECISION.

Claim of Non-Jurisdiction Denied by United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The petition for a review of his case made by Oli Nifon, the Chinese agent in the Isthmian Canal zone for the Panama Lottery Company, was denied to-day by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Nifon contended that his concession antedated the treaty between the United States and Panama, and that therefore the United States courts of the zone were without jurisdiction in the matter. He was prosecuted for violation of the anti-lottery laws, and sought to escape through a writ of habeas corpus.

If you but knew what excellent laces you may select at 25c. you'd be here to-day.

IF you weren't here yesterday you cannot comprehend the tremendous quantity of fine imported laces and embroideries we sold at less than half prices. The sale is one that has no parallel in the annals of lace selling. Those who came intending to purchase eight, ten or twelve yards bought fifty or seventy yards, so astounding were the values, but we were prepared—25,000 yards of sample strips in laces alone and thousands of yards of embroideries constituted the largest showing ever placed on sale in New York. To-day the showing is fully as attractive—the selection equally desirable with that of Monday.

25c. But the sale is not half over. All this week it will continue, or as long as our splendid stock is equal to the extraordinary buying. Of course, in a sale of this kind it is advisable to come as near the beginning as possible, and that's why we are giving you this information to-day. 10c.

We know you want such laces—we know you must have them in making your Summer apparel. The qualities are the finest produced in Europe—the styles a little in advance of anything heretofore on sale. We bought the manufacturer's entire stock of sample strips, which, of themselves, insure you the greatest possible variety in perfect quality.

Variety of 75c and $1 laces 25c.

A yearly looked forward to event—one that always creates intense buying enthusiasm. The sale is greater than ever this year—laces were never so much in demand—so lavishly used—as this year.

25c for 75c. to $1.00 laces. 98c for $2.50 to $3.50 laces.

50c for $1.25 to $2.00 laces. $1.48 for $3.75 to $5.00 laces.

The collection is simply bewildering—it represents the styles now in vogue as well as advance styles for Fall, as well as laces made exclusively for Paris, London and Vienna—you'll never be able to buy laces at these prices again this year—embroidered net allovers—Venise lace allovers, Baby Irish lace allovers, Seed net laces, Venise applique laces, Venise garlands, Pompadour net laces, Lierre embroidered net laces, Point Gauze laces, Irish Point laces, Net top laces and Rose Point effects.

The season's entire collection of sample or trial lengths of embroideries—from three of the largest St. Gall makers—a great variety—all made on hand looms—not a yard of power loom embroideries in this sale.

15c for 25c. to 35c. embroideries. 39c for $1 to $1.50 embroideries.

This assortment consists of English eyelet effects—French hand made effects—sheer needlework effects—Irish and Scotch embroidery—Irish Point effects—Teneriffe effects, &c., &c. Bands, insertions, edgings, matched sets, flouncings, corset cover embroideries, baby embroideries, dress embroideries, skirt embroideries, &c., in nainsook, cambric and Swiss. Divided into four great lots—extra salespeople to wait upon you. Don't miss this rare buying opportunity—embroideries were never so popular.

10,000 dozen yards French and Val. laces at 55c.

An aggregation that comprises all the latest patterns and designs—many of them exclusive with us—insertions and edgings in matched widths—so desirable at this season of the year for trimming the popular Lingerie Hats, for edges on the new flounced dresses, for combining with heavier laces on the new style waists, for making entire waists, for trimming the children's dainty white dresses—in fact for use in many instances where daintiness is a desirable feature. This is one of the most exceptional lace buying occasions of the season—it will pay you to avail of it—French and Val. laces at, yd., 55c

OUR prices stand out most attractively when compared with those other stores ask. Of course we have an advantage in importing our mattings direct, selling so many that we in this way secure them at marked concessions, while it would cost some stores more to import direct than to buy of the importer. FOR MUTUALIZATION, WHATEVER COURT SAYS

Hyde Will Trustee Stock If Lord Gets Injunction.

AND CARRY OUT THE PLAN

Declares in Affidavit That Success of Scheme Depended Upon His Consent as Majority Stockholder.

In an affidavit accompanying his amended petition of intervention in the Lord suit to restrain the Directors and officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society from putting into effect the amended charter, James H. Hyde has made to Judge Maddox, before whom the matter comes, in Brooklyn, a proposal that in the event that the injunction be granted he will transfer his stock holdings to trustees for a term of years, the trustees having the power to vote the stock for twenty-eight Directors nominated by the policy holders of the Equitable and twenty-four named by himself. The amended petition was filed with the court late yesterday afternoon, and argument will be made this morning upon a motion of counsel for the Equitable to strike out certain parts of it.

The affidavit rehearses, over Mr. Hyde's signature, the history of the mutualization movement in the Board of Directors, bringing out several facts not heretofore made public. In an accompanying brief Samuel Untermyer, Mr. Hyde's counsel, sets up that the mutualization of the society could not have been legally voted by the Directors without the consent of three-fifths of the stock, as provided in Section 32 of the stock corporation law of this State.

Mr. Hyde's affidavit is, in part, as follows:

"When the question of divesting the stock of its control in the election of Directors and vesting the same in the policy holders was first brought to the attention of the Board of Directors, and when the board passed its first resolution in favor of mutualization, this action was based on the assumption that there was lawful authority for indemnifying the stock for its loss of control and for retiring the same.

"Counsel for the society subsequently advised that there was no power in the corporation to acquire the stock. Thereupon differences arose between the six counsel retained by the society as to the power to deprive the stock of its control by amendment of the charter under Section 52 of the insurance law, counsel being equally divided on that subject. It was claimed on the one hand that Section 52 authorized such action, and on the other, first, that the section in question had no application in this case; second, that if it applied it was beyond the power of the Legislature to take away the vested property rights of the stockholders without their consent to the possession, management, and control of the property of the corporation, and was also a violation of the obligation of the contract between the defendant and the stockholders as embodied in the charter; third, that in any event Section 52 of the insurance law must be read in connection with Section 32 of the stock corporation law, and that no amendment of the charter would be valid without the consent of three-fifths of the stock given in pursuance of a vote of the stockholders at a meeting held as required by Section 32 of said corporation law.

ALL WITH HYDE'S CONSENT.

"I am a member of the Board of Directors, and was present at all the meetings at which this subject was considered. At no time did said board vote on any proposition connected with the subject of mutualization except with my consent as a holder of the majority of the stock.

"The amended charter in the form in which it is now before the Superintendent of Insurance was approved by the Board of Directors as a compromise measure and as the result of protracted negotiations. It was distinctly understood, and agreed by all the Directors who voted for said amended charter that as a condition of the surrender by the majority of the stock to the policy holders of the right to elect twenty-eight Directors there should always be reserved to such majority of the stock the right to elect the remaining twenty-four Directors, and that no further amendment of the charter should be made except with the consent of three-fifths of the stock. It is pursuant to this consent of the stock and upon the understanding that these rights were to be reserved that the Board of Directors, including my co-trustee and myself, voted unanimously in favor of the amendment of the charter."

Mr. Hyde says that Mr. Root was thereupon designated by the board at the request of all interests to act as counsel for the society in presenting the amended charter to the Superintendent of Insurance for his approval. He continues:

TARBELL AND ALEXANDER.

"Since the beginning of this action James W. Alexander, the President, and Gage E. Tarbell, the Second Vice President, both of whom voted in the Board of Directors in favor of the amended charter on the terms and conditions above stated and on the distinct understanding that such amendment was to be taken by the society and the Board of Directors as a compromise and settlement of the conflicting claims for the mutualization of the society, and that there was to be reserved to the stock the right to elect twenty-four of the fifty-two Directors, in violation of said agreement and of their pledges renewed the agitation to take away from the stock the rights thus reserved to it by the agreement of all parties.

"Although said amended charter was agreed to by the board on the express agreement that it should represent the measure of participation which the policy holders were to be allowed, and the extent which the rights of the stock were to be preserved, until three-fifths of the stock should consent to further amendment, the said Alexander and Tarbell have been abetting and encouraging the agents of the company to agitate for a mutualization that would take from the stock the rights reserved to it and for a transfer to the policy holders of the power to elect all the Directors to the exclusion of the stock.

"In view of the fact that the concessions made by me resulting in the assent of the majority of the stock to the said amended charter were so made as a compromise and settlement of the conflicting claims and for the purpose of composing all questions of difference notwithstanding the advice of counsel that no such amendment could be made either by the Superintendent or the Legislature without the consent of the stock, and having regard to the occurrences since such concessions were made, I have taken further advice with respect to my rights and the necessity that it will be necessary for me to take to protect them against further encroachment."

WILL NOTE STOCK.

Mr. Hyde says that since filing his petition he has been advised that in order to make effectual the amendment of the charter there should be a vote of three-fifths of the stock in favor of such to-carry out the substance of the arrangement made with the Board of Directors pursuant to which the board voted for the said amended charter. To that end they are willing that the majority of the stock shall be transferred for a term of years to trustees, with power to vote for twenty-eight Directors as determined by the policy holders and for the remaining twenty-four Directors as designated by your petitioner Hyde, subject to the arrangement of details and conditions."

BRIEF FOR LORD.

Edward M. Shepard, who is counsel for Franklin B. Lord in the suit, filed his brief with Judge Maddox, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn, yesterday. That of counsel for the society has yet to be submitted.

Mr. Shepard recites the allegations of his complaint which are not denied as follows: That many of the policies of the Equitable do not give to the holders any share in the surplus; that although other policies do give to holders a limited share, no policy is issued which entitles the holder to any definite share, and none of the existing policies requires the division of the entire surplus among the policy holders. Mr. Shepard also quotes his original allegations that in each year in which the society has been writing insurance, its assets, after deducting debts and liabilities, and providing for contingent liabilities, have been sufficient to allow the setting aside of a steadily increasing amount to surplus account and also that President Alexander had said in a published interview that the amount of such surplus at the present time was at least $10,000,000.

On this basis Mr. Shepard remarks that "it is possible, and, perhaps, probable that upon the trial of this case and before final decree the court will reach some judgment on the ownership of the surplus."

For the purposes of the present motion, that is, for a preliminary injunction, he continues, it is sufficient that the stockholders own the $100,000 stock of the company, and that the absolute power of control of the society would, under the proposed amended charter, be taken out of their hands. The brief continues.

OWNERSHIP OF SURPLUS.

"Whatever facts may be set up by the defendant's answer when that shall be interposed, or whatever shall be its denials, the case in its present stage must—if the matter of surplus be material—proceed upon the basis of the ownership by the stockholders of all the surplus over and above the complete satisfaction of all claims of policy holders and other creditors, present, future, and contingent.

"It is undisputed that, in large part, the policies of the defendant have accorded to the policy holders no right whatever to the surplus, and that none of the policies have been written on the basis of ownership by the policy holders of the entire surplus. It is undisputed that the stockholders have the right to suspend business. If they should do so, or if the company should be wound up upon such a suspension, whether upon a repeal of the charter or upon the intervention of the Attorney General or otherwise, the assets remaining, after the complete satisfaction of all outstanding policies or other contracts of the company, would be distributable to the stockholders."

The provision of the Equitable's charter that the business shall be carried on on a "mutual" plan, Mr. Shepard declares, in no way affects the question of surplus ownership. He cites the charter of the United States Life Insurance Company and that of the Washington Life, as showing instances in which stockholders receive their share of surplus even though the business is conducted on a mutual plan, and declares his intention to argue the question at a subsequent time if it be found material.

At considerable length in his brief Mr. Shepard treats of the right of the Directors to amend the charter without the consent of the stock, contending, as he did when the preliminary argument was made, that the stockholders did not receive due notice of the proposed change in the system of voting.

The Frick investigating committee held the first of its daily sessions in the Equitable yesterday, with President Alexander in attendance, and it was reported that the case of Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell came before it.

CORTELYOU TO HEAD SOCIETY?

Washington Report Says He Is—Denied Here—Cortelyou Silent.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—It is reported here that Postmaster General Cortelyou has been agreed upon for President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York, as a compromise between President Alexander of that society and First Vice President Hyde. This arrangement is said to have been brought about by United States Senator Knox and Henry C. Frick, Chairman of the Investigating Committee of the society.

Mr. Cortelyou declines to discuss the matter.

Mr. Frick said after leaving a meeting of the Executive Committee of the society yesterday morning that there was no truth in the report sent from Washington that the Presidency had been or would be offered to George B. Cortelyou, Postmaster General. Mr. Frick took occasion to repeat his former assertion that all discussion of such matters was premature and without foundation until the investigating committee finished its work.

JUDGE HINTS AT INQUIRY.

Says District Attorney Might Present Matter to Grand Jury.

Everybody who heard Judge Cowing swear in the May Grand Jury in the General Sessions Court yesterday wondered as to the significance of the court's charge referring to a possible investigation.

"The newspapers have been full of comments on recent investigations in which wrongdoing was charged," he said. "So far the District Attorney has not called my attention to the matter. Should he do so later, I will recall you and place before you any specific wrongdoing that may need your attention."

To an inquiry concerning the probable meaning of Judge Cowing's words, District Attorney Jerome replied with a laconic, "Nothing doing just now."

MORE THAN 200 IN PARTY

To-day Visitors Will Go to Philadelphia and Will Visit the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

More than 200 delegates to the International Railway Congress, at Washington, D. C., saw the most important engineering and transportation features of New York yesterday under the auspices of the Entertainment Committee of the American Section of the congress, whose Chairman is W. G. Besler, Vice President and General Manager of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Mr. Besler and his committeemen acquitted themselves admirably as cicerones, and showed the foreign delegates—they were of almost every nation—how punctual Americans can be when they really mean it. Every detail of a very comprehensive programme was carried out to the minute and the letter, and there was no hitch.

The delegates and their womenfolk, who numbered a score, met at the Transportation Club, in East Forty-second Street, at 9.A. M., and walking to the Grand Central Station, were met by General Manager A. H. Smith of the Vanderbilt system and J. A. McCormick, R. E. Slater, and J. W. Stevens of the depot staff, and were shown over the existing terminus, and given an idea of how vast and commodious will be the station and approaches now under construction. It was remarked that nine delegates out of ten spoke French, and that all were intent on acquiring information both of a general and a technical character.

Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Subway system, met the distinguished party at the Forty-second Street Station of the Interborough, and a special train was boarded, which, at express speed, took it to the north terminus of the Lenox Avenue branch, where the yards and shops were inspected. A little block in the Central Park tunnel made delay on the return trip to the City Hall, whence the special went to Thirty-third Street, where were scores of automobiles, which took the visitors to the East Thirty-fourth Street Ferry, where a special Long Island City ferryboat was waiting. At Long Island City the tunnel shafts and power house of the Pennsylvania Railroad were shown and described by General Superintendent C. L. Addison of the Long Island Railroad and General Superintendent L. T. Ford of the Pennsylvania, New York and Long Island Railroad.

More than an hour was devoted to this item of the day's programme, and the committee and its guests boarded the Long Island Railroad's ferryboat Sagamore, sumptuously fitted and bedecked for the occasion, and went to the foot of East Ninety-sixth Street. Luncheon was served on the way. At Ninety-sixth Street H. H. Vreeland, President of the New York City Railway Company, led the party to the immense power house of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. An hour was devoted to its inspection, and many of the foreign delegates said that twice the time was needed to get a bare idea of its wonders.

At 2:30 P. M. the Sagamore started down the East River for the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal at Jersey City. In spite of the brisk wind the delegates shunned the cabins to get full views of the Williamsburg and Brooklyn Bridges and the cluster of skyscrapers at the lower part of the city.

At the terminal the honors were done by George T. Smith, the Pennsylvania's General Agent. Re-embarking, the excursionists had a water view of the depots of the Central of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, Erie, Lackawanna, West Shore, and Central systems. The Sagamore went up beyond the tomb of Gen. Grant, which was saluted, and at Fifty-ninth Street made a landing, and General Manager Hedley officiated once more in showing the party over the power house of the Interborough. From the power house automobiles took all who cared for this mode of transportation to the Transportation Club.

Judging by the exclamations of the foreign delegates at every point of special interest they were entirely gratified with the outing and the salient features of the developing and finished features of New York's transportation problem.

The delegates to-day will visit Philadelphia and be entertained by a Reception Committee whose Chairman is John H. Converse. A special feature of the programme will be a visit to the Baldwin Locomotive Works, where a banquet will be served.

The Entertainment Committee who had charge of the congress delegates yesterday was photographed in a group on the Sagamore. The members present were: Chairman W. G. Besler, Secretary Frederick H. Meeder, and H. H. Vreeland, A. H. Smith, D. W. Cooke, C. L. Addison, George H. Campbell, M. B. Cutter, George L. Connor, Richard W. Meade, T. E. Clarke, George T. Smith, George H. Daniels, Louis T. Ford, Ralph Peters, and B. B. Adams.

BANQUET ON LA LORRAINE.

French Delegates and Americans Guests of M. Charles-Roux.

The sumptuous dining saloon of the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique's crack ship La Lorraine was filled last night by guests of Jules Charles-Roux, the new President of the line, who enjoyed a banquet that must have taxed the far-famed resources of both the cellar and the chef of the vessel. M. Charles-Roux were adorned with flowers and flags. President Charles-Roux occupied the centre of the central table. To his right was Charles V. Fornes, President of the Board of Aldermen, representing Mayor McClellan, unavoidably absent, and to his left the French Consul General Souffiot de Magny. Facing him was M. de Pellerin de Latduche, delegated Administrator of the French Line and of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean Railroad. Others at the tables were:

L. Bonzom,
Perretti de la Rocca,
D. Bailly Blanchard,
H. Gourd,
Morris K. Jesup,
Nevada N. Stranahan,
W. R. Wilcox,

Cigars lighted, President Charles-Roux proposed in French toasts to the President of the United States, the Governor of the State of New York, and the Mayor of the city, and explained his mission here by stating that he and M. de Contouche had been delegated by the Directorate of the Transatlantic Line to pay respect to the authorities of the United States and to the patrons of the company, with whom such cordial relations have so long existed.

The President spoke of the company's reorganization on a sound financial basis, of the coming accessions to its fleet which will assure to its patrons a prompt and rapid twin screw service, and the resolve of the company to be second to no transatlantic service. In regard to freight service the speaker announced six cargo boats, each of 10,000 tons capacity, the first of which, the Hudson, will enter this port in a few days. Mr. Charles-Roux added:

If I speak thus freely of the reorganization of our service before the distinguished representatives of our competitors, it is because I feel that the constantly growing industries, the rapid development of the commerce and agriculture of the United States, the strenuous activity of its inhabitants, and the immense wealth accumulated by them, all provide a wide field for competition and leave room for all of us, and, as we are all aware, competition is the life of trade. Our efforts will be to maintain with our competitors the most cordial and friendly relations.

In conclusion President Charles-Roux proposed a toast to the International comity of France. "All of the United States feel this obligation," he asserted. "Every American looks to France for friendship and wishes her prosperity."

Collector Stranahan voiced the sentiments of the preceding speakers in regard to the tie that binds us to the transatlantic republic, the country of Rochambeau and Lafayette, and paid a warm tribute to Minister Delcassé and our Secretary, John Hay.

Gustav H. Schwab and Emil Boas were warmly applauded when they spoke of the interest they had in the prosperity of the Transatlantic Company, and wished it every possible degree of prosperity. The rarity of such gatherings, which fostered fraternal regard, was regretted.

Of other speakers was George H. Daniels of the New York Central, who created mirth by giving a Jules Verne forecast of the future of transportation.

PLATT IN LINE, TAMMANY MAY BE, FOR GAS BILLS

Higgins Vouches for Senator After a Conference.

ALL GO TO THIRD READING

Grady and Brackett Opposing One of Six Stevens Measures—Broad Powers Proposed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 1.—Gov. Higgins announced to-night that Senator Platt was in line for gas legislation. That Tammany Hall will support all the bills except that for the State Utilities Commission, and possibly that placing the cost of meter tests on the city, is the prospect to-night.

"I believe I speak the truth," said the Governor, "when I say that Senator Platt has done nothing to block the proposed gas legislation, and I do not believe he will attempt to interfere in any way with the measure recommended by the investigating committee."

He made this statement in telling of a recent conference he had with Platt at the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday.

The Governor said he would send an emergency message on the gas bills if requested to do so by the leaders having those measures in charge. Speaking of the recommendation of the committee with respect to the granting of authority to the city to generate electricity from water courses he said:

"As I understand the recommendation of the Gas Investigating Committee, New York would be authorized to employ for power purposes such surplus water as should flow through its mains, but only for municipal purposes. It could not acquire water sources to generate electricity to sell to other communities."

Discussing the possibilities of an extraordinary session he said:

"An extra session might begin at noon Friday. I do not concede that an extraordinary session will be called. I have not been spoken to by legislators as to an extension of the regular session."

The six Gas Committee bills were introduced to-night, advanced to third reading, and made special order for Thursday morning, on written request from Senator Grady and Assemblyman Palmer, until Wednesday was allowed them to decide whether to sign or submit a minority report.

Senator Grady said that no decision had been reached by the minority, except with respect to the State Commission bill.

"Of course we will oppose that measure," he said. "Our course on the other legislation depends somewhat on the action of the Republicans. If they caucus, we will caucus. If they do not caucus, members of the minority will be left free to take whatever course they desire."

Senator Stevens to-night introduced a bill intended as a substitute for the electrical provision of Mayor McClellan's Water bill, eliminated by the Senate Cities Committee.

It provides that the Board of Water Supply of the city, subject to the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, may utilize such water as it now owns, or may hereafter acquire, for the purpose of generating an electric current for the use of the municipality, provided that no additional water shall be used for said purpose than would otherwise be required by the city.

That there will be Republican as well as Democratic opposition to the State Utilities Commission bill was indicated in the Senate to-night. Senator Brackett announced that he would fight it at every stage.

When Senator Stevens handed up the report and the bills, he moved that the bill providing for a reduction in the price of gas from $1 to 75 cents go to third reading. He was about to make similar motions with respect to the other bills, when Senator Grady asked that the report of the committee be passed on first, as he had a motion to make in connection with it.

After the report had been accepted and ordered printed, Senator Grady sent a written memorandum to the desk to be read, signed by himself and Assemblyman Palmer. It urged that no action be taken until Wednesday, so that the minority members might be able to make up their minds either to sign or prepare a minority report.

There was a long wrangle over this request, but it finally was granted.

When the gas bills were presented in the Assembly, Minority Leader Palmer handed up a similar memorandum to that sent to the desk by Senator Grady.

"I hope that no objection will be offered to the granting of this request," said Speaker Nixon, and none was.

Besides the four bills relating to the price of gas and electricity made public last night, two others provide for a State Utilities Commission and for gas test by the city. The Commission of Gas and Electricity is to consist of three Commissioners to be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, one of whom shall be designated by the Governor as Chairman. The term is to be six years and the salary $8,000 a year.

No person shall be eligible to the commission or to hold any office under the commission who holds an official relation to any gas or electric light or power corporation, or who owns stocks or bonds therein.

The principal office of the commission shall be in Albany, with branch offices in New York and Buffalo. The commission may appoint such officers, clerks, inspectors, and experts as may be required to carry out the provisions of the act. Traveling expenses not to exceed $500 a month are allowed to the commission.

Authority is given over all lighting and power corporations to investigate the quality of gas and electricity supplied, the methods used in transmitting heat and power, and to order such improvements as will best promote public interests.

The commission shall fix the standard of illuminating power and purity of gas, and establish a standard of pressure at which gas shall be delivered.

It shall have power to prescribe methods of keeping accounts in book. It is given authority to examine all persons and corporations under its supervision in order to see that their property is maintained and operated in compliance with the provisions of law and of their franchises and charters.

The commission shall require each corporation under its supervision to submit to it an annual report verified by oath of the President, Treasurer, and General Manager thereof showing in detail.

1. The amount of its authorized capital stock.
2. The amount of its authorized bonded indebtedness and the amount of its bonds issued and outstanding.
3. Its receipts and expenditures during the preceding year.
4. The amount paid as dividends upon its stock and as interest upon its bonds.
5. The amount paid as salaries to its officers and wages to its employes.
6. The location of its plant and systems with a full description of its property and franchises.
7. Such other facts pertaining to the operation and maintenance of the plant and the affairs of such corporation as may be required by the commission.

The commission is to make an annual report to the Legislature.

It is to have power to inspect all lighting and power plants, examine the books of all lighting and power companies, to subpoena witnesses, and administer oaths in any proceeding instituted by it.

It is to have full power and control of the inspection of gas and electric meters by any State or Municipal officer appointed for such purpose.

No new lighting or power corporation shall exercise any of its powers until it obtains a certificate of authority from the commission.

Stocks or bonds shall not be issued by any lighting or power corporation until the certificate of authority to do business has been issued by the commission. No lease or transfer of franchise, works, or plant, by Gas and Electricity shall appoint inspectors, who shall inspect and test the illuminating gas manufactured within the City of New York or furnished or sold to said city or any consumer therein. The compensation of said Inspectors shall be fixed by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and paid by the city. The gas manufactured, furnished, or sold as aforesaid shall be tested with reference to illuminating power, pressure, and purity in a suitable manner and by proper apparatus at least once each day, and shall also be tested whenever the said Commissioner shall direct. The Inspectors shall report under oath the results of their tests to the said Commissioner daily, and the said Commissioner shall file the said reports in his office, and the same shall be public records and shall be presumptive evidence of the facts stated therein in any suit brought to recover any penalty for violation of any law relative to the illuminating power, pressure, or purity of said gas, and in any suit for any purpose between any corporation, association, copartnership, or person furnishing or selling illuminating gas, and the City of New York or any consumer therein in which the facts stated in said report shall be relevant."

SAY RIVALS OPPOSE TUNNEL.

Advocates of Goodsell Bills Urge Relief for Queens Borough.

The statement appearing as an advertisement yesterday morning in relation to rapid transit facilities between the Boroughs of Queens and Manhattan, over the signatures of August Belmont, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and Arthur Turnbull, President of the New York and Long Island Railroad Company, aroused great interest in both boroughs.

Opposition to the Goodsell bills has been strongly developed in Albany. Advocates of the measures say that their opponents who are crying "Grab!" represent rival corporations, Bronx real estate owners, and others who do not wish Queens Borough to offer rapid transit facilities to prospective seekers for home sites. Cord Meyer, one of the largest property holders in Queens, said yesterday:

"I cannot believe that the opposition to the Goodsell bills will prevail. They assure interborough communication between Queens and Manhattan within two years. Whenever Queens County seeks improvements it meets with opposition. The Bronx opposes because it wants all the people to cross over or under the Harlem, and rival traction or steam companies oppose because they want to carry people into New Jersey or fear the New York and Long Island Railroad will in some way benefit the Interborough. Should the Legislature fail to pass these bills, Queens will be put back ten years in its improvements and developments.

"No other improvement is so important to Queens as the Steinway tunnel. Queens is absolutely the only section of the City of New York which has not been provided with rapid transit. Hundreds of thousands of people will receive benefit."

William Barclay Parsons, consulting engineer for the Rapid Transit Commission, said yesterday that proposed changes in grades in the Steinway franchise tunnel would not in any way interfere with the Rapid Transit Commission's plans for laying out north and south tunnel routes on Second or Third Avenue.

REVISED MORTGAGE TAX BILL.

Lewis's Corrective Amendments Introduced in Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 1.—The Senate Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment to-night introduced a bill designed to correct defects in the Mortgage Tax bill, now before Gov. Higgins. Chairman Lewis issued a statement outlining the changes as follows:

Loan association mortgages of not more than $3,000 on any residence property are exempted.

The recording tax becomes operative on July 1, 1905. After July 1, 1906, the annual tax will become due.

The statement shall be binding upon the mortgagee only after the mortgage shall have been delivered to and accepted by him.

The tax may be paid at any time after 9 o'clock A. M. of July 1 of each year. At any time between 9 o'clock A. M. of July 1 and the date upon which the estimated tax on any mortgage shall be finally established, proceedings may be commenced for correction of any such tax.

A change in Section 306 provides for return of surplus moneys arising from sale of the mortgage security. Any County Treasurer or the Chamberlain of the City of New York may become a purchaser of any securities sold for collection of the tax. The share of the City of New York is to be paid into the general fund and applied to reduce taxation.

Mortgages shall be held to be usurious and void only when it has been made to appear that there has been a contract or agreement between the parties that the mortgagor pay the tax.

The provision that no court interfere by injunction or otherwise has been stricken out and an amendment inserted that no action shall be brought until after a review or decision by the State Board of Tax Commissioners.

Gov. Higgins this afternoon said:

"I would be very much pleased to have several mortgage tax measures before me, so that I might select that which I might deem most just and equitable. I do not mean to appear as saying that I desire a recording tax mortage bill sent to me as a substitute for the one passed by the Legislature."

FOR PURCHASE OF FERRIES.

Burnett Bill Affecting East River Lines Passes Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 1.—The Burnett bill, following out Controller Grout's plan for the acquirement of practically all the East River ferries south of Thirty-fourth Street, was passed in the Assembly to-night with 99 votes.

The Kings Democrats were generally for the bill and the Tammany men against it. Burnett stated he had a letter from Mayor McClellan saying he favored the bill. McManus and La Fetra demanded that he show it, and he said he would in private conference, but would not allow it to be read in debate.

McManus declared it was a bill "to foist on New York a lot of old junk and old hulks which the Directors of the ferry lines have found unprofitable to own or operate further."

For Vestibules on Brooklyn Cars.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 1.—The Senate to-night passed the bill introduced by Senator Martin, providing that all street cars in Kings and Queens Counties shall be vestibuled. The bill originally applied to Manhattan, but the Assembly struck out Manhattan.

LIGHTING COMPANIES PROTEST AGAINST BILLS

Would Prevent Removal to Astoria, Says Consolidated.

IS ENTITLED TO DIVIDENDS

Edison Company Says New York Gets Electric Current Cheaper Than Any City of Corresponding Size.

Statements have been prepared by the Consolidated Gas Company and the New York Edison Company for presentation to the Legislature to-day urging the claims of the companies against the recommendations of the Stevens committee.

The statement of the gas company declares that the Legislature has no right to lower the price of gas in Manhattan to a figure under the present one-dollar rate. It is pointed out that one of the direct results of the formation of the Consolidated Company in 1884 by the consolidation of six existing companies was the reduction of the price of gas in Manhattan from $2.25 to $1.75. After this the company voluntarily made a reduction to $1.50, another to $1.25, and finally by act of the Legislature in 1897, the price was reduced by 5 cents annually until $1 was reached in 1901. The statement then says:

"It was supposed by the company, and we think by the Legislature then sitting that this minimum rate was to continue for an indefinite and substantial period, and that the company would be permitted to continue for a reasonable time a peaceful existence; but no sooner had the one-dollar rate been reached than bills from one source or another began to be introduced in the Legislature looking to a further cut, and it begins to seem that such agitation will never cease until gas is furnished to consumers without charge."

The company states that a broad line has been followed in the matter of improving its plant for the public benefit and especial attention is called to the work at Astoria. Attention is also called to the fact that hostile legislation now might delay for a decade the transfer of the company's plant to Astoria. The statement then says:

"Some of the electric companies, and possibly some of the gas companies, have been criticised for carrying on their books the value of plants abandoned or dismantled, not as 'worn out,' but as superseded by a more modern type performing the same functions; but it is quite evident that these plants can only disappear from the books by depreciation charged from earnings.

"Were the $10,400,000 net loss, involved in the removal to Astoria, to be capitalized, 8 per cent. thereon would amount to $832,000 per annum, or an equivalent of almost exactly 6.32 cents per thousand, (reckoned on the present sales of the company,) as a continuing charge on the cost of gas for all time to come.

AS TO DIVIDENDS.

"Of course the company is entitled to earn and pay dividends on its gas investment during and pending this Astoria removal; no one will claim for a moment that it should suspend dividends in order to effectuate it. If the Manhattan plants were being permitted to 'wear out' or go to ruin for want of proper repairs and replacements charged from profits in the past, there might be force in the suggestion that stockholders should forego dividends in order to restore them to condition. But the plants here are in good repair; they can operate indefinitely; they are being abandoned chiefly in answer to a public demand, and the company could not be asked to cut off returns to its shareholders to accomplish this.

"A denial of the right of the company to establish such a sinking or reserve fund as indicated, coupled with a denial of the company's right to earn and pay dividends on the money invested even though the plants should be disused, could lead the company to no other conclusion than to abandon the general removal of its plant to Astoria.

"The cost to the company of gas at the burner has for the past five years averaged about 62 to 65 cents. In 1904 the cost appears as 64.64 cents, with no reserve included, or 74.64, including reserve.

"It will be observed that for the year 1903, before the $20,000,000 of debentures were issued, the cost of gas was 63.04 cents, and it should be further noted that the 3.66 cents incorporated in the 64.34 cents, cost of 1904, included interest on the debentures in question for six months only. For 1905 that item of net interest will amount to about 8 cents, so that on the experience of 1904 the cost of gas in

Sung To Sleep By Coffee.

"The fearful work coffee has done for me is difficult to describe.

"I had no idea how weakened one can become from the breaking down effect of Coffee on the nerves.

"When that has gone on long enough, most anything may set in. I had 3 attacks of pneumonia and became a chronic invalid. I had no idea that coffee had put me in my deplorable condition. Well, I finally went to Colorado on advice, and found a nice place to board with a family. The man of the house had just returned from a sojourn in California, whither he had gone for heart trouble, but the doctor out there discovered his weak heart was caused by coffee, took it away, and gave him Postum. His trouble was quickly dismissed, and he came home a well man. He suggested that probably it was Coffee affected me. I laughed him to scorn; nevertheless, I began gingerly on Postum, and found it so rich, and with a nice coffee snap, that I liked it immensely.

"From the beginning the Postum Coffee had a beneficial effect on me. I improved in every way, my sleep came back, healthy and refreshing, and in a few weeks I went home a well woman, as I am to this day. I still use Postum, of course, and will never return to the old kind.

"Noting the good effects of Postum in my case, I wrote home urging that it be given to my 12-year-old daughter, who was very delicate and frequently ill from a complication of diseases connected with the liver. Well, my people tried it, but were disgusted with it—they didn't make it right. They said it was impossible for them to drink it, and my daughter rebelled and cried for the old kind of coffee. When I came home I changed all that by making it right—allowing it to boil for 20 minutes after it first came to a boil, and served it with cream. The child relished it at once, and benefited from the first, strength came to her day by day, and she began to develop, and was enabled to go to school much more regularly.

"It was a year after I began to use Postum before my husband would use it. He preferred to carry a small bottle

WOULD RAZE PARK WALL.

Fifth Avenue Property Owners Present Numerously Signed Petition.

The City Improvement Commission, F. K. Pendleton presiding, yesterday heard a petition to do away with the stone wall on Fifth Avenue along the Park front and to create a new Park drive and bridle path on the west side of the present Fifth Avenue promenade.

John D. Crimmins presented the petition, which was extensively signed by Fifth Avenue property owners. Among the signers were Henry Phipps, J. Henry Smith, Lloyd S. Bryce, Henry H. Cook, W. A. Clark, I. V. Brokaw, Mortimer L. Schiff, F. W. Woolworth, George Ehret, Charles A. Gould, Louis Stern, Al Hayman, and about a dozen others.

Mr. Crimmins said the work could be done without destroying many trees.

David Millikin, counsel to the Association for the Preservation of Fifth Avenue, doubted if the work could be done without sacrifice of trees and of space needed by the general public. He suggested that an additional riding and driving road for the fashionable world could be provided by the Park Commission, which has full authority over Fifth Avenue between Fifty-ninth and One Hundred and Tenth Streets. The Park Department, Mr. Millikin said, could make that part of the avenue a driveway without encroaching on any of the rights the general public has in Central Park.

The commission referred the whole matter to its Committee on Parks, of which Jacob A. Cantor is Chairman.

ATCHISON REBATE CHARGE.

Alleged Inducement to Company That Built on Its Own Side Track.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 1.—According to allegations in a suit filed to-day in the Kansas Supreme Court, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad agreed to pay a rebate of $5 a car to the Anthony Grocery Company, in consideration of which the grocery company was to put in its own side track.

The agreement for rebates was to continue for two years or until the company had received a sufficient sum to reimburse it for the amount expended on the construction of the side track.

BARNARD SENIORS WIN IN FIELD DAY GAMES

Miss Moston, Class of 1908, However, Breaks Only Record.

COLUMBIA MEN ARE BARRED

They Gather on Roofs and in Windows Nevertheless and Cheer for the Contestants.

Yesterday was a bright one in the history of Barnard College athletics and a happy one in the lives of the students who wear the blue and white. Early in the afternoon Milbank Quadrangle, Barnard's athletic field, was a blaze of color. A mass of students—girls, of course—robed in cap and gown, formed the background of the scene, and a score or more of variously attired competitors in the different events completed the picture seen by the group of enthusiastic Columbia men who had gathered on the ledges and roofs of their buildings across the street to look on.

Columbia students are not welcome spectators at Barnard's field games. In fact, the girls will not allow them admission at any price. This year they even told their men friends that they were not to hold their field day until two weeks later, but when the Columbia youths saw the gathering on Milbank Quadrangle yesterday afternoon it was a lucky student who could get standing room anywhere within view of the games. The young men loudly applauded the efforts of their rivals, and the girls say that one reason why they did not break more records was that they were rattled by the Columbia students.

The most important event was the baseball game between two teams, one of girls from the senior and junior classes and the other from the sophomore and freshman classes. It was won in five innings by the upper class team known as the "Dorians," from the fact that Miss Cecil Dorrian, 1905, pitched for it. The girls played with regulation baseball and a league bat, but used sofa pillows for bases. Uniforms resembling those used in gymnasium work were worn by the players and facilitated base running. One or two daring players attempted to slide home, but tried it only once. Miss Dorrian, twirler for the upper class girls, was the star of the game. In the first inning she gave two bases on balls, a single hit, and a home run, netting the only four tallies made by the opposing team, but then settled down to work and kept her opponents still trying to reach third again when the game was closed. Miss Dorrian came out third in the ball throwing contest.

The batting order of the two teams was as follows:

The intercinss basket ball game between the freshmen and seniors was won by the seniors by a score of 8 to 2. In the first half of the game the freshmen held their opponents down to 3 to 1. Miss Fisher, who claims no relationship to Columbia's star forward, shot a goal from a foul, and Miss Riley another from the field. For the underclass girls, Miss Maston shot a goal from a foul. In the second half things were enlivened a bit by Miss Riley's whirlwind rushes from goal to goal, which netted her team four points from field goals. Both sides added a free goal to their tallies. The two teams were as follows:

1905.	Position.	1908.
Riley, Hoffman	Forwards	Jones, Sammet
Fisher	Centre	Loeb
Cooley, Dorman	Guards	Brahl, Maston

The ball throwing contest was won by Agnes Ernst, 1907, with Elizabeth Bradford, 1906, second, and Cecil Dorrian, 1905, third. Miss Ernst is said to have thrown nearly seventy feet, failing only a few inches short of last year's record. Nan Fisher, 1905, won the basket throwing contest, with four baskets out of a possible five. Mary Maxon, 1908, and Fanny Morley, 1907, were second and third.

In the high jump Eleanor Hampston, 1908, cleared the lipe at 3 feet 9¼ inches and won first place. Emily McClean, 1907, jumped 3 feet 6¾ inches, and Cora Bennett 3 feet 4¼ inches. First place in the broad jump also went to the freshmen, Florence Moston, 1908, covered 12 feet 5 inches, breaking the college record by two inches. Second and third places were won by the seniors and sophomores respectively. The relay race was won by the senior team, with the juniors second, and sophomores third.

When Miss Baldwin and Miss Elsa Elsberg, officials, had compared figures and spent much time in consulting the rule book, it was announced that the class of 1905 had won the meet with 32 points, and that 1908 had taken second place with 15 points. 1907 and 1906 received 10 and 8 points respectively.

At the conclusion of the games the 800 Barnard graduates and undergraduates who had gathered to witness the event gave cheers for all present, and filed away to disappear within the halls of learning.

From the roofs and ledges across the way a sound resembling the crackle of a Maxim battery was wafted to their ears—"Ray, Ray, Ray, C-o-l-u-m-b-i-a. Barnard, Barnard, Barnard!"

TO PASS ON ELIAS FEES.

Referee Will Consider Claim of Negress's Former Attorney.

Justice Davis, in the Supreme Court, has appointed as referee Donald McLean of 27 William Street to report on fees said to be due Washington Brauns, who acted as counsel for Hannah Elias, who was sued recently by aged John R. Platt. Hannah Elias asked the court to substitute as counsel for her Daniel Daly of 140 Broadway. Platt, who sued to recover more than $500,000 which he said had been extorted from him, has appealed from the decision of Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman, who dismissed his complaint. Upon learning that Platt intended to appeal, Hannah Elias wrote to Brauns, asking him to give all papers concerning the case to Daly.

Brauns, in refusing to surrender them, wrote to Daly that Hannah Elias had agreed to pay him $5,000 for defending the criminal action brought against her and $20,000 for his work in the civil suit brought by Platt.

Justice Davis directed that Hannah Elias furnish a bond in the sum of $10,000, and as soon as this bond is filed Brauns is directed to turn over the Platt-Elias papers to Daly, who will conduct the case on appeal.

JOHN W. WOOTEN ARRESTED.

Larceny Charge Against Counsel for Defunct Rothschild Bank.

John W. Wooten of 58 West Seventy-fifth Street, formerly counsel for the Globe Security Company and the defunct Federal Bank, was arrested last night and locked in the Fifth Street Station on a charge of grand larceny. The warrant was issued by Justice Wyatt of the Court of Special Sessions. The complainant is Benjamin F. Caston of 57 Warren Street.

It is alleged that Wooten misappropriated the proceeds of a check for $1,000 made out to David Rothschild, who is serving a sentence of nine years in Sing Sing. The check, it is said, was made payable to the Bankers' Surety Company, and dated Oct. 27, 1903.

Wooten sent messages to Abraham Gruber, Lawyer Olcott, Frederick Gerken, and Frank H. Platt.

It is understood that Assistant District Attorney Kresel has charge of the case. David Rothschild, to whom the check was made out, was recently taken from the Sing Sing Prison and locked up in the Tombs Prison. It has been rumored since that time that Rothschild has made a confession to the District Attorney's office.

Wooten was bailed out shortly before 11 o'clock. Frank H. Platt going on his bond for $1,000. Justice Deuel of the Court of Special Sessions accepted the bail.

When Wooten was arrested Detective Reardon seized several papers. These were sealed, and Reardon told the Sergeant in the Fifth Street Station that they would be handed to the District Attorney this morning. As soon as Wooten had been bailed out he informed Justice Deuel and Mr. Platt of the seizure of the papers.

Justice Deuel requested Reardon to return the papers to the lawyer, but Reardon refused. He said the papers were sealed up and that he would be compelled to turn them over either to the District Attorney or the Justice who issued the warrant. Mr. Platt then conferred with the Justice on this matter, and they did not request the papers the second time.

REMEDY FOR REBATES.

G. R. Peck Says Injunction Is Most Effective—H. L. Bond's View.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—George R. Peck, general counsel of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, was again before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce to-day. He declared that the most effective instrument against rebates was the injunction; that the latter was better than a criminal proceeding because it was speedy and summary. Private car lines, he said, were not common carriers, but were necessary to carry on the commerce in perishable articles.

Hugh L. Bond, Second Vice President and general attorney of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, discussed the laws and decisions relating to the delegation of power to fix rates. If such legislation were passed by Congress, great care ought to be exercised not to leave loopholes by which the commission could usurp legislative power. Congress could not place on the commission power to do what it was the duty of the Legislature itself to do.

He criticised the Esch-Townsend bill, saying it would result in endless litigation and require at least two or three Supreme Court decisions to determine what it meant.

GOULD CHAUFFEUR HELD.

Arrested for Overspeeding, He Is Also Fined for Reckless Driving.

Alexander Mowatt of 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, chauffeur for Frank J. Gould, was among several automobilists arraigned before Magistrate Crane in the West Side Court yesterday on charges of reckless driving and exceeding the speed limit.

Mowatt was fined $10 for reckless driving and held in $300 bail for trial on a charge of exceeding the speed limit. He was arrested yesterday afternoon by Bicycle Policeman Casey of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, who said that the chauffeur nearly ran into a cab at Broadway and Fifty-seventh Street. Magistrate Crane directed that the charge of reckless driving be made, in addition to the complaint of illegal speeding.

Relatives of Sculptor Connor, Who Died in Italy, Contest Will.

A contest of the will of James Stanley Connor, a sculptor, brought before Surrogate Church in the Kings County Surrogate's Court yesterday, revealed the fact that when he died in Florence, Italy, in October, 1904, he left nearly all of his estate of $100,000 to Miss Caterina Paffi, a model. She lives in Montalcino, Italy.

The only other beneficiary under the will is Mrs. Susan Leonard of Washington, an aunt of the dead sculptor. Seven of his next of kin have joined in the contest. The sculptor devoted the last years of his life to study in Italy. Most of his property is in Brooklyn, where he was well known. William H. Wray is the executor named in the will.

BROOKLYN TEACHERS PROTEST

4,000 Sign Petition Against a Shorter School Day.

A petition from the Brooklyn Teachers' Association, bearing the names of more than 4,000 teachers, and protesting against the proposed shortening of the school day, was received by President Tifft of the Board of Education yesterday. Accompanying this monster petition was a letter from Lyman A. Best, President of the organization, denouncing the stand taken by the Male Teachers' Association, declaring that its vote in favor of the shorter day was not truly representative of the association, as only 12 members out of 4,000 had been present at the meeting when the measure was discussed.

The people of Manhattan will have a chance to air their views on the shorter day problem to-night at the hearing before the Committee on Elementary Schools in the Hall of Education, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. Parents, teachers, and many prominent educators are expected to speak.

PRESSURE ON HIGGINS TO KILL RAINES HOTELS

Extra Session Will Be Urged If Bill Is Not Passed.

FIGHT ON THE AMENDMENTS

Pressure will be brought on Gov. Higgins to call an extra session of the Legislature if the original bill to do away with the present system of Raines law hotels in New York is not passed at the present session. After a meeting of the Committee of Fourteen for the Abolition of Raines law hotels at the Hotel Chelsea yesterday, Congressman William S. Bennet left for Albany to urge the Governor to send an emergency message to the Legislature, ordering the immediate inspection of all the Raines law hotels in the State. The committee wants to have revoked the licenses of all the places not complying with the law.

In a statement given out after the meeting it is asserted that the people of the State and city will compel the Legislature to grant remedial legislation.

"Should the Governor refuse," says the statement, "and thus make the passage of the bill impossible, we will commence an agitation for an extra session of the Legislature. In the first instance we will direct our appeals to Lieut. Gov. Bruce, who will be acting Governor during Gov. Higgins's absence from the State after May 5. Lieut. Gov. Bruce is a resident of the city, and we are sure he will welcome the opportunity to assist in suppressing the Raines law hotels. They must go, and our committee will keep at them till we drive them out.

"This committee hereby distinctly repudiates the bill now pending in the Senate. What we demand is the original bill, carefully considered and drawn by this committee, and introduced originally by Senator Raines and Assemblyman Prentice."

The committee referred to certain influences in the Assembly which, it is alleged, have caused delay and undesired and emasculating amendments to the bill that was introduced by the representatives of the committee. The statement further says:

"While non-sectarian and non-political, the committee, having to lay its plans before a Legislature heavily Republican in both branches and a Republican Governor, naturally consulted chiefly with Republican leaders, from whom alone results could be obtained. Our legislative subcommittee, William S. Bennet, Lawrence Veiller, and Thomas H. Reed, adopted a bill which was approved by the committee and introduced at its request on Feb. 15 by Senator Raines in the Senate and Assemblyman Prentice in the Assembly. Thereafter the bill was amended four times in the Senate by Senator Raines, none of the amendments being at our request and one against our protest. Each amendment required the bill to be reprinted and delayed, and consequently it did not pass the Senate until March 27, though unopposed."

TO BE HAMILTON HALL.

Columbia's New Building to be Named for the Statesman.

Formal announcement was made by the Trustees of Columbia University yesterday afternoon that the anonymous gift of $500,000 recently promised had been received by the university for the erection of a new hall to be devoted to the uses of the academic department. The new building will be placed on South Field, opposite the university quadrangle, and adjoining Hartley Hall, the new college dormitory. It will face One Hundred and Sixteenth Street. No announcement was made of any provision for the new law school building promised by President Butler for the near future.

The new college building will be called Hamilton Hall, in honor of Alexander Hamilton, student in King's College, now Columbia, from 1774 to 1776. It will be 205 feet long, 55 feet wide, and five stories high. It will have a lecture room seating capacity for 2,500 students. Messrs. McKim, Mead and White will be the architects for the building, the material and form of which will be in keeping with the other Columbia buildings.

A further announcement was made to the effect that Dr. George R. Van De Water, Chaplain of the university, had tendered his resignation, and that it had been accepted by the Trustees, with expressions of gratefulness for his conscientious service. No intimation was given as to who would be appointed to succeed Dr. Van De Water, but an early appointment is expected from the Episcopal clergy of the city. Dr. William M. Grosvenor, rector of the Church of the Incarnation and a Trustee of Barnard College, is a possible candidate for the post.

An innovation was introduced at the university yesterday which caused much pleasant comment from the Trustees. During their meeting a new flag, a light-blue field surmounted by a white crown, was flown from the flagstaff in place of the Stars and Stripes. The colors of the new flag are those of the university, and the crown its emblem, inherited from King's College.

BRIDE HAD SMALLPOX.

Many Kissed Her—Church Closed and Pastor Quarantined.

NEW BRUNSWICK, May 1.—A fear of smallpox contagion prevented services being held in the German Presbyterian Church, at South River, near here, yesterday. The pastor, the Rev. W. T. Kern, is quarantined in his room, as the result of a wedding which took place in the church on Sunday, April 23.

The bride was Miss Magdalen Fessler of Browntown. The day after the wedding she became ill with smallpox, and since then has suffered from a virulent type of the disease. Dr. Crandall of Old Bridge, who is attending her, said today that she was better.

Accompanying the bride and her fiance, John G. Gaub of Browntown, on the day of the wedding were four stageloads of people from Browntown and near by. After the ceremony most of them kissed the bride. They have been badly alarmed since the news of her illness has come out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Admiral of the Navy and Mrs. Dewey celebrated the seventh anniversary of the battle of Manila Bay by a luncheon at their home, on Rhode Island Avenue, where the officers who served under him were guests at luncheon with their wives.

The company of thirty or more were received in the first drawing room, where a floral model of the cruiser Olympia rested on a mound of white spirea. Back of the huge silver vase, one of the many gifts from the Admiral's fellow-countrymen, was massed the purple bogelvania brought from the Philippines in recent years, and exquisite branches of dogwood.

Mrs. Dewey, whose health is much improved, welcomed her guests in a gown of white Irish lace over white silk. The Admiral, who suffered a severe attack of grip in the early Spring, has also recovered, and declared himself in splendid health and spirits.

Mrs. Gridley, widow of the Captain of the Olympia, the Admiral's flagship in the battle, was escorted to table by the host. The other guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Coghlan, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Lamberton, Capt. STRIKERS FOLLOW RED FLAG.

Brickmakers Parade Along the Hudson, Near Newburg.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, May 1.—An indignant mob of over 1,000 men formed a picturesque May Day procession along the east shore of the Hudson River between Dutchess Junction and Chelsea to-day. In the crowd were Hungarians, Syrians, Italians, and negroes. At the head of the gang was a Syrian carrying an immense red flag on a pole. The men who followed him carried big clubs.

The first band of strikers organized at the Budd brick yard, at Dutchess Junction. They marched to five yards below Fishkill Landing, and readily induced all the men to join them. Then they took up the march northward, walking on the New York Central tracks. Passing Fishkill Landing, they reached seven other yards, and when they got to the Mead yard at Chelsea the gang numbered over a thousand. The men then returned south, each stopping off at their respective yards. Only one case of violence was reported. A man who at first refused to join the strikers was beaten on the hands with clubs.

The strikers demand higher pay.

Notice to the Public

In the Borough of Queens and Manhattan Who Will Be Benefited by Rapid Transit Facilities.

It has been the object of Interborough Rapid Transit Company to connect the various boroughs of the city, with the least possible delay and in the most satisfactory, convenient, and practical manner.

To that end it has undertaken to expend eight million dollars ($8,000,000) of its own money in building Manhattan-Brooklyn extension of the Subway. It has recently become interested in the so-called "Steinway Franchise" for a tunnel under the East River connecting Manhattan and Queens at 42d Street.

This franchise was granted to the New York and Long Island Railroad Company by the Board of Aldermen in December, 1890, and by the Common Council of Long Island City in October, 1891. Shortly after work was commenced a disastrous accident occurred, which resulted in its suspension. During the fifteen years which have elapsed, great improvement in tunnel construction has been made, and competent engineers now advise a modification of the original plans so that in the public interest a grade could be adopted which will enable a practical connection to be made with the Manhattan Subway system and the Queens County surface lines.

In order to facilitate these changes, Bills have been introduced and are now pending in the Legislature, which rival interests have indicated as "Grab Bills," seeking thus to give the impression that an effort was being made to procure franchises without the consent of the city authorities and without making compensation. As above stated, the City authorities have given their consent for this tunnel railroad which will serve a great public purpose and has made provisions in the ordinance granting its consent for the payment to the City of a percentage of the gross receipts in compensation for the franchise granted. The original charter line of the company embraced rights which the City authorities have not consented to, and one of the pending Bills would enable them to abandon this unconstructed route; while another Bill authorizes amendments to cure technical omissions and defects.

The passage of all these bills is believed to be in the public interest and peculiarly to the advantage of the property owners above described, whose interest it is to promote the development of transit facilities between the large and neglected Borough of Queens and the more densely populated portions of the city.

For the city at large it will create a new and heavy taxpayer in the New York and Long Island Railroad Company and many new and additional taxpayers in the Borough of Queens, whose growth will be enormously increased by this proposed transit facility.

NEW TEST OF RADIUM AS CURE FOR CANCER

RESULTS GOOD, SURGEONS SAY

Prominent Physicians Witness Operations by Dr. King, Who Uses New Method at Flower Hospital.

At Flower Hospital yesterday afternoon Dr. W. Harvey King performed operations on two facial cancerous growths and inserted celluloid pencils coated with radium within the affected areas. The method differed from that previously used in treatment for cancer, in that the radium was used on an exposed pencil surface instead of in tubes.

It had been generally supposed that Dr. William James Morton used the pencils in two surgical treatments of President Harper of Chicago University, following the purely surgical operation for cancer, but it was learned yesterday that radium in tubes instead of on pencils was used in Dr. Harper's case.

Yesterday's operations attracted to the Flower Hospital operating room many prominent surgeons and an unusual number of students of the New York Homoeopathic College. Among those who heard Dr. King's lecture and saw him use the radium were Dr. William Todd Helmuth, general surgeon; Dr. George W. Roberts, gynecologist and general surgeon; Dr. Edward G. Tuthill, gynecologist; Dr. A. B. Norton, ophthalmologist; Dr. Rigby, the woman practitioner and surgeon, and Hugo Lieber, the chemist whose experiments with radium have made it possible to use the substance as a material on exposed appliances in surgery.

The operation that attracted the greatest interest was in the case of a man about sixty-five years old, on whose lower right jaw and the fleshy portion of the throat on that side was a malignant cancerous growth as large as two oranges of average size.

Dr. King said that several weeks ago it was decided an operation was necessary at once, but on account of heart trouble it was thought the patient could not be etherized with safety, and, as it was intended to remove all of the lower right jaw bone, it was deemed best to wait until the heart could be treated in order to permit etherization. Meanwhile the X-rays had been used, but not with any appreciable beneficial result. The patient had not responded to treatment for the heart, Dr. King said, and finally an operation was imperative with the anesthetic or without it.

The operation was preceded by Dr. King's lecture, in the course of which he referred to the early use of radium, the results of which had been more or less indefinite so far as curative principles were concerned, but which had revealed a definiteness in the properties of the mystrious atoms in surgery and the proper methods for using them in the operating room. He said it was at first thought, though erroneously, that radium and the X-rays were similar in effect and that even now the belief prevailed that the two had properties in common.

In radium treatment for cancer, Dr. King said, good results had not been obtained earlier partly because the radium had not been of good quality. Within a year the quality had been greatly improved. Contrary to general belief, Dr. King said, radium gave off gases and material particles. He described the physiological properties of radium and gave a demonstration of it with an electroscope. Radium was very destructive to diseased tissues, but had no appreciable effect, so far as had been learned, on healthy tissue.

The difference in the action of radium when confined within a tube and when placed on an exposed surface was then explained. Dr. King said radium in a mass lost its effect, except such as emanated from the outer or exposed particles. In the pencil method it had been proved that bacteria could not resist its death-dealing qualities.

In the general use of radium in surgery up to now, Dr. King said, the method had been confined to applying it in tubes, which were inserted in affected areas. Lieber's experiments had made it possible to confine the radium to the surface of celluloid pencils, and these, inserted within the areas, held the substance in direct and constant contact with the malignancy.

Dr. King held up two pencils that had been used, one for forty-eight and another for twelve hours. The coating of radium on the first had been almost entirely consumed, while the second was shown by the electroscope to contain about 50 per cent. as much radium as the other, proving that the power of the substance was gradual and even in its force.

Recent surgical radium treatment by Dr. Abbey for cancer of the breast by the pencil instead of the tube method, Dr. King observed, had shown that malignant growth was destroyed.

Dr. King then proceeded with the operation. The affected area on the jaw was found to be hard and only slightly sensitive. Two deep incisions were made, the pencils were inserted to the depth of about two and one-half inches, the exposed ends of the pencils were clipped off, and the operation ended with the bandaging within ten minutes after it had begun. It could have been accomplished in much less time but for the accompanying lecture.

One of the pencils was of twenty-five thousand millionths and the other of ten-thousand millionths, one-millionth being the radium unit. Pencils of the varying degree of strength, as indicated, were used in order to permit determining the consumption of the radium within a given time.

Dr. King said that the time to elapse before the pencils were withdrawn and others inserted would depend on developments, but he thought the renewal would be made within forty-eight hours.

The first case for demonstration was that of a woman with cancerous growth on the upper part of one ear. Two days before two pencils of different power had been inserted, and at yesterday's demonstration these were replaced by one. The growth had been greatly reduced.

Following the operations, the surgeons present said they had learned much to incline them to the opinion that the surgical possibilities of radium seemed limitless, and that they knew of nothing to prejudice them against its use.

Students Pay Yale's Deficit.

NEW HAVEN, May 1.—By a movement started among the members of the Academic junior and sophomore classes in Yale University, $2,000 has been subscribed toward payment of a deficit of $5,000 in the academic department for the past year, and it is expected that nearly the full amount will be collected. Seventy-four men of the junior class have pledged $25 each.

He Insists on Preserving His Incognito in Paris—Goes to Races.

PARIS, May 1.—King Edward started on an automobile tour to Versailles at noon to-day. Another automobile, containing French and British officials, followed, and a third carried repairing gear for an emergency.

The route through the Champs Elysées and the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne was crowded with people, who vigorously acclaimed his Majesty. On his way to Versailles King Edward inspected the famous stud of running horses belonging to Edmond Blanc. At Versailles he took an informal luncheon at a restaurant, and then attended the races at St. Cloud.

The King occupied a private tribune, strolled about the paddock with Prince Murat, Edmond Blanc, and other turf celebrities, and took a look at the betting ring. His Majesty's presence was quite unexpected, and therefore no special card was prepared.

Between races the King, accompanied by Minister of Agriculture Ruau and the officials of the course, inspected the stables, where French methods of developing half bloods were explained.

The chief feature of the day was the Prix du Roi Soleil, in which W. K. Vanderbilt's Bengal defeated nine French runners, including Proud, Petit Frère, North Pole, and other popular favorites.

After the races his Majesty returned in a motor car to Paris.

To-night the King was present at the performance of "Le Duel" at the Théâtre Français. This was not a gala event, as the King earnestly desires to remain incognito.

He says he intends to be a frequent visitor to Paris if he is permitted to mingle unnoticed amid the throngs in the same manner as some of the minor monarchs of Europe.

At the dinner given by President Loubet yesterday King Edward talked most cordially to Gen. Porter, the retiring American Ambassador. Gen. Porter sat in the second seat from the King, and kept up a running conversation with him and the wife of the Spanish Ambassador, who sat between them.

After the dinner the King invited Gen. Porter to sit down in the smoking room, where they chatted for some time about his Majesty's visit to the United States in 1860, when he was Prince of Wales. He recalled his visit to West Point, where he met Gen. Porter, who was in charge of the Reception Committee. The King made many agreeable allusions to the United States, and favorably compared its status now with the conditions which prevailed in 1860.

TO PRESERVE JONES'S BODY.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Dispatches have been received at the State Department from Gen. Porter giving additional details regarding the recovery and identification of the body of John Paul Jones. Gen. Porter says:

"Finding that the body showed some signs of changing in appearance from exposure to the air, as soon as the examinations were completed I had it treated at the Ecole de Médecin with a preparation which I am assured will prevent any deterioration. The body was then redressed in the shirt and sheet in which it was found and carefully packed so as not to be injured by shocks in transportation, and replaced in its original coffin.

"This was inclosed in a leaden casket with a plate glass showing the head and chest, and hermetically closed. Seals were then affixed in such manner that it could not be opened without breaking them. This was placed in an outer coffin of oak, and on the twentieth (April) the remains were quietly transferred from the School of Medicine to the American Church of the Holy Trinity and placed in the receiving vault, where the body lies covered with the American flag.

"I am very glad that a squadron is to be sent to carry these honored remains to the land which Paul Pones so heroically served. When the body is borne through the City of Paris we can count upon the French Government to provide a military escort commensurate with his rank and take every possible measure to do honor to his memory. I shall remain here for the ceremony.

"Any time in June will be a good season for the removal of the remains from Paris. I am receiving cables from various cities asking me to recommend that the remains be landed at their port or that they be buried there. I reply that all such questions should be left to the National Government for decision."

A. Beisel, a clerk at the American Embassy, who was sent by Gen. Porter to seal the remains, says in a communication:

"I went to the Ecole de Médecin this afternoon (April 18) and saw the remains of Paul Jones, with whose features I am somewhat familiar from the many prints, medals, &c., I have seen of him. They are wonderfully well preserved, the features bearing an expression of sleeping, calm repose. I consider it a great honor that the task of sealing the remains fell upon me."

PORTER IN LEGION OF HONOR.

Accepts French Decoration on Becoming a Private Citizen.

PARIS, May 1.—Gen. Horace Porter has advised the Foreign Office that owing to his resumption of the position of a private citizen he has accepted the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, which the French Government some time ago bestowed upon Secretary Hay and himself.

Ambassador McCormick to-day assumed the duties of the American Embassy and received a number of callers, including ex-Gov. Odell of New York. A letter from Foreign Minister Delcassé informed the new Ambassador that President Loubet would receive him at 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, when his credentials will be presented and his official relations with the Government will begin.

Gen. Porter has been advised that M. Loubet will receive him at 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, when his letter of recall will be officially presented.

M. Delcassé will give a dinner to Gen. Porter on May 12 and the American colony will give him an elaborate reception and dinner on May 17.

After that Gen. Porter will make an automobile tour of Switzerland, returning here for the extensive military and naval honors which the French Government will accord to the body of Paul Jones when it starts for America.

LABOR DAY RIOT IN TOULON.

Several Workmen Injured in Affray in Front of Arsenal.

PARIS, May 1.—Labor Day was observed throughout France. The Trades Unions of Paris held a monster meeting and adopted resolutions in favor of an eight-hour day.

Disorderly manifestations occurred at Brest, St. Etienne, and Toulon. At the last-named city the demonstration assumed a threatening aspect. Anarchists marched in a procession carrying a red flag, chanting a revolutionary hymn, and bearing a banner inscribed:

"Remember the victims of Capital at Chicago, Limoges, and Martinique."

An affray occurred in front of the Naval Arsenal and several workmen were slightly injured.

DISEASE PERIL IN CARS ROUSES HEALTH EXPERTS

REMEDIAL EFFORTS HAMPERED

Legislation Needed Giving Authority to Enforce Sanitary Rules—Some Companies Testing Devices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—In the course of his inquiries as to the possible spread of diseases over the country through the unsanitary condition of railway passenger and street cars, Surgeon General Wyman of the Marine Hospital Service has received a large number of letters from Health Officers of the various States and cities.

From these letters it appears to be the almost unanimous opinion among health Officers that many diseases are contracted by the traveling public through breathing vitiated air in the cars or by the reception into their systems of disease germs from others infected. Especially is this said to be true of tuberculosis.

It also appears that Health Boards and Health Officers in almost all parts of the country are making strenuous efforts to remedy this great evil, but that they are hampered in their efforts by lack of legislation. Only one or two of the States have laws giving authority to the Health Boards to enforce sanitary rules and regulations on the railroads.

C. A. Goodnow, General Manager of the Chicago and Alton, writes that his company has been experimenting with a new device, and that as it has proved to be satisfactory the company doubtless will equip all its cars with it.

The Pullman Company has appointed a Superintendent of Sanitation, whose special duty it is to make thorough and complete tests of whatever devices may be offered until one is found that will prove satisfactory. Other companies are working along the same lines, and it is believed that the railroad authorities and the Health Boards, acting in harmony, will soon work decided changes for the better preservation of the public health.

PRESSURE ON MOROCCO.

Lowther's Visit to Fez Is in Order to Support France's Demands.

PARIS, May 1.—The British Minister to Morocco, Gerard Lowther, in the course of an interview with the Temps correspondent at Tangier to-day made the first official declaration that the purpose of his visit to Fez is to support French policy in Morocco. He said:

"When I first arrived at Tangier I did not expect to present my credentials to the Sultan before the Autumn, but under the present conditions I start for Fez in three weeks.

"My mission will not be merely to draw up a protocol. It will embrace also the questions under that clause of the Franco-British accord in which the two Governments mutually engage to lend their diplomatic support to the execution of that convention. My Government is all the more desirous to fulfill this duty since the French proposition submitted to the Sultan of Morocco strictly conforms to the spirit of the accord, threatening the interest of no third power, guaranteeing the security of Morocco, and providing for the gradual development of the country without sudden transition."

Mr. Lowther's statement controverts the view of the German official press that he goes to Fez merely to present his credentials, and it is in line with the understanding of the officials here concerning the purposes of his visit. Therefore, they say, the French Mission at Fez is not likely to press its negotiations until Mr. Lowther arrives, when united influences will be brought to bear.

BLOW AT NEW HAVEN ROAD.

Trolley Purchases in Massachusetts Illegal, Attorney General Says.

BOSTON, May 1.—An opinion that the recent purchase by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad of street railway companies in Massachusetts was illegal under the revised laws was sent to-day to the Massachusetts Legislature by Attorney General Herbert Parker.

The opinion was asked recently in connection with a pending bill relative to the rights of steam railroads to purchase the stock of street railways, as petitioned for by the Boston and Maine Railroad.

CIGARETTE LAW BROAD.

Applies to Consumers as Well as Dealers, Justice Says.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 1.—Judge Alford of the Criminal Court to-day indicated his interpretation of the new cigarette law when he instructed the Grand Jury to return indictments in cases where evidence showed that cigarettes or cigarette paper were found in possession of any person, consumer, or dealer. Judge Whallon of the Police Court has held that the possession by the consumer could not be construed as a violation.

INCENDIARY TENEMENT FIRE.

Starts in Different Places in Flat, the Occupant of Which Is Away.

Fire that was clearly of incendiary origin threatened the lives of twenty families in the five-story tenement at 408 West Fifty-sixth Street early yesterday morning.

Fire was discovered in an apartment on the second floor front, and also in a closet under the stairs just outside the door. The woman who occupies the apartment has been away since last Thursday. When she left she said she was going to visit relatives. The flames were in one of her bedrooms and in the sitting room, as well as in the closet outside.

August Bollman, who lives with his family in the other front apartment on the second floor, discovered the fire. His cries awakened the tenants, and they began swarming downstairs in whatever clothing they had been able to grab up in a hurry.

Policemen Francis Kelly and Edward Judge of the West Forty-seventh Street Station heard the cries of "Fire!" Judge went to the nearest box and turned in an alarm, and Kelly ran to the house to try to calm the frightened tenants. He managed to get them moving out in a more orderly fashion, and then went to investigate the blaze.

Kelly found the closet blazing about as Bollman had discovered it. The door was shut tight, so the flames were hampered by lack of draught, but had Bollman not discovered the fire when he did in a few minutes more it would have burned through the door. Kelly kicked in the door and succeeded in putting out the fire before the firemen came.

When he had a chance to look around he saw a flickering reflection of light on the ceiling of the bedroom in the apartment. Kelly hoisted a small boy on his shoulders, so that he could look in through the window.

"Why, the bed's all on fire," said the boy.

The policeman broke open the door, and found not only the bed blazing, but the cover and the wood of the table in the sitting room, on which stood a lighted kerosene lamp. He had this fire almost out when the firemen came.

The front window in the flat was opened wide, evidently to give the fire better draught. The Fire Marshal is investigating the case.

TEN-YEAR TERM FOR REYES.

By a convention the people of the Republic of Colombia have extended the term of Gen. Rafael Reyes, their President, from four to ten years. News of this action has been received in a letter to a New Yorker. It appears that the people of Colombia wish to rival the Mexicans in doing honor to the greatest man among them. Porfirio Diaz, the President of Mexico, has been in power longer than any man of modern times ever was under a republican form of Government.

Gen. Reyes is known to America chiefly through his opposition to the intervention of the United States at the time of the secession of Panama from Colombia. He protested violently against the action of the United States, saying in an official communication to the State Department:

"If there be an eternal and immutable principle of right, that right has been injured by the United States by an incredible transgression of the limits set by equity and justice."

Reyes was anxious at one time to have the entire matter referred to The Hague Tribunal. He came to this country early last year. When he left for Paris he expressed himself kindly toward the Administration, saying he only wanted fair play and thought he would get it.

He is a man of medium stature, and in appearance is something like President Diaz of Mexico. He was a traveler and explorer in his younger days.

MORSE BUYS FREIGHT LINE.

May Run Passenger Boats on New York-Boston Route.

It was announced yesterday that Charles W. Morse had purchased the Metropolitan Steamship Company, which runs a line of freight steamers between this city and Boston and another line between Boston and Philadelphia. The price mentioned was $8,000,000, and it was said that Mr. Morse might put into commission several passenger steamers on the New York-Boston route.

The purchase was made from Henry M. Whitney of Boston, with whom Mr. Morse has been in negotiation over the Metropolitan Line purchase for some time. The company has a capital of $500,000, wharf property of $706,598, and steamers and lighters, valued at $461,383.

BOSTON, May 1.—The sale marks the permanent withdrawal of Mr. Whitney from the steamship business, in which he has been prominent for many years. At the same time the transaction indicates an extension of the interest in marine transportation of Mr. Morse, who is the principal owner of the Eastern Steamship Company, which controls all the passenger and freight lines running along the coast east of Boston, except those in Nova Scotia. The Treasurer of the Metropolitan Company is H. F. Dimock of New York.

The boats which made up the Metropolitan Line are the iron propeller steamships James S. Whitney, H. F. Dimock, Herman Winter, and H. M. Whitney, as well as the auxiliary steamships Neptune and Glaucus. In addition the company owns several floats and lighters for handling its freight from shore to steamship.

TREASURY DEFICIENCY NOW IS $33,689,558

Officials Still Hopeful of Reducing it to $25,000,000.

RELY ON RECEIPTS FOR JUNE

Nothing in Situation to Warrant Anything Like Apprehension, National City Bank Experts Say.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Treasury statement for April issued to-day shows that the expenditures for the month exceeded the receipts by $9,211,418, swelling the deficiency for the ten months of the fiscal year to $33,689,558.

This result is a great disappointment to the Treasury officials who have charge of making estimates. They, however, have not abandoned the belief that the deficiency when the year is completed will not exceed $25,000,000, and some of the more optimistic believe that it will come even closer to the estimates made in December last, which placed the probable deficiency at $18,000,000.

The receipts for the month just closed were less than $2,000,000 below those for April, 1904, the falling off having been mainly in customs. For the ten months the total receipts were $451,714,149, against $451,612,171, a difference of only $100,000 in favor of the current year.

The receipts thus far have justified the December estimates, and it is quite probable the end of the year will show a slight increase over the estimates. It is confidently expected that the returns for June will show an excess of receipts of about $10,000,000, and that the gap between revenues and disbursements this month will not be wide. The receipts from internal revenue are always heavy in June by reason of payment of special taxes, and the disbursements that month are always far below the average of the preceding months.

It is upon this fact that the Treasury experts base the belief that the deficit for the year will not exceed $25,000,000.

The National City Bank in its monthly circular, speaking of Government finances, says:

"There is nothing in the situation to warrant anything like apprehension. On the contrary, the outlook for an improvement in the revenues is exceedingly good, and there is justification for believing that the receipts from customs will in the near future show considerable growth. Such an expectation is based upon recent heavier importations of dutiable goods.

"During March, 1905, dutiable importations into the United States amounted to $42,000,000, as against $48,000,000 for March, 1904. But the duties collected during March, 1905, were barely in excess of those for March, 1904, the collections for this March having been $24,000,000, as against $23,700,000 for that month last year. It will thus be seen that the value of dutiable importations in March of this year showed an increase of about 30 per cent. over the same month a year ago, while the duties collected show an increase of only 1¼ per cent.

"This extraordinary variation has resulted in an inquiry by the Treasury Department as to the cause of so large a discrepancy, the result of which is highly important as bearing upon the future course of customs receipts. At New York, which is the chief customs port, the discrepancy was accounted for almost wholly in two ways—by an increase in the amount of dutiable goods that have gone into bonded warehouse and by a large increase in the value of imported sugar.

"The latter commodity pays a specific duty, and therefore no material increase in duties from it may be expected, but it is otherwise as to dutiable goods in bonded warehouse referred to, which sooner or later must be withdrawn for consumption and duties paid.

"The working balance of the Treasury at the present time is about $40,000,000. The recent call upon the depository banks for payments to be made to the Treasury May 15 and July 1 next will aggregate $29,000,000. An excess of receipts for May and June of, say, $10,000,000 will therefore bring the working balance at the beginning of the new fiscal year to a point comfortably above $75,000,000, which will be sufficient to provide for the deficits of July and August and leave the Treasury at the beginning of the Fall months with sufficient funds from which to increase public deposits with the banks in case it should be deemed advisable."

The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business April 30 the total debt, less cash in the Treasury, amounted to $967,217,941, which is an increase for the month of $8,593,384, and this increase is partly accounted for by a decrease of $7,502,942 in the amount of cash on hand.

The amount of coinage executed at the mints of the United States during April was $2,486,931, as follows: Gold, $1,860,000; silver, $394,000; minor coins, $232,931. This, however, does not include 1,500,000 pesos executed for the Philippines Government.

LATEST CUSTOMS DECISIONS.

Tobacco Entered at Lower Rates—Other Decisions.

In a decision written by General Appraiser Lunt, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday partially sustained the claims of several importers of tobacco, and held that much of the merchandise is dutiable at 35 cents per pound as "filler" tobacco instead of at $1.85 per pound under the provision for "wrapper" tobacco. The importers affected by the board's ruling include Carl Vogt's Sons, A. Pazos & Co., Starr Brothers, Simon Batt & Co., New York.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision sustaining most of the claims of F. Pustet & Co., New York, for free entry of small crucifixes and medals for religious societies. With the exception of the goods represented by two invoices, the Collector's assessment of duty at the rate of 60 per cent. ad valorum under the provision for, "jewelry," was reversed.

Importers' claims sustained yesterday were by Fensterne & Ruhe, A. & H. Veith, New York, and Marshall Field & Co., Chicago.

Protests overruled were by G. A. & F. Meyer, Royal Metal Manufacturing Company, A. C. Hartmann, Fischer & Co., H. Robinson, E. H. Behrens & Co., New York; G. W. Sheldon & Co., Chicago; Rice-Stix Dry Goods Company, St. Louis.

Honesty in clothes

is just like any other honesty; you ought to respect it as you do any other honesty.

There are no degrees of honesty, in clothes or in anything else; if a man is really honest he isn't dishonest in anything, not even a little. There is no middle ground; he's either one thing or the other.

The standard of honesty in clothes is all-wool; not a standard arbitrarily set without reason, but based upon many years of experience of wearers of clothes. All-wool is best because it has been proved best. "Mercerized cotton" is dishonesty in clothes; not necessarily in the intention of the maker or seller of it, but in fact. One fabric may contain more "mercerized cotton" than another, but one is just as dishonest as the other.

We stand for all-wool for no other reason than because it's best; and the best isn't too good for us, or for you. Our label is the sign of it—a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. INCUBATOR WON WITH A SPRINT AT FINISH

LADY AMELIA SET A RECORD

Filly Lowered Track Figures for Five and a Half Furlongs—Three Favorites Were First.

With something of a shock the memory of racegoers was carried back three years when at the Jamaica track yesterday Incubator, then remembered as one of the really smart two-year-olds of 1902, showed a flash of his old quality and brushed home at odds of 20 to 1, winner of the one-mile-and-a-sixteenth handicap from a good-class field. Memory asserted itself too late for the betting visitors, however, for the result, in addition to being the greatest surprise of the afternoon, also was the most disastrous to the general public. There was excuse for the forgetting of Incubator's promise as a two-year-old, for the horse has won only in the West and South in the past two years, and when in the East last season ran in the selling class, but he came back into public attention with a bounce in yesterday's race.

Racing in F. B. Van Meter's name, with 95 pounds up, and ridden by Baird, Incubator was the last-chance outsider in a field of seven horses, which included Dolly Spanker, the top weight and favorite; Israelite, and the recent winners Grenade and Amberjack. As long a price as 30 to 1 was laid against Incubator at one time in the betting, but the stable support and a tip that circulated among the horsemen made just enough backing for the five-year-old to bring the odds down to 20 to 1 at post time.

Amberjack broke in the lead, and attempted to go on with the track, but was outrun before the horses turned into the back stretch by Israelite, which then led to the bend into the stretch for the run home. There Waswift and Kehailan went up to Israelite, while Dolly Spanker, which had trailed in the rear to that point, made an effort to get through on the rail, and was shut off and had to go around the field. Israelite stopped when the lead was taken from him, and the race had just begun to look like a contest between Waswift and Kehailan, when Baird, who had waited back fourth and fifth, made his run with Incubator. It was timed to a nicety, and with luck in his favor to the extent that Dolly Spanker still was shut in behind the leading horses, Incubator went to the front with a rush, and, hustled out, was on the winning post before Dolly Spanker had found his way through. The latter closed with a rattle, but just too late, for Incubator won by a trifle better than a length, while Dolly Spanker, running over his field at the end, was second.

The first race of the day was notable not so much as a contest as for the fact that it introduced the fast filly Lady Amelia for the new racing year with a track record-breaking performance at five and a half furlongs. Lady Amelia, racing in the colors of R. E. Watkins, who trains a part of E. R. Thomas's stable, was the top weight in the sprint handicap, but not even the 126 pounds she had up served to keep seven of the ten horses named on the card in the race. The owners wanted to get away from Lady Amelia, and get away they did, only three horses running, with Lady Amelia the favorite at 20 to 9 on. Race King, in receipt of twenty pounds from the filly, led away with a running start, but Lady Amelia went to him in the first furlong without a bit of trouble. On the straight Race King closed on her a bit, but died away in the effort, and Lady Amelia, drawing out again, won by three-parts of a length, in 1:06 1-5, two-fifths of a second better than the former track record.

The stake feature of the programme, the Newtown, six furlongs, selling, for three-year-olds and upward, run as the fourth race, brought out the Castleton-bred colt Blucher, in his first appearance as a selling class horse, and bettors who recalled that the same colt was talked of with Sysonby last season, made him a hot favorite over the six that opposed him. Blucher, slow to begin, was out of the race early, while Czaraphine, darting away and taking the lead the moment the barrier was lifted, led all the distance and won, hustled out, from Old England and Arabo, a head apart, second and third.

Favorites won three races and lost in three. The weather was clear, but a cold wind destroyed the comfort of the crowd, which was very large. Summaries:

TRIALS FOR METROPOLITAN.

Beldame, Colonial Girl, and Jacquin Showed Well in Final Gallops.

Seven horses of the prospective field for the Metropolitan Handicap, to be run Thursday at the opening of the new Belmont Park course, received their trials for the race yesterday, three of these being in public, in a race at the Jamaica track. The most important of the trials was that of the four-year-old filly Beldame, the present favorite and the top weight in the Metropolitan under the scale. Beldame, at the Gravesend track, where she is trained by Fred Burlew, who handled her through her victorious career as a three-year-old, was sent a mile, with the stable jockey, O'Neil, up, and on a fast track finished in 1:43⅗. As but two days intervene, the gallop was Beldame's final preparation for the big event. The method under which she was trained last season renders it improbable that she will do anything more than canter between now and the race for the Metropolitan.

The work caused conflicting opinions among horsemen who saw the filly's trial, some of them deeming it far from impressive, while others took into account Beldame's impetuous way of going and the fact that she was fighting to go on through the first half mile, which was the faster part of the trial, and declared the move was all that could be asked. Beldame's trainer, Fred Burlew, was satisfied, and her owner, August Belmont, seemed contented also.

At the same track the two Western candidates for the Metropolitan, First Mason and Colonial Girl, are trained, and in their trials Colonial Girl showed the faster, though it still is thought that the stable's preference will be First Mason. C. E. Rowe, trainer of the pair, sent Colonial Girl a mile in 1:42½, the mare covering the distance at an even pace and finishing very tired. It was a gallop that made a most favorable impression; however, and Colonial Girl, which beat Hermis in the fifty-thousand-dollar World's Fair Handicap at St. Louis last year, was put in the list of horses that seem certain to start. First Mason, which also earned a reputation last season by beating Delhi soon after his arrival in the East, was sent a mile in 1:44, going well in hand in his last work; but it is likely that he will have another and final gallop to-day.

Another trial at Gravesend was that of David Johnson's Jacquin, trained at Brighton Beach by William Lakeland. Jacquin has done much of his fast work at Gravesend this Spring, however, and when he finished a mile and a quarter yesterday in 2:13, and going well the way was, the trainers put him down as a starter for the Metropolitan. Jacquin has raced this Spring, and his performance at Gravesend, though he was beaten three, left no room for doubt as to his forward condition.

In the racing at Jamaica, Dolly Spanker, Israelite, and Kehailan, all Metropolitan Handicap candidates, tried issues in the same race, and though all were beaten Dolly Spanker showed well enough to make it seem almost certain that he will run Thursday.

Delhi, looked on as the most formidable opponent that Beldame will meet in the Metropolitan, and the largest money winner last season as a three-year-old, is entered in the six-furlong handicap at Jamaica to-day, when it is intended to give him his final trial in public. Other Metropolitan horses entered today at Jamaica are Bohemia, Pasadena, and Sir Brillar, all in the Williamsburg Handicap.

Of the list of entries for the big race the horses that have earned penalties so far are Ormonde's Right, four pounds extra for winning the Carter Handicap, which will bring his weight up to 108 pounds, and Bohemia and Santa Catalina, eight pounds each for wins at Washington, Aqueduct, and Jamaica, making their weights 98 for Santa Catalina and 96 for Bohemia.

Vanderbilt's Horse Bengal Won.

PARIS, May 1.—W. K. Vanderbilt's Bengal won the principal event at the St. Cloud races to-day, while King Edward was an interested onlooker. This was the Prix de Roi Soleil of $3,000, distance about 2,200 yards. Bengal was not the favorite, Count Ephrussi's Proud being considered a sure winner. Ransch, the American jockey, who rode Bengal, took the lead at the first turn and won handsomely.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

J. H. McCormick's four-year-old horse Crown Prince, entered in the last race yesterday and engaged again to-day, ran away with a light boy who was galloping him between the first and second races at Jamaica yesterday, and went two miles before he could be pulled up. It was intended to draw him from yesterday's race, but the runaway may put him in retirement for some time more.

Courier, ridden by T. Burns, was crowded in the middle of the field in the first furlong of the second race yesterday and fell, throwing Burns heavily. The rider was badly shaken up, but pulled himself together and insisted on keeping his engagements, riding in the next race.

Jockeys O'Neil and Baird led the riders at Jamaica yesterday, each having two winners, Baird's being the long chance Incubator and the second choice Czaraphine, while O'Neil got to the post first on the favorites Lady Amelia and Inspiration.

Montreson, regarded as a star in the stable of R. T. Wilson, Jr., last season, went into the selling class yesterday, when he ran in the colors of Mrs. J. Blute for the Newtown Stakes. It may be his last appearance, as he was pulled up after running less than a quarter of a mile, so lame that he could hardly get back to the paddock.

The three silver cups, intended as trophies for the owner, trainer, and jockey of the winner of the first race at Belmont Park, the Belmont Park Inaugural, and a painting of Beldame, all reminders of the big event coming on Thursday, were on exhibition in the paddock at Jamaica yesterday.

Julius Bauer, trainer of the big stable of two-year-olds which will race jointly for the trainer and A. Featherstone this season, has secured a three-year contract on the Lexington (Ky.) jockey Reamy Macy, who when recently was reinstated after being suspended at Hot Springs, will not report to the stable for the Eastern engagement until after the Lexington meeting ends.

It has been announced from St. Louis that Otto Stifel, partner with C. E. Rowe in the stable of horses racing in Trainer Rowe's name, and including Colonial Girl and First Mason, has decided to retire from the turf. The stable now is in the East, where the partnership only a short time ago was registered with The Jockey Club.

Buttle's Pool Combinations Won.

Superior cue work in manipulating pool combination shots resulted in Robert Buttle defeating Edward Stroder last night in the continuation of the professional tournament for the championship of New York. Buttle completed his string of 125 balls, while Stroder had only sent 63 balls into the pockets. The match was played in Sander's Academy, 60 West One Hundred and Sixteenth Street. Throughout the competition Buttle's runs were nearly all in double figures. His best effort was 23 balls, and during the match 3 scratches were called against him. Stroder's best run was 17 balls and he made 4 scratches. The contestants scheduled for to-night's game are Arthur Darrow and Arthur Lindwall.

The Boston team surprised about 2,000 enthusiastic spectators at American League Park yesterday by defeating the Greater New Yorks, four to three, in eleven innings and exhibiting the form which gave it the championship last year. It was a finely contested game in the face of a cold and blustry northwest wind, and, while the champions showed their superiority with the bat and played without a mistake in the field, they were entitled to but one run, while the New Yorks earned all of theirs.

Hogg, the new recruit from the Pacific Coast League, and the veteran McGuire were responsible for the downfall of their team. An unusually wild throw by McGuire to second base gave the Bostons one run in the third inning, a balk sent Ferris across the plate in the fourth inning, and a wild pitch tallied Parent in the fifth. Orth, who succeeded Hogg in the sixth inning, pitched an excellent game until the eleventh inning, when he was hit for a triple and two singles, and one earned run, which proved to be the winning one was the result.

With all the good displays in the field and the closeness of the contest, the most interesting feature of the playing was the pitching of "Cy" Young, who for eighteen years has been a conspicuous figure on the diamond. While the mighty Chesbro and "Jack" Powell, the mainstays of the Greater New Yorks in the box, are not exactly in condition to pitch their best ball yet Young rarched a more finished, skillful or effective game than yesterday. Every one of the New Yorks with the exception of Elberfeld, Anderson, and Fultz struck out one or more times, and twelve batsmen failed to connect with the ball during the eleven innings. He gave no bases on called balls, and, barring the fourth inning, when a triple, a double, a single, and a long fly produced three earned runs, his delivery was of the most puzzling nature. Singular as it may seem, the big Bostonian was perspiring freely from his efforts, while the other players and spectators were shivering with the cold.

It was in the third inning that Jesse Burkett, the ex-champion batsmen of the National League, made the first safe hit of the game. In stealing to second Burkett drove the ball over Elberfeld's head, and, passing Anderson, the run got home. Ferris scored in the fourth inning on a fine three-base hit to centre field and a balk by Hogg. In the fifth inning Burkett opened with a single, but was forced out at second by Parent. The latter reached second on Stahl's one-base hit, and on a wild pitch Parent scored from second base. It was not until the eleventh inning that the visitors were enabled to score again, when, after Ferris had been retired, Criger tripled to centre field, and tallied on Young's good hit to right field.

For three innings the New Yorks were retired in the order of appearing at the bat. In the fourth, however, Dougherty batted out a double to centre field, reached third on Elberfeld's bunt, and both runners tallied on Williams's hit to right field for three bases. The latter subsequently scored on Anderson's long fly to right field. After this the New Yorks made but four hits and nine men struck out.

PHILADELPHIA, 4; BROOKLYN, 2.

Outbatted and outfielded, the Brooklyn team succumbed to the Philadelphia nine yesterday at Washington Park, Brooklyn, by a score of 4 to 2. Hanlon's men were wholly at the mercy of Corridon, who was admirably supported, and allowed but five base hits. On the other hand the Quakers found no difficulty in hitting Eason. Each team scored in but two innings, the Brooklyns beginning the run getting in the second inning. Lewis got first on called balls and went to third on Babb's one-base hit to right field. On Babb's attempt to steal Lewis tallied. In the third inning Sheckard scored on a single, Bransfield's fumble of Batch's hit, and Owens's bunt.

In the fifth inning the Philadelphias began to bunt successfully. Doolin and Corridon reached first, and Thomas beat out his hit, filling the bases. On Gleason's two-baser Doolin and Corridon scored, and Thomas tallied on Courtney's out from Eason to Babb. Doolin scored the fourth run for the Quakers in the last inning by good hitting. NATIONAL LEAGUE.

McGraw's Team Hits Fraser with Ease and Wins by 8 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 1.—John J. McGraw and his New York champions made their first appearance of the season at the South End to-day, and, before an audience of 1,500 shivering fans, polished off Tenney's Boston Nationals in easy fashion by 8 to 2. There never was a doubt as to which team would win or as to which was the superior baseball aggregation. The New Yorks got off the mark in hurrah fashion, and after scoring four runs in the first two innings, began to take things easy, and, despite the cold, had lots of fun.

Mathewson was in the box for the Giants, and he toyed with the locals. He did not seem to exert himself, and at times simply tossed the ball to the plate. Besides pitching in excellent form he batted out two doubles and made a sacrifice.

Vainly the "bleacherites" called on Boston for a rally, for it was very cold, and the players, taking no chances, played with their sweaters on.

The champions scored in the first, Strang making a single, stealing second, and tallying on Bresnahan's one-base hit. In the second inning Bowerman doubled, Mathewson sacrificed, and Donlin singled. Strang got his base on called balls, but Bresnahan went out to Needham. Mertes tripled, scoring three runs. Donlin hit safely in the fourth, and worked around home on a wild pitch, Strang's bunt, and Bresnahan's fly to Cannell. Mathewson doubled in the sixth, took third on Donlin's sacrifice, and came home on Strang's single. In the eighth Mathewson again hit for two bases, and scored on Donlin's safety.

Boston's first run came in the fourth. Tenney reached first on called balls, went to second on Abbaticchio's out to Bowerman, and scored on Wolverton's double to right. Needham's single, followed by Fraser's double, gave Boston its second tally in the ninth inning. The score:

EIGHTEEN PAGES.

THE ALBANY SITUATION.

The Tribune presents a sombre and disagreeable picture of the situation of the Legislature within four days of the time agreed on for adjournment. The picture is in the nature of a triptych. The first panel shows the things done; the second the things that ought to have been done and are not; the third the things that ought not to be done at all, but which the lobby and the lobby's agents among the members are yet likely to get done.

The first panel is nearly empty. A mortgage tax bill has been passed which the Governor is about ready to abandon as absolutely unworkable. A stock tax bill has been passed, which, with the mortgage tax, the Republican city leaders say, will make the defeat of the Democrats this Fall impossible. The franchise power of the Aldermen has been abolished by a bill that must be passed over the veto of the Mayor. The Gas Investigation Committee has been authorized, and its bills are in grave danger of being killed by a combination of Republicans and Tammany men.

The second panel of the picture, which contains the things that ought to have been done and are not, is pretty full. There are the gas bills, the water bills, the police bill, a workable mortgage tax bill, a bill for the repeal of the tax on savings, the Raines law amendments, the bill to extend the term of the Mayor, and the report of the Committee on Judge HOOKER. Some of these may be transferred to the first list during the few days remaining, but it is improbable.

The third panel of the picture is filled with very bad things. The Niagara grab measures are perhaps the worst, and The Tribune warns the decent men in the Legislature that there will be a powerful combination between the backers of these measures and those of the others of like kind which it will be very hard to resist. The defeat of the gas and water bills will be the chief objective, so far as this city is concerned, of this combination. In the deal it is to be expected that the defeat of the gas and electric light bills especially will command the most gold from the Tammany men.

Whatever may be done in the next few days, it will be impracticable to make a respectable record for an unusually long session of the Legislature. Were the opposition organized and morally strong the result should be a change in the political complexion of the Legislature this Fall, but it looks now as if the worst features of the session would be as much the fault of the opposition as of the majority.

THE CITY'S PROPERTY.

By its recommendation that this city be authorized to use water power under the grants to be conferred in terms of the Greater New York Water bill, the Stevens investigating committee upsets the Governor's argument against this provision of economy and at the same time dissolves its own stricture upon the sale for limited periods of surplus electrical and water power by the city. Here is the verdict of the committee:

> That the City of New York be given authority to utilize water power now owned or hereafter acquired by it for the purpose of generating electric current for the use of the municipality, provided that no additional water shall be used for said purposes that would otherwise be required by the city.

This is an unjust verdict, inasmuch as the principle that holds for the city's use for internal lighting purposes of the enormous waterhead of six hundred feet of the new Ashokan Reservoir in the Catskills applies with equal force to the sale, under short-time contracts, of surplus water and electrical power upon the city's property that would otherwise be wasted. Greater New York City must construct a water system to supply more than its present needs. It is vastly cheaper to buy at once water sources sufficient to supply the population of seven millions in 1925, and to build thereon permanent dams, aqueducts, and other works commensurate with the plan for the city's future. But in this comprehensive system water rights and property must be acquired that could not be immediately utilized. Having fulfilled the electric lighting requirements, which would indeed prove a boon to this extortion-ridden city, additional volumes of wasted power would daily flow through the expensive conduits to the sea—that is, if the recommendation of the Stevens Commission becomes operative by the Legislature. To sell the power not used for domestic purposes, on the other hand, would materially lighten the great cost of the projected waterworks and lessen the rates to consumers.

But it should not be necessary to plead for a measure so eminently sanctioned by municipal good sense. The city must buy and pay liberally for its new property. May it not manage this new property according to its own strictest notions of economy?

THE INDUSTRIES OF THE SOUTH.

It is a fact of which the importance could not be easily overestimated that more than one-half the new railroad mileage now under contract or construction in this country is to be credited to the Southern States. Here is a table recently compiled by The Railway Age showing the number of miles of railroad now actually under contract or construction, and also the number of miles planned or contemplated and likely to be under construction in the immediate future, classified under the heading of "Live Projects":

	Under Contract or Construction. Miles.	Live Projects. Miles.
New England States	37	103
Middle States	455	55
Central Northern States	681	651
South Atlantic States	1,156	1,547
Gulf and Mississippi Valley States	1,110	902
Southwestern States	2,500	2,031
Northwestern States	628	1,243
Pacific States	933	2,000
Total	7,500	9,332

It will be seen that the South Atlantic States have under construction 1,156 miles, the Gulf and Mississippi Valley States 1,110 miles, and the Southwestern States 2,500 miles, making a total of 4,776 miles for the Southern States, as against 2,724 miles for the Northern States. Again, it will be observed that 5,280 miles out of a total mileage of 9,332 under the heading "Live Projects" are reported from the Southern States.

There could be no surer evidence, not merely of the awakening of the South, but of the fact that it is industrially wide awake and undergoing remarkable development. It would be a matter of merely temporary and present moment to say that business in the South is now active and prosperous. The figures we have given of railway building in the Southern States are of much more far-reaching significance. Their plain meaning is that the South is advancing to a place of higher prominence in the country's trade and productive industries. For a variety of reasons all well known—slavery, the civil war, the blighting years of reconstruction, want of capital, and "disharmonies," as M. METCHNIKOFF would call them, in the adaptation of agricultural and industrial processes to soil and climate—the South has only slowly come to get her due share of benefit from the powerful impulses of growth and development which a quarter of a century ago began to do their work in the North.

The Southern States have become rich from the sale of enormous crops of cotton at good prices. Last year's crop of over 13,000,000 bales necessarily forced down the market quotations for the staple. The unexpected size of the crop was regarded as a calamity when the figures were announced, but the price has of late shown an upward tendency, and a great deal of cotton has been held back to get the advantage of the rise. Again the crop, in spite of the early disappointment, will add enormously to the wealth of the South. In this country capital almost of necessity creates business. The Southerners are everywhere seeking home investments for their money. Manufactures are increasing, and through a wiser choice of crops and better processes Southern agricultural productiveness has of late notably increased.

These conditions explain why the South now outstrips the North in the figures of new railroad mileage. As industries multiply and business increases transportation facilities are required. Moreover, alert-minded men in the South are already studying the effect upon the Southern half of the Union, and particularly upon the Gulf States, of the opening of the Panama Canal. That event seems a long way off, but not too far off to be reckoned with. Almost inevitably the creation of this new waterway, shortening by thousands of miles the sea route to the west coast of South America, to our own Pacific Coast, and to the markets of Asia, must build up an export trade of much greater volume than that which now exists. The great railroad systems of the Central West will naturally seek Southern extensions and Gulf port terminals to secure their share of the new trade. Some of the systems already have terminal facilities on the Gulf. It is not too early to be thinking about these matters, and when the canal shall actually be begun the plans of the railroads will quickly take definite shape.

It will not escape the attention of persons accustomed to study underlying trade conditions that the railroad mileage now under contract or construction in this country will call for the expenditure of a good deal of money. It is the opinion of The Railway Age that perhaps not more than 4,000 of the 7,500 miles under contract will actually be completed this year. Within the ensuing twelve months, however, the entire 7,500 miles will be substantially finished. At $20,000 a mile, which is a fair average cost of construction, this means an expenditure of $150,000,000. If in addition $8,000 a mile is allowed for equipment we reach the imposing total of $175,000,000. Conceding that two-thirds of this great sum will be expended for labor, there remains in round numbers $60,000,000 to be expended for railway supplies. This is an item of no little importance in the country's business, particularly in the business of the builders of locomotives and cars, the makers of steel rails, and the purveyors of minor articles of railway equipment.

HOLIDAY HOODLUMS.

The Interborough Company is to be congratulated upon the neatness and completeness of the short method which it has adopted, it must be owned not with undue precipitation, respecting the young rowdies who have been infesting its south-bound trains on Sunday afternoons. In the Spring the young hoodlum's fancy lightly turns to making a nuisance of himself in the safest and most effective way. The safest and most effective way might well seem to him to aggregate himself in considerable numbers and take possession of a car which carried but one guard and a complement of peaceable passengers, largely women and children. To terrorize such a company is child's play, or rather hobbledehoy's play, for a crowd of able-bodied young rowdies of a malicious turn of mind. There is really nothing to prevent the occupants of any public conveyance from being insulted and frightened, for once, in order to make a hoodlum's holiday.

What the hoodlum fortunately forgets is that once is, or ought to be, the extent of his possible success in this line, and that forewarned on the part of his victims is forearmed. When his outrages are advertised in advance the end of them is near. While it is not practicable to collect policemen in sufficient numbers to control or punish him after he has taken possession of a car, it is perfectly practicable to collect them in advance when his intentions are known or reasonably suspected. That is what has now happened on the Interborough. It is what happened some years ago on the Brooklyn Bridge, when some young blackguards, on their daily passage across it, made a practice of taking possession of a car and frightening all the peaceable passengers of the same. One police "haul" at the Manhattan end of the entire party of malefactors put a stop to that practice. We may reasonably expect the haul of last Sunday to have the same effect upon the Interborough. If not, the dose must be repeated as occasion serves.

It is unjust to the "lower east side" to describe it as the exclusive habitat of the hoodlum. There are many other districts in which he equally flourishes. In fact, there is scarcely any district in which he does not flourish and disport himself after his kind as soon as the patrolman's back is turned. If the wayfarers or the householders in the neighborhood of his operations would take the trouble to report his misdeeds to the headquarters of the precinct a due provision of "plain clothes men" would doubtless reduce his activities within the limits of public decency.

TO SAVE THE CITY'S TREES.

An effort is now making to bring together and make effective in co-operation the influences which can be utilized in impressing upon the Mayor, the members of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and the Presidents of the several boroughs of New York, the immediate importance of measures calculated to save for the city its assets in the few remaining trees which have survived neglect in its parks and public places.

For some years past the attention of those interested in municipal development along lines which must be followed if New York is ever to claim rank as a city of the first class has been largely directed to the multiplication of small parks and recreation grounds, and this movement is one which invites approval and assistance from every point of view. But mere open spaces are not beautiful, and as playgrounds they offer few attractions. Under the most favorable conditions it will require a quarter of a century to cover such spaces with shade trees, and even that will be impossible if they are not wisely selected, skillfully planted, suitably nourished, and well cared for. Experience leads us to believe that they will be chosen on the recommendation of interested dealers, that they will be planted in a haphazard way, and thereafter neglected until they die.

There are in New York at the present time many thousands of trees wholly neglected and falling into premature decay. Some of the best of them are being ruthlessly destroyed by the corporations which run electric wires for various purposes; most of the others are starving to death. These trees are worth saving, but they will not be saved unless public opinion shall demand that what they need be done for them promptly and liberally. They now need everything a tree can require to make it healthy and beautiful and permit it to fulfill its function. The problem of tree conservation is not a difficult one. A relatively small annual expenditure wisely employed will accomplish all that can now be done to correct the consequences of years of neglect. The annual appropriations for park maintenance are probably already sufficient, especially if some unnecessary improvements are postponed; but it is deemed more to the interest of those charged with responsibility for our parks to spend their appropriations in other ways. The labor most useful to the district leaders is not the kind which can be utilized in tree surgery. At least $50,000 a year should be expended under scientific direction in the care of the city's trees, and for the next few years a much larger sum might with advantage be employed. If this is not done Central, Prospect, and other great parks will show rapid and irreparable deterioration, the small parks throughout the city will be neither useful nor beautiful, and what remains of our dissipated heritage of trees will rapidly find its way to the woodpiles of the men who will cut them down. Perhaps they will be replaced, but it will not be within the knowledge of the present generation of our citizens.

To save the city's trees it is necessary that those interested in this worthy expression of civic pride shall work in harmony and with enthusiasm to impress the Mayor, the Controller, the Presidents of the several boroughs, and the Commissioners of Parks that public opinion demands that the city's assets in trees shall be conserved. If the present year is allowed to pass without an effort in this direction the resulting damage is likely to be so great that it would be undervalued at a million of dollars. If time was not an element in the growth of a tree the case would be different. Unless we are willing that our parks shall look like nurseries or hop gardens, there is no time to lose in moving for the protection of our sadly neglected trees.

THE PUSHCART EVIL.

The contention of the pushcart peddlers, in resisting any attempt to control their industry, that they have a right to earn a living, is undisputed. That does not mean that they have the right to earn their living by ways which create and maintain a public nuisance; that they shall obstruct and foul the streets or that they shall vend stale fish, decayed fruit, or vegetables or "truck" which appeals to the improvident poor. Still less does it imply that they may maintain a constant disturbance of the peace by their raucous cries to attract attention; that they shall plant their vehicles in unauthorized places in front of the stores or the homes of citizens, or block the sidewalks with groups of customers to the inconvenience of others.

The city needs more markets, especially in the crowded east side neighborhoods. These should be provided, and the fullest and freest competition should be encouraged among those who wish to vend honest merchandise. It also needs its streets for the purposes for which they were opened and paved, and no argument has yet been advanced to show that any public interest is served by licensing street obstructions in the shape of movable stalls and hucksters' wagons. The right to earn a living does not carry with it the right to earn it in any way one pleases, especially if the way which pleases him invades the rights of the community. Mayor MCCLELLAN'S good purpose to restrict the pushcart evil seems to have failed to materialize.

THE RUSSIAN NAVAL PROBLEM.

While the indications clearly are that ROJESTVENSKY is awaiting the advent of NEBOGATOFF in order to make a combined "dash for Vladivostok," the dispatches have contained nothing that can fairly be called evidence of a junction of the two forces. Such evidence would have to be strong and clear to overcome the antecedent improbability that NEBOGATOFF has managed to carry along his heterogeneous squadron of an antiquated battleship, an antiquated armored cruiser, and three vessels built for coast defense, at the rate of eight knots an hour. The squadron of NEBOGATOFF is not an aggregation the progress of which could in any circumstances be properly described as a "dash." The story that the hospitality of France is about to be replaced by the hospitality of Germany, and that the two squadrons are likely to make the Caroline Islands their rendezvous and base, may be very shortly dismissed on the ground of its intrinsic improbability.

But the problem of the Russian commanders being obviously and necessarily to reach the Siberian port, and the Japanese awaiting them with every advantage of position, at the point which they are obliged to pass, in the Korean Strait, if they take the most direct and convenient route to their objective, it is of course conceivable that they should have chosen a more circuitous and less convenient route, which offers some inconveniences to their enemies as well as to themselves. To make for the open Pacific out of the China Sea would doubtless have the advantage of not encountering the enemy at his own chosen battlefield. It would also have the advantage of putting off the evil day, if the Russian commanders agree with the naval experts of all other nations in recognizing the high probability that the day of meeting would be an evil day for themselves. But it would remain true that the attempt of the Russians to make Vladivostok by avoiding the Korean Strait and keeping to the eastward of the Japanese archipelago would at most gain time for them, in a case in which their efficiency being at its maximum already, time would no longer be an object for them; and also that it would involve them in fresh difficulties.

For, once in the open Pacific, it would still be necessary for the combined Russian squadrons to go back into land-locked waters in order to reach Vladivostok. They would be more at the mercy of Japanese fleets than ever in the Korean Strait, between the two great Japanese islands of Nippon and Yezo, and in the La Perouse Strait between Yezo and Sakhalin. In either case they would have to traverse a strait far narrower, more tortuous, and more difficult than the Korean, and quite equally under the complete control of their enemy. That the Japanese have neglected any obvious measure of prudence the Russians can no longer believe. And no measure of prudence could be more obvious than the sowing of these two narrow straits with mines, which is far easier with either or both than with the wider Strait of Korea. They have already been declared "within the zone of operations" of the Japanese, and neutral commerce warned out of them, of course with that intention. Upon the whole it continues to seem likely that the Russian commanders will choose the straight road to their destination, and take their chance, however desperate that chance may be, of overcoming the Japanese force that blocks it. In other words, it still seems likely that the decisive sea fight will take place in the Korean Strait.

TO RESCUE ELEVENTH AVENUE.

United Effort Needed to Secure Depression of Railroad Tracks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For a number of years the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad has occupied Eleventh Avenue in this city with its tracks. When it was permitted to take the streets for its use this part of the city was sparsely populated and the danger to life and limb was not great. The city has been growing rapidly in population. With this growth the dangers to life and limb have increased and its record for deaths and maimed since it was established is appalling.

Numerous efforts have been made to compel the company to remove its tracks from the avenue. Until this year none has been pushed with vigor. A bill was introduced by Senator SAXE, at the request of the residents of his district, supported, I believe, by all our citizens who have given the object a thought, to compel the railroad company to build a subway in which it could carry its freight without endangering the lives of the people, giving it the same rights in the subway, and no more, which it now possesses on the avenue, subject to the approval of the Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners.

This bill passed the Senate after hearings being given both sides, it was read twice in the Assembly, it was on the order of third reading for final passage when, owing to the influence of the New York Central, it was recommitted to the Committee on Cities, who did not report it. It now goes to the Committee on Rules. It is to get the Committee on Rules to report it, and the members of the Assembly to pass it, that I solicit your help.

We respectfully appeal to every citizen who has the interests and improvement of the city at heart and justice to the people who are directly interested. In the name of these I appeal to you to aid us in getting the bill reported to the Assembly by the Committee on Rules by writing to them and to the member of Assembly from your district, urging him to vote for the passage of the bill.

JOHN P. CHIDWICK.

New York, April 29, 1905.

Tribute to Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to your editorial this morning upon the death of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee I cannot refrain from bearing testimony to what you say with regard to his personal sentiments toward the Northern States. I doubt if any prominent Southerner lived who did more and used his influence to greater advantage toward reconciling the North and South than did Gen. Lee.

Twenty-five years ago, as a young man, I accompanied Gen. Lee on a tour through the Southern States, where he was delivering a lecture on "The Battle of Chancellorsville" for the benefit of the Southern Historical Society of Richmond, Va. The journey was managed by the Secretary of the society, who, although a typical Southern gentleman, held very strong opinions on the subject of the war and was not disinclined to give expression to them. Gen. Lee took every occasion to state his sentiments of regard and friendly feeling for the North, not only on the lecture platform but in private conversation, and on numerous instances he restrained the Secretary above referred to from using intolerant or fervid language when introducing Gen. Lee to an audience. His lovable character and kindly and generous disposition endeared him to all those who enjoyed the pleasure and honor of his friendship. In his death we have all suffered a loss.

Despoiling Niagara.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see in your paper of Friday that the Niagara thieves are at it again.

It ought to drown the whole Republican Party in the State, and I hope it will, though I have been a Republican ever since there were any.

If all readers of your widespread journal—every one who has seen or wishes to see Niagara in its pristine beauty—members of schools, colleges, and associations would wear a badge of mourning on the left arm for the first week in May, the display of public feeling might startle even our wise legislators.

CASSANDRA.

West Brighton, April 29, 1905.

Fined for a Laugh.

From The London Chronicle.

"Insulting behavior" is a very elastic charge in Australia. It may cover anything from pitch-and-toss to manslaughter. Its latest application comes from Bendigo. In that golden city, where the late Marquis of Salisbury tried his luck as a digger in 1852, the authorities of a Methodist Church decided to suppress juvenile giggling. They introduced a policeman in plain clothes, and he detected a couple of small boys laughing during the evening service. The boys were brought into court on a charge of "insulting behavior" and fined 10s. each, plus 11s. 6d. costs. There are very few of us who have not been guilty of this crime at some period of our lives.

A MAYTIME MADRIGAL.

Who loves not May
Is out of tune;
That merry month
Next door to June,
When skies are fair,
Buds scent the air,
When birds all sing
And care takes wing.
Who loves not May is thankless clay.
In this bright world not fit to stay.

But still, I swan,
When I've put on
Lisle threads and serge,
And make a splurge
In silken socks,
With stripes and clocks,
And Oxford ties,
Grip puts me wise:
I wore my X-ray till the soon,
Lamb's wool is good enough till June.

USE OF FIREPROOF WOOD.

Reasons for the Disfavor Expressed by Architects and Builders.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Relative to the article in to-day's TIMES signed "Veritas," which is most palpably a "fire-proof wood" inspiration, I want to call your attention to the fact that the only defense of Section 105 of the Building Code will come from those who have a direct financial interest in one of the three favored "fire-proofing" companies, or their paid attorneys. The architects and builders who have petitioned the Fire Commissioner for relief are among the foremost in architecture and building in this city; the facts they state are the results of experience, and their reputation and standing should certainly entitle them to a careful hearing.

FAIR PLAY.

New York, April 27, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When I was Chief Engineer of the Department of Buildings in 1896-1897 under Mayor Strong, the matter of using fireproofed wood was submitted to me, and I then made some tests of this in connection with wire-glass. At that time it appeared that some fake fireproof wood was on the market. Since then many other fakes have been put on the market.

The difficulty does not lie in the production of fireproofed wood, but entirely in obtaining competent, conscientious Inspectors who will do their duties honestly.

Other fakes I desire to call attention to, are the fire tests now being made in New York City at temperatures of only 1,700 degree Fahrenheit. I herewith wish to declare fire tests of materials made at average temperatures of 1,700 degrees Fahrenheit as shams and frauds. They do in no sense of the word determine the fireproof qualities of materials.

New York, April 27, 1905.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The action of the builders and architects, who have applied to Fire Commissioner Hayes to help them in an effort to do away with the requirement for fireproofed woodwork in buildings above a certain height, is, perhaps, a matter exclusively for experts to pass upon. It occurs, however, to one who is not an expert, that this action is but another instance of the fact that those who are responsible for our building operations are more anxious to make things easy for themselves than to make their buildings safe.

ROMANCE OF A CAB HORSE.

Lottery Wins Race After Nights in London Streets.

From The London Chronicle of April 21.

There is a popular belief that many racehorses are fated to end their days between the shafts of London night cabs. A reversal of this unhappy order of things has occurred in the case of an animal owned by Mr. T. Taylor, a West Molesey farmer, and a member of the West Surrey Stag Hunt. Twenty-one years ago Mr. Taylor purchased a London night cab horse for £5, being struck by its fine lines, and trained it, for racing. The horse, Lottery by name, has since won eight races for Mr. Taylor at Hunt point-to-point meetings, his last victory being at the West Surrey Hunt races, where, despite a forty-two-pound penalty, the animal won a fine race by a head.

Mr. Taylor intends to run Lottery at the United Hunts' meeting at Lingfield on May 1, (which will be his last race,) when his owner, who is a clever horseman, will be in the saddle.

The recent parallel to this case was that of Corkscrew, owned by a Leamington mews proprietor. This gelding, a great lumbering beast of ungainly action, was for some years occupied in pulling a butcher's cart in the district of the Royal Spa.

Mr. E. J. Rollason, the well-known trainer of horses, and evidently a very keen judge, offered the butcher a five-pound note for the animal, providing a discount in the shape of a large piece of beef was conceded.

Corkscrew's average training burden was about 14 stone, and he won many races in the Birmingham district before any one had the temerity to buy him after one of his selling-plate victories. His new owner quickly tired of trying to train the animal, which was given back to Mr. Rollason, who, keeping his training secret closely, again piled on the weight for home work, and won several more events.

Robbing Trunks in Italy.

From The London Truth.

A traveler just returned from Italy reports that a trunk belonging to one of his party was cut open on the railway between Rome and Genoa, and clothes abstracted to the value of £20. When he consulted the British Consul on the subject he heard that a lady had been at the consulate a few minutes before who had lost the whole of her valuable jewelry in the same way. It is really astonishing that the Italian police and the railway companies between them do not take effectual steps to stop this scandal. There is no other civilized country where travelers' luggage is habitually rifled while in charge of the railway companies as it is in Italy, and the knowledge that this is so must keep many people out of the country, especially wealthy travelers, whom it is the interest of the authorities to encourage. In the meantime I would point out to travelers in Italy that the insurance of luggage against theft is a precaution that should always be taken.

The Dead of the Glacier.

From The London Chronicle.

Lady Florence Dixie's appeal to all who may be visiting Zermatt this Summer will intensify interest in the chance that the Zmutt glacier may give up the long-lost body of her brother, Lord Francis Douglas. Since the rope broke on the return from the first ascent of the Matterhorn, just forty years ago, and Mr. Whymper and two guides helplessly saw the fall of Lord Francis, two English companions and the third guide, no trace of Lord Francis but one sleeve has ever been found, though the other bodies were at once recovered. The portion of the glacier which may have entombed him, however, will reach the valley this year. Chamonix has twice witnessed such late recoveries as that now hoped for. The remains of three guides overwhelmed by an avalanche on Mont Blanc in 1820 reappeared four miles lower in 1861, and those of Capt. Arkwright, an avalanche victim of 1866, were similarly found in 1897.

Five Francs Per Mourner.

From The London Telegraph.

PARIS, April 22.—At Stampes, near Versailles, strange scenes were witnessed at a funeral yesterday. A rich bachelor of the locality recently died, leaving a large fortune to the parish and disinheriting his relatives. In his will there were inserted instructions to the effect that each person attending his funeral should receive 5f. This was bruited abroad, and as the funeral was on the point of starting, yesterday, a crowd of the most indigent creatures of the whole district appeared in sight. It was arranged by the Mayor and the municipal councillors that all these wretched people should receive some money, and that as many of them as could be accommodated in cabs and vans should attend the funeral. The more able-bodied mendicants, not quite satisfied with the decision, beside took possession not only of the cabs and vans, but also of six landaus, intended for the Mayor, the town councilors, and the sub-prefect. The beggars were threatened and then implored to leave the landaus, but they only laughed at the Mayor and his friends, who decided not to attend the funeral. This moved off, followed only by the mendicants, who fairly enjoyed themselves in the vehicles which they had carried by assault. The Mayor and the councilors are now debating as to the advisability of distributing the 5f. pieces themselves to the rich parishioners only to the most deserving among the indigent inhabitants of Stampes.

THE CREDIT DUE FULTON.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The controversy in regard to the invention of the steamboat is a most interesting one, from the fact that all of your correspondents seem to agree as to the priority of John Fitch as inventor of steam navigation.

Twenty years before the advent of the Fulton boat Fitch was studying the means of steam propulsion, a question all-important upon rivers like the Ohio. In those days flatboats were built, for instance, in Pittsburg for use between there and New Orleans, going down the river only, for there was no method by which they could get back. His dream has been realized, and his genius gave to the world the original plan and the first practical steamboat. The whole world universally admits this fact, and yet a statue to Fulton stands in the halls of our National Capitol, a shining and remarkable example of stolen honors. Why should this survive to mislead all coming generations? Better remove the head of Fulton from the various statues and place thereon the head of the true genuis with the proper name thereunder.

There is no doubt in my mind that through the effort of Robert R. Livingston a better boat was built by Fulton than that produced by Fitch. This was a natural development, during thirteen years between the two events, and does not in any way detract from Fitch the credit due him as the original inventor of the application of steam to navigation, which occurred when his boat was launched on the Delaware in 1787. It is just as reasonable to say that De Soto discovered America as to claim that Fulton invented the steamboat.

The following extract may enlighten the public:

"An extract from 'Reminiscences of Saratoga and Ballston,' by William L. Stone. Published in 1880 at New York by R. Worthington, 750 Broadway. Pages 235-8.

"At this point the Rev. Mr. Potter,* (since the Right Rev. Bishop Potter of Pennsylvania,) a young Episcopal divine, who is married to a daughter of the late Robert R. Livingston, and is consequently nephew by marriage of Gen. Lewis, joined in the conversation.

FULTON.

"'I am surprised, General, at your remarks,' said he, 'my own observation leading me to believe that many descend into history as successful claimants for public honors who, if the facts were known, would stand in a very different light. Probably no person has received so much praise and deserved so little as Robert Fulton. A man of no practical ingenuity, of no power of conceiving, much less of executing, an original mechanical idea, his friend Colton has succeeded in persuading the public that to him is due the successful navigation of our rivers by steam. The facts, however, as I gathered them from my father-in-law, and which I believe to be substantially correct, are as follows: For thirteen years before the first steamboat was placed upon the Collect [Pond] in New York, John Fitch had run a little steamer on the Delaware with great success. During that period he had experimented with various kinds of propelling power—the screw, sidewheel, and sweeps or long oars. The most primitive thing about his vessel was the boiler, which consisted simply of two potash kettles, riveted together.

"'Mr. Livingston, who was greatly interested in the success of Fitch's experiments, seized the opportunity, when Minister to France, to visit the workshop of Watt & Bolton in England, where for the first time he saw a properly constructed boiler. But how was he to introduce it into the United States, unless (which was them impossible) he went there himself? At this crisis he thought of Robert Fulton, who, originally an artist in Philadelphia, was then exhibiting a panorama in Paris. His panoramas, however, failing to pay, was attached, and he himself arrested for debt and thrown into prison. Livingston, falling into the error so common to many, of believing that because an artist can draw cleverly he must necessarily succeed equally well on mechanical conception and execution, paid off Fulton's debts and sent him over to New York with one of Watt's boilers. Fulton, however, failed to rise to the occasion; and when Livingston returned, a year after, he found his pet project precisely where he had left it several years before. He therefore at once took hold of it himself, and by his energy and perseverance finally brought his idea to a successful issue. Fulton, whom he could not entirely shake off, acting as a kind of general Superintendent.'"

*These statements, moreover, are confirmed, not only by the late President William A. Duer in his "New Yorker," (Letter 7,) but by Mr. Ransom Cook, now (1879) living at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. Mr. Cook informs me that in the Summer of 1837 he was engaged upon his electro-magnetic machinery. Among his workmen were two who had been employed by Livingston and Fulton while those gentlemen were perfecting their steamboat. They surprised him greatly by stating that Fulton was a capital draughtsman, and that was all. They added that he was so deficient in a knowledge of the laws of mechanics as to furnish daily mirth for the workmen; and that it was a long time before Livingston could convince him that the "starting bar" of an engine should be made larger at the fulcrum than at the handle! Would T. W. R. W. Brooklyn, address me direct?

HENRY M. FITCH.

New York, April 28, 1905.

Downtown Site for New Court House.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been much surprised to see you take a stand for locating the new court house uptown. I think it is true that more than nine-tenths of the lawyers are firmly of the opinion that it should be located as near as possible to the old one. The lawyers know what is most convenient to them as well as to litigants, witnesses, and jurors, and their opinion on this matter should certainly be accorded the greatest respect.

A QUIET AFTERNOON.

My Mamma, she did go to call about an hour ago,
An' said if I ain't bad at all and stayed at home with Flo,
Which is the maid what cooks for us, she'd bring me somethin' good,
But if I'm one bit mischefuss she didn't think she would.

An' my! I'm still, 'ist like a mouse. I never went outdoors,
But 'ist sat down, inside the house, an' took her bureau drawers
An' emptied 'em 'ist one by one, an' w'en they're emptied 'en
I 'ist looked through what's there for fun an' put 'em back again!

An' 'en I found the nicest ink, an' one of 'em was red,
An' one was black, an' 'en I think I spilt some on the bed,
But my! I wiped it up 'ist so, an' sopped it with a quilt
So clean you wouldn't hardly know it's ever once been spilt.

Well, 'en I looked up on the shelf an' found her scissors there
An' got 'em down all by myself an' cut off all my hair,
'Tus I don't think it's nice for girls like me it's almost through
First reader to wear such a curl like Mamma makes me do.

'En Flo gave me some bread an' jam, 'tus I 'ist cried and cried
'Ist 'tus I'm hungry now, I am, an' 'en I went inside,
An' maybe I did 'ist lay around the room somewhere,
'Tus Flo come in to watch me play an' squshed it on a chair.

An' after while I wish my Ma would 'ist come back, she would,
'Tus, fay, I'm gettin' dreffful tired of simply bein' good,
My eyes! eyre 'ist as full of sand an' heavy, 'ist like lead,
Oh, no-bo! I didn't ICY mean that! I take THE WORDS OUT. E. W. BOLEY.

Seven frolicsome young women swinging across the footlights at the Herald Square Theatre came perilously near to putting an end to the usefulness of a hard-working orchestra that was strenuously performing its labor of accompanying the song which provided the novel feature in the new musical melange which Charles Frohman has elaborately set forth for the entertainment of stay-at-homes and prospective visitors during the hot days in New York.

Incidentally these seven young women, by reason of the capital specialty which engaged them, helped to lift the entertainment, although the entire affair has been put together with so much skill and with such evident appreciation of what the people like who patronize these shows that there had been even up to that time comparatively little doubt of its success.

"The Rollicking Girl," who used to be just "A Dangerous Maid" before Sydney Rosenfeld and W. T. Francis, his accomplice, transformed her, justifies her new title. She would be just the same, to be sure, by any other name, and, indeed, her resemblance to any number of others of her class is marked. She is, in short, a sort of saturated solution of vaudeville, which, according to Mr. Bernard, is the name of a popular form of "contagious entertainment."

As for that particular comedian, he heroically sacrifices his "artistic inclinations" to make a Summer holiday. As Schmaltz, a wigmaker, who rapidly develops into an impresario, and whose chief purpose in life is to "bark out the Johnnies," he seems to have forgotten all about the delicate suggestion which made his Hoggenheimer a genuine comic achievement.

But though Mr. Bernard is less legitimate in his fun in this piece than he was in "The Girl from Kay's," and though his whole effort smacks of the rough and tumble sort of thing, he will provide in it no end of amusement for some time to come.

He has an excruciatingly funny bit in the first act, where he seeks to initiate Hattie Williams into the mysteries of acting. After advising her not to become indignant if the manager offers her a one-line part, he says:

"Valk on this way and say, 'My lady, the letter has came.'"

"I shall say 'come,' not 'came,'" says she.

"Not at all," insists the comedian. "You already vant to teach the author his bizness. Now, ven the author says 'came' he vust vants to show that the maid don't know how iss it to speak the words grammatic."

Once his wife scolds him for forgetting to remember her with a present on her birthday.

"Yust a delicate attention, my dear," he answers; "I didn't vant to remind you that you vere a year older." As an introduction to a capital quartet song, "Indians on Broadway," he is asked, Where is Broadway?

"Broadway," he hesitates, "Oh, Broadway—it runs from the Battery to Vienna." When one of the quartette sings off key he inquires, "Who vass it that made that sour note?" And he expresses a great fondness for "camel's hair cheese."

These exhibits will we trust serve to illustrate Mr. Bernard's methods in a show of this sort if there still remains any one in New York or elsewhere who is not familiar with them. But the comedian's broad drollery and suggestive by-play cannot be translated to type, and it is these which make many of his points seem funny that in cold print seem hopelessly puerile and ineffective.

Like his associate in the fun-making, Joe Coyne sacrifices fine distinctions for a shiny bald wig and the broadest sort of buffoonery, but there is something so delightfully unctuous about his queer English that happily he is irresistible, even when he is most exaggerated.

Aimee Angeles made one of the hits of the night with a dancing speciality, and Sydney de Grey was very pleasing in a grotesque dance and "coon song." Hattie Williams was successful enough when her singing voice was not in evidence, although her various vocal numbers were heartily encored. As the centre of a rich stage picture, which for want of a better name may be called "Liberty Enlightening the Chorus," she was a striking figure.

Mr. Fancis has truck the popular vein in several of his musical numbers, the costumiers and scene painters have done their share of the work very creditably, and the chorus, large and comely, contains no end of rollicking girls to supplement the efforts of the principals.

MR. HAWTREY AS A SOCIALIST.

Emulates Tolstoy in Play to Benefit Actors' Home.

Edward Benham, Lord Cherwell	Charles Hawtrey
Sir George Roscoe, M. D.	Cecil Magnus
Col. Hume	Henry Laurent
John Harris	H. J. Hadfield
Angus Benham	Arthur Hare
John Stokoe	Cyril Young
David Evans	F. Cecil

Enid Hume	Miss Mona Harrison
Valentina Benham	Miss Alice Wilson
Mrs. Porcher	Miss Hertslet
Martha	Miss Margaret V. Dubne
Mrs. Benham	Miss Hetta Bartlett

Although the mantle of charity usually serves to cover a multitude of theatrical sins, there are times when the historic garment falls a little short. Such unfortunately was the case yesterday afternoon when at the Criterion Theatre Charles Hawtrey produced for the first time "The Splendid Life," set down on the bills as a comedy-drama by George P. Hawtrey. But if what was revealed on this occasion in any way reflects a life that is splendid, then we are prepared to say without hesitation: the simple life for ours.

All of which is more of a pity, for the new play contains the germ of a good comic idea that in the hands of a brilliant satirist—say, George Bernard Shaw, for instance—might have been developed into a highly entertaining stage piece.

Mr. Hawtrey appeared as Edward Benham, (Lord Cherwell,) a young English heir, who has just returned to his home after an absence of some years in Russia, during which time he has become imbued with the Socialistic doctrines of Tolstoy. Instead of assuming his title, he proceeds to lay out his estates as a co-operative farm to be managed by his dependents, converts the top floor of his country house into a library for his people's use, and informs his servants and others that they must address him with no more aristocratic prefix than plain Mister. He also provides a public house for the people.

As may be imagined, these arrangements involve him in no end of difficulties. To begin with, his mother, sister, and brother-in-law, who are solicitous for his welfare and the heather finally gets out to prove that he is insane. In this plan he is assisted by a rascally uncle, but the duplicity of the pair is discovered by Enid, the daughter of Benham's overseer. It may be mentioned in passing that the idealist has ere this fallen in love with Enid, and that his affection is reciprocated.

His chief troubles, however, come from the beneficiaries themselves. The committee elected to manage the affairs of the co-operative farm include a publican, a shoemaker, and a plowman. The publican, with his class's gift for politics, soon becomes dictator in the little colony. When Lord Benham asks that the name of the public house shall be the Tolstoy, his suggestion is voted down and the Pig and Thistle is selected as a more appropriate title. Trouble follows when the laborers on the farm claim a share of the income, the committee insisting that it alone is entitled to the profits. And the height of absurdity is reached when one woman who has been rewarded with a fine crop of cabbages in her co-operative patch seeks damages for the depredations of a co-operative pig, which has broken from its moorings and eaten the tender young plants with as much joy as if he had been just a plain, ordinary garden pig, without any socialistic curl to its tail whatsoever.

This little pig incident will in itself serve to indicate the comic possibilities, of which the author by no means avails himself. The story plumbers along heavily, with no end of cumbersome dialogue, and by the time the final act is reached one has ceased to care what happens to anybody concerned in the experiment. About this time the mother, sister, and brother desert the altruistic young Lord and go away to live after their own fashion in London. Then he voices his love to Enid, only to be told that he has hitched his heart to a star and that she cannot consent to be second choice in his affections. When Lord Benham refuses to sacrifice his ideals even for her she goes away, but a moment later, as he sits at the organ playing a love melody, she steals back, and love's young dream seems in prospect of realization.

We hardly thought that the bite of the Martian had been so deep, but the sight of Charles Hawtrey as the worthy young disciple of Tolstoy would seem to indicate that the lesson of the messenger from another planet has been most salutary.

He played quietly, naturally, and with some of the familiar charm, but the part is not one that reveals his splendid light-comedy method at its best. In occasional moments of sentimental platitude Mr. Hawtrey was really very funny, for, like the others in the cast, he was laboring hard with very crude material. Of the others, Alice Wilson was least disconcerted by the material to be handled.

The play was given to benefit the Actors' Home, and the attendance was small. Possibly $300 was realized for the charity.

The George Fawcett Company made its first bow to the public last evening at the American Theatre, presenting Shakespeare's tragedy, "Romeo and Juliet." In pursuance with the policy in which Mr. Fawcett intends to conduct his company—that of presenting successes of the drama, with prominent actors and actresses who have been associated with the plays—Percy Haswell was the particular star of the evening, and will be the entire week, after which the bill will be changed. This, the first production, was well mounted and well acted, quite meriting the attention of a very interested audience.

It was to Miss Haswell that the house was inclined to give the most of its favor, for all her telling lines won continuous applause, while none of her points or business was lost. As the unfortunate heroine of Verona she presented a charming appearance, and if one might judge by the kindly reception of her spectators, gave a most convincing portrayal. In the balcony scene, she interpolated the business of not being able to reach down to touch Romeo's hand. This met much laughter in the house. She was supported by Regan Hughston as Romeo, a fine-looking young fellow, who seemed to be quite easy in his lines.

Besides these two, there were some familiar names in the cast. Dodson Mitchell, who will be remembered as playing the clergyman in "Candida," was Montague, while Frank Gilmore was a very spirited Mercutio. His delivery of the long speech in the second scene won him much applause. Of the others, George Schraeder as Tybalt, Harry Blake as Friar Lawrence, and Alice Butler as the Nurse might be mentioned.

The staging of the production was adequate. Although there was nothing elaborate about any of the sets, they were all good and answered their purpose. Especially effective were the Garden and the Hall of the Capulets.

Considering the size of the house, one might say that Mr. Fawcett's experiment is in no wise a failure. The entire lower floor was packed, while there were few vacant chairs in the balcony.

Next week, it being intended to change the bill each week, a revival of Paul Arthur Jones's comedy "The Liars," will be given. Again Miss Haswell will be the star of the week, appearing in the leading female role.

LONDON, May 1.—A dramatization of Katherine Cecil Thurston's novel, "The Masquerader," by the author's husband, E. Temple Thurston, was produced at the St. James's Theatre to-night by George Alexander. It is regarded as a very poor play, lacking in any dramatic qualities. Mr. Alexander played very cleverly the dual role of Chiltcote and Lodge. The audience expressed unmistakable disapproval of the play.

BARTLETT AND SHEPARD THE MEN, MAYOR SAYS

Declares They Offended in a Franchise Conference.

NO THREAT AT ALL, THEY SAY

Spoke of Legislature's Attitude Incidentally—Shepard Doesn't Remember Mentioning the Pennsylvania.

Edward M. Shepard and Col. Franklin Bartlett yesterday were named by Mayor McClellan as the representatives of the Pennsylvania Railroad who had called on him concerning the Elsberg bills to shear the Board of Aldermen of all power over the granting of public franchises.

In his message of last Friday to the Legislature the Mayor declared that representatives of the Pennsylvania road, who then were unnamed by the Mayor, had told him the Legislature would repass the bills if he vetoed them, and had made plain to him the Pennsylvania's determination to crush opposition.

Both Mr. Shepard and Col. Bartlett last night admitted that they had seen the Mayor on the question of the bills, but they asserted that they did not remember using any language which could have been justifiably construed as a threat. Both men issued statements on the subject.

"There is no reason why I should conceal the names of the men to whom reference was made in my communication to the Legislature," said the Mayor, yesterday. "They came to me openly as Mayor of the city, Col. Bartlett representing the New York Connecting Railroad and Mr. Shepard representing the Pennsylvania Railroad. I see no reason why their names should be withheld, and I don't know as they desire to have them withheld. My memorandum expressed my views on the subject of the legislation proposed, and we shall see if it has its effect."

"I did call on Mayor McClellan as the representative of the New York Connecting Railroad," said Col. Bartlett yesterday. "I also told the Mayor that in all probability the Legislature would repass the bills if he vetoed them, but I added that that was a matter which probably did not concern him as Mayor. There was no suggestion or idea of a threat, and I made the remark only incidentally and not as affecting the action of the Mayor in any way. As to what is said in the Mayor's statement about his having been urged to reject the bills promptly, if he intended to take such action, so that the session of the Legislature should not be prolonged needlessly, and that the session would not be permitted to adjourn without passing the bills, those are matters of which I know nothing."

Mr. Shepard did not return to town from the South until evening, when his attention was called to the entire matter. After consideration Mr. Shepard issued a typewritten statement, in part as follows:

"I take it upon myself the sole responsibility of whatever was said to the Mayor on the subject of the Aldermanic Franchise bills in behalf of the New York Connecting Company or the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Nothing was said to him except by myself or upon my authority. I called upon the Mayor about the 12th of April and reminded him that I represented the New York Connecting Company, which had last year submitted to him and the other members of the Rapid Transit Board, and successfully, its application for a franchise.

"I do not remember whether I mentioned the Pennsylvania Company.

"Of course I said nothing to the Mayor which was or implied in the remotest fashion anything in the nature of a threat or of an assertion of any control of legislation. I do not remember that I expressed any opinion as to whether, if he should finally conclude to veto the bills, the Legislature was likely to pass them over the veto, if the Mayor has any recollection on that subject, it is apt to be correct. Nor do I remember that I spoke of the continuance of the legislative session. It is quite possible, however, that I referred to the publicly stated or rumored date of adjournment. But I said nothing whatever with respect to the New York Connecting Company or the Pennsylvania Company or any other company holding or controlling the time of adjournment or any other procedure by the Legislature. If I spoke of probable action by the Legislature or its probable adjournment, I spoke as any citizen might who properly speak upon probabilities on any public question."

IN MARIE CAHILL'S PLACE.

Miss Norton Assumes Her Role in "It Happened in Nordland."

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 1.—Miss "Billie" Norton, who has been playing the part of Marjorie Perkins, took Marie Cahill's part of Katherine Peepfagle in "It Happened in Nordland" at the Boston Theatre to-night.

Miss Cahill's friends blame Victor Herbert for her refusal to accompany the company to Boston. They charge that the orchestra, at the behest of Mr. Herbert, purposely ruined all chances of effecting a "hit" in two interpolated songs which, by contract, she was permitted to sing.

An agent of Mr. Herbert said to-day: "Very likely Miss Cahill's fancied grievance against Mr. Herbert and the orchestra arises from the fact that he has recently taken action in the courts of law against her husband, Daniel B. Arthur, to recover certain sums of money which he claims were secured through misrepresentation. The rendition of the interpolated songs was directed by others than Mr. Herbert, and hence it seems hardly probable that he could be responsible for any interruptions."

"A BLOT IN THE 'SCUTCHEON."

Special Matinees of the Browning Tragedy at the Hudson Theatre.

Whatever views one may hold as to the actual value of Robert Browning's plays for theatrical representation, the fact remains that the performance of "A Blot in the 'Scutcheon," which Mrs. Le Moyne and her company repeated at the Hudson Theatre yesterday, is one that should not be missed by any one having at heart the real interest of the stage.

The play is to be repeated this Thursday and Friday afternoons. It was reviewed in these columns at length on the occasion of the original production.

In addition to Mrs. Le Moyne, whose playing of Gwendolen Tresham is a charmingly sympathetic characterization, the performance is remarkable by reason of the intelligent and splendidly sustained acting of William Beach, Grace Elliston, and Theodore Hamilton.

BISHOP POTTER AT HIPPODROME.

Whitelaw Reid, Too—Col. Bordenerry Has a New Act.

As has been the case since the opening, the house was packed. In the audience were Whitelaw Reid and Bishop Potter.

"It is all wonderfully clever and marvelously artistic," was Bishop Potter's comment.

London Grand Opera Season Opens.

LONDON, May 1.—The grand opera season at Covent Garden opened brilliantly to-night with "Das Rheingold," conducted by Dr. Hans Richter, noteworthy features of the first performance of two American singers, Louise Wilhelmi and Blanche Marchesi, appearing as Woglinde and Flosshilde, the three Rhine maidens.

ANNIE OF THE ARCADE.

School and Mother's Store Closed to Her—Trouble at Candy Store.

Annie Simms, fourteen years old, of 441 West Twenty-eighth Street, wants to know her status in life.

Annie went to school until one day the schoolteacher said:

"I despair of doing anything with you, Annie. You ought to go to work, for you are not fitted to study."

Annie is sensitive. She went home and told her mother what the teacher had said. Her mother keeps a delicatessen store. She looked at the strings of sausages and the pickles and salads and then said decisively:

"Well, one thing is certain; whether you go to school or not, you are not going to stay around this shop. Your appetite is too big."

Annie turned her face to the hard world and got a job in a candy store. Even there her status caused trouble. A couple of Factory Inspectors came along and found a girl named Martini scrubbing the floor. They learned that she was under age, and the manager of the candy store was summoned to appear in the Jefferson Market Court.

While inquiries were being made about the Martini girl, Annie and another girl of tender years were hurried out of the store. One of the Factory Inspectors met Annie and asked her about her status in life. Annie said she hadn't any.

"Why don't you go to school?" was asked.

"Teacher won't have me," said Annie.

"Then why don't you stay at home and help mother?"

"Mother says I would eat up the whole business."

The manager of the candy store was held for trial. He gave bail. Annie's status was not discussed at all. She had no status in the case. It was the Martini girl whose name appeared in the complaint.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The benefit performance this evening at the Berkeley Lyceum when "Lady Clancarty" will be given by the Amateur Comedy Club, under fashionable patronage, and a few informal dinners and theatre parties make up the society programme for the day. The rest of the week, however, with a wedding, the Belmont Park opening on Thursday, with the dance at Mrs. Mackay's residence, Harbor Hill, to follow, and Saturday with its coaching parade, will make up a week satisfactorily gay.

The wedding of Miss Lucie How Draper, daughter of Mrs. William F. Draper, and Ernest Schelling of Switzerland, will take place to-morrow at the residence of the bride's mother, 604 Fifth Avenue. M. Paderewski, who was to have been Mr. Schelling's best man, will not be able to attend, and there will be no attendants. Miss Draper will be given away by her brother. The Rev. Dr. Newton Perkins will perform the ceremony, and the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends only have been asked to the ceremony, which will be followed by a wedding breakfast. Mr. and Mrs. Schelling will sail for Europe in a few days to spend the Summer.

The Japanese and Americans are rehearsing daily under the supervision of Mrs. Fraser, sister of Marion Crawford, and widow of the late British Embassy to the Court of Japan. Special scenery designed by Japanese artists is being painted, and beautiful costumes and armor loaned from private collections will be used. All the boxes but one have been taken, and the greater part of the parquet seats are already sold. There will be a meeting of the patronesses and their friends at the house of Mrs. Robert Minturn, in Gramercy Park, on Thursday, at which Mrs. Fraser, Dr. Takamino, who had charge of the Japanese exhibit at St. Louis, and others will speak.

DEMAND THE REPLACING OF TREES ON BROADWAY

West End Association Writes to Mayor, Rice, and Pallas.

WILL NOT LET MATTER DROP

Hears from Municipal Art Society That Slice Is Coming Off Riverside Drive—Will Protest.

After having been put off on various pretexts in its efforts to compel the planting of trees along Broadway to replace those destroyed by the building of the Subway, the West End Association, at its meeting last night in the Hotel St. Andrew, determined to take drastic action to force the contractor on the work to replace the trees. The Chairman of the committee which has had the matter in charge for two years said he had discovered the "joker" in the Rapid Transit act, which says that the contractor shall replace the trees "if required," and in such manner as "shall be approved by the engineer in charge."

It appeared from the argument that the proper requisition has never been made on the sub-contractor who did the work along Broadway from Fifty-ninth Street to One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, and acting along these lines the association addressed three letters to the authorities on Saturday. One to Engineer George E. Rice demanded that he act in the matter according to law; a letter to Park Commissioner Pallas said that the work should be done under the supervision of the Park Department, and in no other way, and a letter to the Mayor gave the gist of the other two, adding that the association was sure that his pride in the city would urge him to immediate action.

What was said to be a matter of serious import was brought to the attention of the association by the Municipal Art Society through its President, Calvin Tomkins. Mr. Tomkins said that it was proposed to narrow the extension of Riverside Drive, between One Hundred and Fifty-eighth and One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street, from 100 feet to 60 feet and carry the saddle path on each side 12 feet above the roadway. He said that he had taken expert advice on the matter and had been advised that if such a project was carried through it would destroy the usefulness and beauty of the drive forever. Mr. Tomkins said that his investigations brought out no reason why this narrowing of the drive was necessary. A committee of three, with power to act, was appointed, to confer with the Municipal Art Society, and if its position was found to be correct, was instructed in the name of the association to have the proper legal steps taken to prevent the change.

The question of mortgage tax was also brought up, and it was announced as the sense of the meeting that it protested against any compromise and would continue its efforts to have the measure killed.

METROPOLITAN BANK OPENS.

Gets More Than $1,000,000 in New Business in First Day.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company made its bow in the field of banking yesterday, when the new Metropolitan Bank, at Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue, opened its doors for business, and at the same time the Maiden Lane branch at 100 William Street was opened.

The bank is a conversion of the old Maiden Lane National Bank into a State bank, accompanied by an increase of capital, change of name, and change of home. The Maiden Lane National Bank was capitalized at $250,000, which was increased in the new institution to $1,000,000, with $250,000 surplus.

All day yesterday Henry Ollesheimer, President of the new bank, sat in his office in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's Building, in which the bank is situated, and received the congratulations of his friends, many of them taking the form of floral pieces. The bank closed its first day with $1,000,000 and more in new business, credited to between fifty and seventy-five depositors. Of this about three-fourths was received at the main office uptown.

The Maiden Lane branch, which will occupy the premises formerly used by the old bank, will be controlled by Gilbert B. Sayres, Second Vice President of the new corporation. He resigned a similar position with the National Shoe and Leather Bank to take up his new duties.

MRS. GARDNER'S REAL JAPAN.

Music Room at Fenway Court Transformed for a Charity.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 1.—When a real jinricksha, with Mrs. "Jack" Gardner for occupant, was trundled swiftly up and down the drugget-covered floor of her splendid music room at Fenway Court this afternoon it was as though she were taking a turn through a little village in far Japan.

Her jinricksha man was a real Japanese, and all about were little pagoda-like booths, with Japanese fittings and ornaments, and on the raised sections of the room, ordinarily arranged as a stage, was a Japanese grove with a temple at one side and a Buddhist shrine nestling among the trees opposite. Japanese men and women wandered to and fro as villagers, some gazing at the booths, as if seeking the most favorable chance to trade, while others were tradesmen themselves, saddled with trays of all kinds of attractive bowlettes of Japanese handicraft.

The occasion of this transformation was that Mrs. Gardner had donated the use of the music room in Fenway Court for the Japanese annex of the bazaar in aid of the Sharon Sanitarium.

A curious stage show was given at intervals, as also was an exhibition of jiu jitsu under the direction of Prof. Uchimura, who was teaching at Harvard. Pretty Japanese girls in native costume served tea in the teahouse in the make-believe grove near the Buddhist shrine.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

General Recovery in Prices Following Irregular Opening.

Northern Securities Up Nearly Five Points—Pools Active Again—Little Opposition to Advance.

Except for a short time following the opening of the outside market yesterday, prices in that market showed considerable firmness throughout the session, and in many issues the final prices were at figures substantially above Saturday's close. The minor stocks shared the strength of the standard issues, and there was evidence that the pool stocks were again receiving support. In some cases prices were bid up without calling out any stock, making it easy for those who were interested in advancing quotations. The market was helped by the strength of Northern Securities, which opened up more than a point, the strength in this quarter serving doubtless to reassure holders of other issues.

⁂

NORTHERN SECURITIES at no time sold below the lowest price of Saturday, and during the last hour of trading the price moved up sharply. It reached within an eighth of 160, and closed at the best, with a net gain of 4⅝ points. The stubs sold around 460, being less active than last week.

⁂

UNITED COPPER fluctuated back and forth, showing in the end a gain of about 2 points. It is said that much of the stock that was bought by outsiders during the early part of the present upward movement was taken by the insiders during the past ten days.

⁂

GREENE COPPER was active and irregular, selling down early in the session and recovering later more than it had lost. Greene Gold within a narrower range moved similarly. Greene Silver was not traded in. Complaint is made by traders in the latter stock that it is impossible to borrow the stock, loans of it being refused even to the brokers handling the odd lots in the stock. This is thought to be due to a desire on the part of the insiders to protect the stock from bear attacks, but it limits the freedom of the market in the stock and incidentally has caused some dissatisfaction.

⁂

The principal transactions in 100 share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rally; Call Money Easy, 2¾@3½ Per Cent.

Less Liquidation Than Had Been Expected Upon Over-Sunday Orders—Good Support and Better Prices.

Business was resumed yesterday after an interval which had allowed calmer consideration of last week's despondent markets and their causes. The holiday further sufficed to accumulate denials of reports of local unsoundness, while nothing developed to intensify foreign uneasiness. The naval battle seems nearer only by the lapse of time, neither Admiral manifesting a combative mood, while the Morocco question took a long step away from any dangerous phase when the King of England and the President of France hobnobbed together in Paris. The opening business, therefore, resembled a tug-of-war between continuance of last week's unfinished liquidation and support on both sides of the ocean. The London Exchange was closed, it is true, but London's curb was doing business, and there were signs of cabled orders by prominent Americans now abroad and their transatlantic following. The selling upon exhausted margins and accumulation of country orders made its anticipated appearance, but not in anticipated proportions. In the first hour Amalgamated, St. Paul, New York Central, and Reading were conspicuous among those leading the market down. At the end of the second hour they were equally conspicuous among those assisting the advance, with the help of Pennsylvania and Union Pacific. There were many prices lower than last week's, especially among stocks which had been supported by pools, such as Smelters and the Southern iron stocks. Nevertheless, the tendency was undeniably better, and it improved steadily until the end. As the tone improved the volume declined, not half as many shares being sold in the last hour as in the first. Possibly it will be inferred that the buying was of an educated sort, not disposed to follow the market up, and prepared to sell at short notice. It will be surprising if there is not some selling of stock taken not because it is wanted, but merely to steady business, while the short interest is obviously much reduced by purchases of 1,645,251 shares at an average advance of, say, 2 per cent. Among the few interesting declines was Consolidated Gas's in connection with the legislative situation.

The day's advance was accomplished with no development out of routine. There were a number of reports of March net earnings in ludicrous contrast with the market depreciation of the shares of the companies reporting. Illinois Central, St. Paul, Union Pacific, and Canadian Pacific are marked down millions, while their earnings are rising by hundreds of thousands monthly. It was May Day, but instead of May Day strikes there were increases of wages, those in the iron trade contrasting with reports of shading of prices on the commodity. Paris and Berlin discounts were harder, and London marked up the price of gold. Our money market, nevertheless, eased in tone as the stock market improved, despite much readjustment of loans. The produce markets were higher, although the crop weather was good enough to be bearish, a contrast suggesting that between prices and earnings of railways.

Prices Move Up Again—Bargain Hunters Busy in Market.

The stock market sold ex-calamity yesterday. With the fine weather and no further bad news the Street regained some of its lost confidence and prices moved up. Bear rumors that are overdone are likely to have the same effect that bull rumors have when they are found to be untrue. Wall Street yesterday suddenly realized that if the shorts had to go to the lengths that they did go to, it showed that they thought it necessary to use desperate means in order to depress the market below a fair level. Bankers agreed yesterday that the liquidation had run its course and that after a few days of fluctuations the market would settle near the present level until a new bull movement could be started later in the season.

Bargain Hunters Thick.

Commission houses reported many orders for small lots. This caused a lot of trouble to the specialists. The purchasers of small lots for investment are generally more exacting than the traders who swing their hundred or thousand share lots every day, but as they are a very important part of a broker's clientele he will make special efforts to please them. These purchasers are generally known as bargain hunters. They buy stocks in all kinds of blocks and they generally want them at a certain price at which they have figured out that the stock should yield a certain income. If a bargain hunter cannot get the stock at his price he generally refuses to buy at all, and hence the trouble, as often small lot orders for investment are given and canceled several times a day. The bargain hunters were much in evidence yesterday, and in some offices they quite overshadowed the familiar faces of the regular habitués.

Strong Hands Discussed.

The investment demand caused considerable uneasiness among the short element for the reason that stocks bought for investment are generally taken out of the Street for some time, thus reducing the floating supply. A banker yesterday called attention to the recent talk about stocks being in strong hands. "We have heard a great deal," he said, "about stocks being in strong hands. This was the slogan of the crazy bulls all through the advance. The events have proved that these supposedly strong hands were really not strong at all, but were vulnerable and weak when it came to holding up the market as those of so-called 'pikers.' When they had to turn their stocks into cash, prices slipped away just as fast as if smaller men had held them. The strongest hands in which stocks can be held are, after all, those of investors whom a slump of 10 points does not frighten."

Banking Interests Buy.

According to general reports from the floor, the buying yesterday was of the very best character. By this Wall Street means that the orders came from banking interests rather than from speculative operators, and represented purchases of stocks in which the recent decline justified a reasonable expectation of a recovery to higher prices. The best buying is supposed to occur at the very bottom just as the best selling is supposed to take place at the very top, yet this is not always the case. Close connections of the Harriman interests, for instance, are said to have taken their profits in Southern Pacific on the long side months ago at around 56. Yesterday these interests could buy back some of their holdings a few points above that price, but it is doubtful if they did so, as they could not have bought much stock at yesterday's low figure.

No May Day Depression.

Yesterday was May Day, but there was little moving done in the Street, as most of the firms who changed their quarters with the first of the month did their actual moving on Saturday afternoon. As it was May Day there was a general expectation of reports of riots abroad, and some of the bears hoped that these would prove serious enough to permit their being made the source of another drive against the market. In this they were disappointed because only one serious encounter was reported from Russia, and that failed to have any influence whatever. In fact, market observers of unbiased judgment express the belief that interest is at present so intensely centred in home affairs that foreign news not directly affecting this country is being disregarded.

Canadian Pacific.

Canadian Pacific made an excellent recovery and closed with conspicuous strength. This stock has received very good support all through the break and is now only a half dozen points below the high figure of the year. The friends of the property still insist that it will be placed on a 7 per cent. basis in the near future. That the recent decline was to a large extent artificial is demonstrated by the fact that good stocks with a sound reason for their advance were only slightly affected by the otherwise general demoralization. Kansas City Southern was another issue which recovered with ease. The Dutch interests are believed to be picking up the stock on all recessions, taking advantage of the market conditions to strengthen their position even though the Harriman interests announce that they are not asking for proxies.

Good Profit to the Courageous.

Those who bought stocks on Saturday for a turn made a handsome profit even though they had an hour of uneasiness to go through yesterday. At one time yesterday the market looked as if it would go to pieces entirely, every active stock reaching a lower point than the low of Saturday. But those who had courage and stood by their guns came out ahead. The break yesterday again demonstrated that when the market looks weakest it is often really at the strongest position, and when it looks strong it is often really very weak. However, even experienced market traders find that it takes an unusual amount of nerve to prevent one's judgment from being swept away by the surface appearance instead of permitting it to be guided by cool calculation. More than half the losses sustained in speculation are due to the traders losing their heads.

Public Sells Short.

Commission houses express the opinion that the public has been fairly well educated into selling the market short on occasions. It has been an old tradition that the public generally never goes short of stocks, always preferring to buy them. Recent events are said to have overthrown this old saying. The public certainly did not buy on the rise. The higher the market went the more cautious it seemed to have become. But when the break came there was a considerable amount of short selling in 100-share lots, which in the aggregate was enough to be an influence in the market, and this short selling is said to have been largely for the non-professional element.

Buying in London.

Although there was a holiday in London the curb over there was doing business, and it is estimated that London bought nearly 100,000 shares in this market. This is far beyond the average business done in this market for foreign account, and the Street naturally sought some explanation. The suggestion was made that several of the prominent financiers were abroad and the inference was that a large part of the buying had been for their account. This disconcerted the bears in a certain extent and materially aided in bringing about the reaction afterward. Among those who are in Europe at this time are J. Pierpont Morgan, William Rockefeller, and W. K. Vanderbilt.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 1.—Few of the market speculative favorites figured in the trading to-day, and most of the business done was in bonds whose stability is recognized. Speculative buying is at a standstill, and the comparative strength of the local list in the face of adverse conditions has discouraged short selling. In the bond list Seaboard 4s gained ¼, at 84¾, and the ten-year 5s at 102½ ex coupon were steady. Carolina Central 4s at 98, were 1 per cent. below the last sale. The market closed dull and steady. The sales were: Shares, 705; bonds, $48,000. The list follows:

The market here was active to-day, the copper shares coming in for attention. The leaders were Utah, Greene, Copper Range, United States Mining, Boston Consolidated, and Bingham. Utah was exceptionally well bought, being taken by the same interests that have been active, advancing the price well above 44. The general tone was strong all through the list, with a sharp rally at the close. The complete list of transactions follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—United Gas Improvement stock caused this market to become demoralized to a greater extent than has been experienced for several years. The stock opened off 3¼ points at 117 and within a few minutes broke still further to 111. Its recovery to 117½ was equally rapid, but it closed 2¼ points lower. The selling at the start seemed to come from all sources, the orders to sell being "at the market." The best houses on the Street were buyers on the break, which was due to the continued newspaper attacks upon the terms offered for the extension of the city gas works lease. The market generally followed U. G. I.'s lead, but held better than had been expected. Consolidated Lake Superior common declined ⅛, the Corporation's stock 1, Electric Storage Battery 1, Lehigh Valley 2½, which was more than recovered in the later trading; Philadelphia Electric ⅛, Philadelphia Company 2⅝, Philadelphia Rapid Transit ⅝, Railways Company General 1, and Westmoreland Coal warrants 1. There were no signs of a scare, and most stocks made more than full recovery before the close. The total sales were 105,238 shares, bonds, $64,000. The list follows:

MAYOR APPOINTS NEW CITY MAGISTRATES

C. G. F. Wahle, Francis McAvoy, and Daniel Finn Get Places.

HAFFEN'S PROTEST FAILS

Bronx President Objects to Wahle—Moss and Steinert Get Long Terms —Wauhope Lynn a Justice.

Mayor McClellan announced yesterday the appointments of Joseph Moss, Henry G. Steinert, and Daniel E. Finn to be City Magistrates for the full term of ten years, succeeding Magistrates Flammer, Ommen, and Mott, whose terms expired with the coming of May 1. The salary of a Magistrate is $7,000 a year.

As Magistrates Moss and Steinert already were on the bench to fill vacancies, the Mayor appointed Charles G. F. Wahle and Francis McAvoy to succeed them as vacancy appointees. Each will have upward of four years to serve. The Mayor also announced the appointment of Wauhope Lynn to succeed Magistrate Finn as a Justice of the Municipal Court. Judge Lynn will hold the office until the close of the present year under the appointment, but a Democratic nomination in the district is equivalent to an election. All of the new appointees were sworn in before the Mayor in the afternoon. Magistrate Wahle's appointment was held up for a couple of hours while Borough President Haffen of the Bronx, who is the Tammany leader in the Thirty-fifth Assembly District, made a fight before both Charles F. Murphy at Tammany Hall and the Mayor to have Alderman William E. Morris of his district named instead of Wahle.

The word of Wahle's prospective appointment did not reach Mr. Haffen until late Saturday, and the Borough President immediately started on the war path. Haffen and Wahle have been bitter political enemies for some time, and the manner in which both the Mayor and Leader Murphy declined to heed the protests of the Borough President was taken as indication that Mr. Murphy intended to have Wahle enter the field in the Bronx as an aspirant for the district leadership. Haffen for a long time has been persona non grata with Murphy, and yesterday when his committee waited on him to protest against Wahle's appointment, Haffen himself remained in a café across from Tammany Hall.

On Saturday night Mr. Haffen got his District Captains together, and they formed themselves into a committee of thirty-five to oppose Wahle. Mr. Murphy told them when they called yesterday forenoon that they should see the Mayor. The committeemen hurried back to Haffen, who was waiting, and then all headed for the City Hall. In the meantime the Mayor had announced his appointees and had sent them word to be at the City Hall at 2:30 to be sworn in. Haffen and his committee got there first. The Bronx leader accused Wahle of political infidelity, and charges of a personal nature were made against him. Mayor McClellan said that he would delay Mr. Wahle's case until he had investigated. The committee left, and the Mayor swore in all of the appointees except Wahle. The latter went into the Mayor's office for fifteen minutes, and then headed for Tammany Hall, where he saw Mr. Murphy.

Haffen and his crowd saw hope in this and predicted that they had beaten Wahle, but their joy was short lived. Wahle returned to the City Hall at 4 o'clock and was sworn in. All of the new appointees will take their places on the bench to-day.

Mr. Wahle is thirty-nine years old, a German by descent, but was born and educated in New York. He was a School Inspector under Mayor Grant, and later was named for Commissioner of Accounts, holding for another term under Mayor Gilroy. He is an attorney, a member of the Bar Association, of the Democratic Club, the Tammany Society, and is the head of the German Democracy.

Magistrate McAvoy is a brother to Deputy Police Commissioner Thomas F. McAvoy. He is a graduate of Columbia Law School, and for some years has been in the Law Department of the Custom House. Magistrate Finn for many years has been the Tammany leader of the First Assembly District. He was a Member of Assembly for several terms, the leader of the Democratic minority of that body in 1897, and later was elected a Municipal Court Justice. Justice Lynn has twice before been Justice of the Municipal Court in the First District. The office pays $6,000. He is forty-nine years old and was born in Ireland. He has been a member of the Assembly and an Assistant District Attorney.

After she was revived she went to an inner court window.

HOPPER DISMISSES THREE INSPECTORS

As a Result of Building Collapses After Thaw.

TWO GROSSLY NEGLIGENT

The Other Unfit to Act as Inspector of Iron Work—Veteran's Case Under Consideration.

Superintendent Hopper of the Department of Buildings yesterday submitted to Borough President Ahearn his report in connection with the buildings which collapsed on March 19 and 20, the first days of the Spring thaw. As a result of these investigations, which covered exactly the same ground covered by THE NEW YORK TIMES after the collapse, when it showed that the buildings must have been erected when the temperature was below the point prescribed by law as safe, and published the department Inspectors' reports to prove it, Mr. Hopper has dismissed from the service three Inspectors. The case of a fourth, a veteran, is now under consideration, because he is a veteran and is entitled under the law to a hearing and to be represented by counsel.

The men dismissed are Robert Auld, Jr., who had charge of the buildings on One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street; James A. Kiernan, who had charge of the buildings at Eighty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue,—and Bernard Campbell, in charge of the ironwork in the buildings at One Hundred and Seventh Street and First Avenue. The case which is pending is that of John C. Taylor, who had charge of the masonry work in the same buildings.

The committee appointed by Mr. Hopper to investigate the collapses consisted of Civil Engineer James P. Whiskeman and Special Inspector Edward J. O'Connor. According to their report, they found that the giving away of the walls in the lower stories was due to the loading down of the walls that had frozen immediately after erection and before the cement mortar had a chance to set and unite with the stone in proper bond. When the weather moderated and the frozen walls began to thaw out, the report says, the superimposed loads were too much for the lower walls, which were in a weakened condition, and the collapse followed. Mr. Hopper's report says further:

"As the different reports on each building came in, I ordered charges of neglect of duty preferred against the district Inspectors in each case; as I felt that the Inspector was responsible for not filing violations on these several jobs, because building upon these frozen walls is forbidden by the Building Code. And besides, on two mornings, Chief Inspector Gorman issued orders in the assembly hall, calling attention to this portion of the code and requesting the Inspectors to have a close observance of the same."

In his findings Mr. Hopper says that from Auld's own admissions, taken down at the hearing, it is evident that he was guilty of "gross negligence." The same finding covered Kiernan's case, and Campbell was found guilty of neglect for permitting inproper iron construction. His own admissions, says Mr. Hopper, proved that he was incapable of further filling the office of Inspector of Iron and Steel Construction. In concluding his report, Mr. Hopper says:

"I might state that this bureau feels, from day to day, the necessity of more assistance by an increase in our force to help secure a greater efficiency. The field for speculation in land and building improvements at the present time is attracting many persons who are totally ignorant of the responsibilities they are undertaking, and some measures should be taken to guard and protect the public from the possible consequences that usually follow the work of inexperienced and incompetent persons.

"The suggestion of the expert committee that you appointed in March to look into these same matters was that the authorities adopt some plan of license. I think the press also spoke favorably on this point. It seems to me that if some system of that kind were adopted we would then have building matters in safer hands, for, in order to secure a license, it would be necessary to show competency."

HUNTING TRIP OF HERMANNS.

Old Huntsman, with Whom They Boarded, Tells of Many Quarrels.

The old Pennsylvania hunter, Selah N. Decker, who came here from his home, in Wayne County, to testify in the action for a separation brought by Mrs. Florence Crosby Hermann against her husband, George Hermann, the lumber man, went on the stand in the Supreme Court yesterday and told what he knew of their domestic troubles. Mr. and Mrs. Hermann camped out with the old scout in the woods of Pennsylvania, and, according to the story he told yesterday, whenever they quarreled it became necessary for him to interfere. He said that while he had told George Hermann that he was a crack shot, he also told him that his admiration for a man who was a crack shot would not permit him to overlook any ill-treatment of Mrs. Hermann.

Decker told of a trip to Sullivan County and of Hermann getting angry because he shot at a deer and didn't kill it.

"And what happened after that?" asked counsel.

"Well," said Decker, "I heard some one screaming, and I ran to an old rustic bridge which spanned a small stream. I found Mr. and Mrs. Hermann there. Hermann said his wife was not educated enough for him, so he puts his finger in her face, and she puts it away, and when she stamps her foot and says, 'How dare you?' he slaps her across the face and nearly tumbles her into the brook. He always fought her and called her small potatoes and things like that."

KILLED AGED WOMAN FOR THE $12 SHE HAD

Harnessmaker Arrested for Murdering Mrs. Sarah Rosenberg.

"YES, I DID IT," HE SAYS

"Now, How Soon Will They Kill Me?" is His Question When Arrested in Brooklyn.

Edward Pekara, a Bohemian, twenty-five years old, for whom the police of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station had been looking since Friday last on the charge of murdering Mrs. Sarah Rosenberg, the old woman who was found dead in her apartments at 332 East One Hundred and First Street on that day, calmly admitted when taken into custody in Brooklyn yesterday that he had killed the woman for her money and had got as the results of his crime $12, which he found in a bag tied around the old woman's neck.

"Yes, I did it," said the man to Detectives Mahoney, Wagner, and Flood. "Now, how soon will they kill me?"

Later when arraigned before Coroner Scholer he again made the calm admission of his guilt, although warned of his rights by the Coroner. He said he felt that he would not be bothered by lawyers and the police if he told all he knew and waived all his rights.

He told the Coroner that he came from Landstrom, Bohemia, on Jan. 5 last. He speaks little English, but shows the evidences of a good education and speaks Bohemian and German fluently. His mother runs a harness shop in his native town, and there he learned his trade of harness making. Some weeks ago he saw an advertisement in a newspaper for a boarder, and met Mrs. Rosenberg, who then lived at 112 East Ninety-first Street under the name of Lang. He contracted to pay her $1.25 a week. Soon thereafter the woman moved to the place where she was murdered, and Pekara went with her. There she took the name of Whalen.

The first that Pekara knew of the woman having any money was when he threw away an old money pouch which he had carried. Mrs. Rosenberg picked it up, stuffed some bills in it, and wore it around her neck. The murder was committed on Monday last, and on that day and the day previous Pekara said he had been drinking heavily. On Monday evening he was standing in the kitchen with the old woman when suddenly, he said, there came over him an uncontrollable desire to have money enough with which to purchase liquor. A sight of the money bag was sufficient to rouse him, and, picking up a harness maker's hammer which he had brought home several days before, he struck the old woman over the head. She dropped to the floor, and he dealt her two more blows. Then he grabbed the money bag, he said, and was about to leave the house when he thought that the woman might still be alive. He dragged her to the rear room, placed her on the bed, and cut her throat. Then he locked up the flat and went away. The body was not found until Friday last.

Meanwhile Pekara had bought himself a gaudy suit of clothes, and said he spent the rest of the money in drink. He was very much disappointed with the proceeds of his crime, but thought he might as well have a good time on it as long as it lasted. Then he lodged in various lodging houses in Brooklyn, and when he had no more money applied to a harnessmaker at 806 Hamilton Avenue for work. This led to his arrest.

Working on the clue that the man was a harnessmaker, Capt. Powers sent his men all over the greater city to visit the shops where Pekara would be likely to seek for employment. When they got to the Hamilton Avenue place, which is kept by Morris Walsh, they learned that a man answering Pekara's description had worked there on Saturday, had taken his pay, and left. There was a chance that he might return yesterday, and they waited. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning Pekara swung around the corner, carrying his dinner pail. He took his arrest calmly.

"If you had only given me a few days more so that I could get the price of my fare to Europe," he said, "I would have been back home. Now I suppose you will kill me. How soon will it be?"

GAMBLER FELTON GOES FREE.

Was Charged with Killing Roche—Ferrara Also Discharged.

Stewart A. Felton, a gambler known as "Big Frank," who has been under indictment since last November charged with killing Guy Roche, another gambler, on Thanksgiving Day, in front of the Herald Square Theatre, was yesterday discharged on his own recognizance by Justice Davy, in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court. Assistant District Attorney Kly assisted in the court that it had been impossible to obtain sufficient evidence to bring the case to trial. The indictment probably will be dismissed shortly.

The shooting took place on Broadway in broad daylight. When he was dying, Roche said:

"Felton did it, but it was all right. He was justified. I would have done the same thing had I been in his place."

Justice Davy also discharged on his own recognizance Salvatore Ferrara, who is under indictment for killing Pasquale Tortoriello, on Jan. 13. Ferrara was tried for the murder of Tortoriello's sister, Marie, but was acquitted. Assistant District Attorney Healey maintained in the court that

500 PHYSICIANS SAY BON VOYAGE TO OSLER

Present Cicero's "De Senectute" to Him on Eve of Leaving.

HE TALKS OF HIS IDEALS

Honored at Dinner as He Is About to Become the Regius Professor at Oxford.

More than 500 physicians, representing every part of this country and Canada, and having among them foreign guests from places as distant as Cairo, Egypt, gathered last evening in the large banquet hall of the Waldorf-Astoria to do honor and bid farewell to Dr. William Osler, hitherto Professor of Medicine at Johns Hopkins University, who is now on the eve of his departure for England, whither he has been called to fill the Regius Professorship of Medicine at Oxford.

The list of guests included names familiar not only in this country but all over the world. The greeting bestowed by them upon the guest of honor was no cut-and-dried formal affair. Receptions almost equalling Dr. Osler's in enthusiasm were given to Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, the venerable author and nerve specialist, and to Dr. William D. Welch of Baltimore, a colleague of Dr. Osler at Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. James Tyson of Philadelphia, who by many of his colleagues is regarded as the foremost representative of the medical profession in America, acted as Chairman and occupied the centre seat at the guest table, behind which were draped American and English flags. He had on his left the guest of honor, while on his right sat Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia. The other guests seated with them were Dr. F. M. Sandwith of Cairo, Egypt; Dr. John S. Billings, New York City; Dr. A. Jacobi, New York City; Dr. Edward L. Trudeau, Saranac Lake; Dr. W. W. Keen, Philadelphia; Dr. James R. Chadwick, Boston; Dr. Francis J. Shepherd, Montreal; Dr. John D. Musser, Philadelphia; Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck, Boston; Dr. Frank Billings, Chicago; Dr. James C. Wilson, Philadelphia; Dr. Francis Delafield, New York City; Dr. Archibald E. Mattoch, Hamilton, Ontario; Dr. D. B. St. John Roosa, New York City; Dr. G. K. Dickinson, Jersey City; Dr. William B. Gibson, Huntington, N. Y.; Dr. Stephen Smith, New York City; Dr. William P. Welsh, Baltimore; Dr. E. G. Janeway, New York City; Dr. George W. Sternberg, Washington, D. C.; Dr. W. M. Polk, New York City; Dr. Eugene F. Cordell; Dr. John F. Wyeth, New York City, and Dr. Robert Fletcher, Washington, D. C.

DE SENECTUTE.

Of course the dinner had to contain some reference to age. That was expected.

"Cicero must be regarded as an antiquatory plagiarist, for he said in one place that 'it is desirable for a man to expire at the right time.'"

With this humorous and well-applauded allusion to the recent utterances by the guest of honor, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell presented a beautifully bound copy of James Long's translation of "De Senectute," in the edition printed by Benjamin Franklin at Philadelphia in 1744, to Dr. Osler.

Dr. Osler, replying, said in substance:

"Among the many testimonials of love and respect granted to me by you, this surpasses all. Pardon me if, in responding, I speak a little of myself. To few men has happiness come in so many forms and in such rich measure as to me. I have been singularly happy in my friends. I have also been singularly happy in the profession of my choice.

"To get success, somebody has said, is to get what you want and be satisfied with it. This I have got in your friendship and in my profession. And I cannot part from you without speaking of the nobility, the grace, the greatness of character that I have found in this my adopted country, both among my brethren of the medical profession, and among my patients.

Dr. Osler then described how he came to move to this country from Montreal, saying that when he first received the call to the Clinic Professorship at the University of Pennsylvania he thought it a joke perpetrated upon him by some of his friends.

"My ambition for years," he went on, "has been to build up a great clinic in this country on Teutonic lines—not according to the system generally followed in America and England, but on the lines which have made medicine so successful in Germany and placed it in the forefront. Such an institution would be of the greatest help in studying many difficult problems now confronting us in internal medicine. And we could have a good medical clinic in every city of 50,000 inhabitants or more, as they have in Germany; we would be doing more work in America in five years than they are now doing over there in ten.

OSLER'S THREE IDEALS.

"I have three personal ideals: To do the day's work well and not to think of to-morrow; to follow the Golden Rule, as far as it in me lies, toward my professional brethren and the patients that are intrusted to my care, and to cultivate a certain measure of equanimity. The first one may not be regarded as an ideal. It is one, however. It is the only one that the student can follow with success. It is to that ideal more than anything else that I owe whatever success I have achieved. As to the third one, I wish for it in order that I may meet success with humility, and, if sorrow and adversity come my way, be able to encounter them with the equanimity befitting a man.

"What my future will be nobody can tell. And I do not care, as long as I carry with me the memory of what you have given me. That no one can deprive me of. I have been guilty of mistakes in the

ONE VOTE SAVES NIAGARA.

Power Bill to Come Up Again in Senate—Agents Scurrying.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—The Cassidy-L'Hommedieu substitute Niagara Power bill failed of passing by one vote in the Senate to-day. If Senator Raines had not interfered the bill would have been killed by unfavorable action on a motion to reconsider. This motion, at his suggestion, was laid aside.

Corroboration of the stories circulated as to the extent and character of the influences behind the bill was to be found in the record of the Senate on the measure to-day. That it will come up again is certain. Little doubt was expressed to-night by its promoters of their ability to land the necessary additional vote for its passage.

When told of the action of the Senate on the bill and informed that the advocates of the measure were alleging that he had said he would sign it Gov. Higgins said:

"That is not so. I never made any statement on the bill. A committee representing the Lockport and Ontario Power Company interests saw me at Lockport during the campaign last Fall and asked me to make a statement in favor of the bill, on the ground that it would make votes for me in that district. I declined to do so."

The vote to-day follows:

Ayes—Ambler, Brown, Burr, Cassidy, Coggeshall, Cullen, Dooling, Fanchor, Fechter, Fitzgerald, Foley, Frawley, Gardner, Goodsell, Hasenflug, Hawkins, Keenan, Kehoe, L'Hommedieu, Malby, Martin, Prime, Riordan, Wilcox—24.

Nays—Armstrong, Brackett, Carpenter, Cooper, Cordts, Davis, Drescher, Gates, Hinman, Lewis, Marks, McCarren, Pace, Raines, Saxe, Stevens, Tully, Warnick, White—19.

Senator McCarren's vote was regarded as merely a play for position to make his motion for a reconsideration.

Senator Marks, who led the opposition in debate, had attempted to load the bill down with amendments, all of which were defeated. Senator Cassidy said that he had no excuse or apology to make for the measure. The time had now arrived, he said, when provision must be made for the transmission of electrical power.

Senator Malby, in his plea for the bill, urged that Canada would drain the American falls whether the United States did or did not, and that already the Canadian companies were selling power to American consumers. He added:

"If we take advantage of the opportunity which this great water power affords us we can illuminate the State from Buffalo to Montauk Point, and furnish heat and power to all the communities of the Commonwealth."

SAYS CHURCHES BAR POOR.

Dr. J. B. Falkner at Convention Arraigns Episcopal Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—"In our churches the presence of the poor is regarded as 'bad form.' If Christ himself were to enter them, the pewopeners would ask, 'What is that carpenter doing here?'"

This arraignment of fashionable churches was part of the sermon preached this morning by the Rev. Dr. John B. Falkner at the opening session of the one hundred and twenty-first annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Pennsylvania, in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany.

Dr. Falkner is rector emeritus of Christ Church, Germantown, which has a large and influential congregation. In the course of his sermon he said:

"There was a time when the poor came to the Episcopal churches seeking and obtaining aid for body and soul, and felt that they were helped by God through His ministers. Is it so to-day? Are they not turned over to agents of charity organizations which give something for their bodies, but nothing for their souls?

"There is little cause for surprise, then, that there are thousands in the slums who say, 'God and the Church have done with us; science has done more for the poor than Christianity ever did.'" Hence a race of Anarchists is growing up in the lower part of Philadelphia which will soon become a menace not only to the Church but also to the State; and all because those who should have helped have failed to give.

"The poor man comes to his Father's house, seeking spiritual bread, and has to listen to a sermon—that is called a Gospel sermon—on some scientific, economic, or sociological subject which would be appropriate in a professor's classroom, but which ought never to be delivered from a pulpit. The poor fellow comes hoping for a fish and goes home carrying a slimy, clammy serpent. Christ, by precept and example, teaches us to love our fellowmen, not for what they are, but for what they may become."

BLACK HAND RESUMING.

Williamsburg Physician Has Police Guard His House.

Dr. M. Lambardo of 97 Middleton Street, Williamsburg, and the other tenants who occupy the flat house there passed an uncomfortable night last night, and if the "Black Hand" made good its threats conveyed in a letter received by the doctor yesterday morning the house would have been blown up by dynamite. The house was under guard at midnight.

During the past week Dr. Lambardo has received three letters from an anonymous writer, who demanded money under threat. Dr. Lambardo paid no attention to the first two, but when he received a communication yesterday morning in which it was threatened that if $800 was not forthcoming at once the anonymous writer of the letter would blow up 97 Middleton Street with dynamite, the physician took the missive to the Clymer Street Police Station.

Dr. Lambardo translated the letter, which was in Italian. It told Capt. Holahan that he was instructed in the missive to take a Hamburg Avenue car in the evening, and ride to the terminus at Canarsie, where he would meet two men. The men would accost the physician and offer him a cigar, whereupon he was to turn over the $600.

Capt. Holahan advised Lambardo to follow the instructions contained in the letter, and go to Canarsie accompanied by two of his detectives. This Lambardo refused to do, whereupon Capt. Holahan detailed several men to keep watch upon the house through the night.

Only a few weeks ago an Italian barber living at 253 Marcy Avenue, which is in the same neighborhood, had the front of his house blown up because he refused to accede to the demands of a similar anonymous letter writer.

RECORDER WILL CHARGE PATTERSON JURY TO-DAY

Prosecutor Rand Closes State's Case with Severe Arraignment.

DELAY IN VERDICT PROBABLE

Those Who Have Watched Trial Do Not Believe Jury Will Come to Prompt Decision.

Assistant District Attorney Rand occupied more than five hours yesterday in summing up the case against Nan Patterson, accused of the murder of "Caesar" Young. He did not finish until after 5 P. M., and the fate of the defendant was in doubt for another day. Recorder Goff, when Mr. Rand had concluded, announced that he will begin his charge to the jury this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Its delivery probably will take at least two hours. It is not thought that the jury will arrive promptly at a verdict, and those familiar with the case expect a long wait.

Mr. Rand's final effort was a strong one. That he was spurred by the attacks of Abraham Levy, leading counsel for the defense, was proved by the particularity with which the charges of unfairness were answered. Once, during the afternoon session, Mr. Rand was fairly overcome by his own earnestness and a recess of ten minutes was taken. While he was speaking the defendant cowered in her chair, and at times evidently controlled herself with difficulty.

The fact that Mr. Rand was to speak drew the largest crowd of the trial. The riotous scenes of the earlier days of the trial were eclipsed. Bergt. Walsh had seventy-five policemen under his command, but efforts to keep the corridors clear were vain. A semblance of order was obtained only when the entire floor was cleared.

Even when driven away the curious men and women refused to leave the neighborhood. Franklin Street was blocked from 10 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening. Many persons offered money for admission to the court.

Mr. Rand, like Mr. Levy, impressed upon the jury that no compromise verdict was wanted.

If the defendant suffered under the sting of Mr. Rand's denunciation her brother-in-law, J. Morgan Smith, did not escape scathless.

"The worst witness against J. Morgan Smith," cried the Assistant District Attorney, "on the charge that he bought the revolver with which 'Caesar' Young was killed, is the silence of J. Morgan Smith. Come up, Smith, and clear your sister-in-law of murder if you can. You hold the key to the situation."

Mr. Rand took up Mr. Levy's charge of suppressed and distorted evidence. "Levy did not make one point yesterday," he said, "that was not based upon a lie.

"Levy says I have concealed material evidence. I wonder if he has not recalling the artifices which kept J. Morgan Smith and his wife away from the first trial."

Mr. Rand insinuated that if the truth were known about the age of the accused she could not pose as a "nineteen-year-old girl" at the time she met Young.

"Your duty is simply to tell whether or not Nan Patterson killed 'Caesar' Young. The Grand Jury says she did. Her lawyers say she didn't. Here are the facts. If 'Caesar' Young shot himself, he must have had a revolver. The revolver which took his life was purchased on June 3 at Hyman Stern's pawnshop, and we have accounted for his movements for every moment of that day.

"If 'Caesar' Young committed suicide, he must have killed himself by means of a wound that could be self-inflicted. Levy showed you over and over again how Young shot himself. It was a physical impossibility for Young to have shot himself with his finger on the trigger, for it is a patent weapon and does not go off unless there is a pressure on the back of the handle at the same time.

"Suppose, for the sake of argument, Young, acting on an impulse, decided to kill himself, would he not have made the attempt in a natural sort of a way? He would not have held the weapon upside down when he fired the shot and sent the bullet through the apex of the left lung on its way to strike the fourth dorsal vertebra."

As to the powder marks on Young's hands, Mr. Rand said it was the most natural thing in the world, when a man saw a revolver pointed at his heart, for him to try to push it away. The fact that the revolver was found in Young's pocket finally defeated the suicide theory, he said.

"When, on June 2, Young wrote to his trainer as to the care of his horses, he had no idea of suicide. When, on the morning of the killing, he bought his new hat, he had no idea of suicide.

"I never said there was a conspiracy to extort money from Young," he continued. "But I did say that there was a conspiracy to separate him from his wife. I don't believe the story that Young told Nan Patterson he was going to get a divorce from his wife. It is too new.

Mr. Rand declared there was not the slightest doubt that the "Cry Baby" letter was written while the defendant was living on Young's bounty.

"Young, on the eve of his departure, demanded his letters. Did the defendant render them? No. Was that the conduct of a woman madly in love or of a mercenary creature who wanted to keep them in her possession for blackmail purposes?

"And can you forget the threat the defendant made before the fatal tragedy? Did she not tell Young that she knew the name of the boat? Did she not say, 'You'll never sail on that boat because I'll be there to stop you'? And, did she not keep on repeating that threat until Young lost his temper, and, slapping her, put her in a cab? Had not J. Morgan Smith told her a few hours before that 'She'd have to do it'? But that blow and curse settled her determination. Don't you know that when 'Caesar' Young went to bed that night he was marked for slaughter?

Mr. Rand contended that the evidence showed Smith did buy the pistol with which Young's life was taken.

"I asked Mrs. Smith where she was on June 3," he said, "and she declined to answer, saying it would incriminate and degrade her. On June 3 the pawnbroker who sold the pistol was brought to the Coroner's office. I promised to have the indictment against her dismissed if she would answer my questions fairly. She refused because she knew that if Mrs. Jo she would be convicting her sister. Her very silence proves the purchase of the pistol by her husband.

"And now as to the morning of the tragedy. Young has been described as being in a happy mood. What were the reflections passing through the prisoner's mind as she bade him adieu from a cab on the day that he was to leave for The murder in her heart, planned this action, and one shot and bang! A sharp crack, a puff of smoke, and a dead man lay motionless on this woman's lap.

"False to her husband, false to her lover, and false to her own sex, this woman would have you believe that Young was at the very least responsible for his own death. I say that no man, no matter how low he may be, would dare attempt to speak

KILLED BY PLAY POLICEMAN.

One Lad Shoots Another at Flatbush Boys' Club.

John Hines, sixteen years old, of 154 Snyder Avenue, Brooklyn, died at the Kings County Hospital this morning as the result of a boyish prank which caused Walter Driscoll, a fourteen-year-old lad, to be taken to the Flatbush Avenue police station with a homicide charge against him.

The two boys were members of the Flatbush Boys' Club, which is at 24 Erasmus Street. With several other lads of their own age they were in the gymnasium in the basement of the clubhouse last night, when young Driscoll proposed that they play policemen. The boys fell in with the idea at once. Some of the lads were chosen to impersonate a band of burglars, others to impersonate policemen. Driscoll was among the latter. Hines pretended to be a burglar.

When the fun was at its height and Hines was standing afraid of the hands of Driscoll the latter whipped a big revolver from his pocket. He pointed it at the head of Hines and ordered him to throw up his hands. Hines laughed scornfully and in boyish bravado advanced on the make-believe policeman. The next moment he fell to the floor with a bullet in his forehead just above the left temple.

The other boys crowded about their fallen playmate. Driscoll knelt beside him crying bitterly and vowing that he did not know the revolver was loaded. Hines died at 1 A. M. He regained consciousness long enough before his death to recognize his mother and bid her farewell.

All the boys who witnessed the tragic occurrence declare that it was purely an accident.

LEAPS FROM FERRYBOAT.

Edith Daly of Hoboken Resists Tug's Crew Who Rescue Her.

Passengers on the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's ferryboat St. Louis coming from Jersey City at 6:15 o'clock last night were startled by seeing a woman leap into the river. She fought her rescuers desperately.

She was noticed walking rapidly up and down until the boat got well into midstream. She was hatless, and had a little shawl on her shoulders. Her muttering attracted attention, but before any one could prevent her she leaped over the rail.

Capt. Jesse Fowler stopped his boat and signalled to the tug Shamrock going down stream, and which almost ran the woman down. As she floated alongside the tug she was pulled aboard with boathooks, but only after she tried to escape them. She then was put aboard the ferryboat and sent to Bellevue.

She gave her name as Edith F. Daly, thirty years old, married, 105 Bloomfield Street, Hoboken. She would say nothing more except to repeat over and over:

"He will never see me more."

At 105 Bloomfield Street, Hoboken, Mrs. Daly's sister said that night that his daughter did not live with her husband, and worried us to death. She left home two days ago, he said, to go to Long River, N. J., to work there for the Summer.

HOOKER WILL FIGHT HARD.

Suggestion That He Will Resign Discredited by Friends.

Special to The New York Times.

FREDONIA, N. Y., May 2.—Justice Warren B. Hooker received the notice of the report of the Assembly Judiciary Committee against him over the telephone while at the banquet here in honor of ex-Secretary of State John T. McDonough. He returned to his seat from the telephone, making no comment.

He can be seen by any casual acquaintance or on business, but is absolutely silent on the subject of the charges.

The Justice's intimate friends say he will push his defense in a much stronger and more formal manner at the final appeal to the Legislature than before the committee. Stress will be laid on the constitutional issue involved.

ALBANY, May 2.—Those here who have had close relations with Justice Hooker discredited the story about the Capitol this afternoon that he would resign. Nevertheless, the story was well circulated.

If Justice Hooker should resign, it is expected he would do so within a day or two.

CAR IN UNDERTAKER'S SHOP.

Jumps Rails, Breaks Into Livin's, and Wrecks Hearse.

Bernard Lavin's hearse was smashed last night by a West Farms trolley car, which left the rail, crashed through the fence, after crossing the cobble sidewalk, and tore a hole in the undertaker's shop.

"Well, it happened three weeks ago just the same way, just in the same part of the fence," said Mr. Lavin, after he had rescued the wreck of the hearse and quieted the horses in the stalls, as well as his wife, who had been tumbled out of bed by the crash.

It was an east-bound car in charge of George Mason, as motorman. Along the West Farms Road, as it veers into Westchester, Green Lane crosses at the bottom of a steep slope. It is the habit of the motorman in the light cars as a high rate of speed down the slope. There was no exception to this practice in the case of Mason's car, which, however, jumped the rails.

Inside the car Policeman William Moffat of the Westchester Station was hanging on a strap. He got out with a bruised knee. Joseph Limberger, the only passenger, was cut about the head. Both continued on their way after they had said things. The motorman and the conductor called the wrecking wagon, but the car was still wedged in the undertaker's shop an hour later, while Mr. Lavin was rearranging up the bill which he is going to send to the trolley company.

Chicago Grand Jury to Investigate Dealings with Railroads.

BOLT FROM GAS BILLS ENDS SENATE CAUCUS

ARE NOW FOR 80-CENT GAS

Higgins Promises One to Deal with Lighting Programme—Fate of Measures Uncertain.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—After five hours' discussion of the Stevens Committee Gas bills the Senate Republican conference to-night broke up in a row when it was proposed by the leaders to turn the conference into a caucus.

It was decided, however, to raise the price of gas from 75 cents, as proposed by the committee, to 80 cents.

Senators Elsberg and Carpenter, who were not present at the conference, but who were represented by proxy, were pledged to this programme.

The ten who left the conference were Brackett, Brown, Cassidy, Coggeshall, Cooper, Davis, Fechter, Gardner, L'Hommedieu, and Hinman. Senators Ambler and Wilcox did not attend the conference, but, it is understood, stand with the bolters. Senator Armstrong, while remaining in the caucus, is opposed to seventy-five-cent gas. Hill, McEwan, Prime, and Barnes stayed away from the conference altogether.

The Senators leaving the caucus were not in entire accord in their sentiment with respect to the bills. Senators Cassidy and Coggeshall were opposed to all the bills. Senator Brackett said that he left because he would not be caucused on the State Commission bill, and was ready to beat all the bills rather than let that pass. Senators Davis, Brown, Fechter, and Gardner, it is understood, opposed 75-cent gas.

While Senator Armstrong declared himself as opposed to seventy-five-cent gas, he remained in the caucus and allowed himself to be bound by the action in favor of all bills.

The bolting Senators betrayed excitement when they emerged from the room. Senator Brackett said:

"Those of us who left when the caucus was proposed had different ideas with respect to the measures. Some of us were opposed to seventy-five-cent gas, believing that would mean confiscation.

"For myself, I was so much opposed to the State Commission bill that I decided to stand out in opposition to all of the measures rather than be caucused upon that measure. I intend to fight it to the bitter end."

As there were only twenty-one Senators represented in the caucus and as twenty-six votes are necessary, the proposal is that the bills will be debated together to gain Democratic support. While Senator Grady and Minority Leader Plumer were indisposed to give any definite announcement as to the position of the minority previous to the action of the Republican caucus, it is understood that a number of the Democratic Senators will vote for the bills reducing the price of gas and electricity.

Speaker Nixon is behind the gas legislation, and whatever he says prevails with the majority in the Assembly. No caucus of the Assembly Republicans was deemed necessary, and the bills will be voted upon in that body to-morrow.

"Personally I am opposed to making such matters party measures in the strict sense," said Speaker Nixon to-day. "I believe the Democrats should have opportunity to vote for the bills upon their merits, and not be forced to vote against them because they are Republican party measures."

Senator Grady and Assemblyman Palmer were at work to-night on the report which they will make to the Senate and Assembly to-morrow as representing the views of the minority.

It is the understanding that, in obedience to positive orders from Charles F. Murphy to Senator Grady, the minority in both Senate and Assembly will support all of the committee's bills except the State Utilities Commission bill. That bill will be vigorously fought by the Democrats said by a number of Republicans. Its passage is exceedingly doubtful.

As it would apply to the whole State it is meeting with opposition of the lighting companies up State, as well as those in the City of New York. It was because the Republican leaders had little hope of passing the State Commission bill that the Tully bill increasing the Railroad Commission from three to five was passed by the Senate to-day.

The Odell men want to make certain to provide a good berth for George W. Aldridge. If the State Lighting Commission bill gets through the Senate the Tully bill increasing the Railroad Commission will be killed in the Assembly.

That the Republicans are not sure of the gas legislation was indicated by a statement from Gov. Higgins to-night, as follows:

"I may call an extraordinary session to begin Friday, as soon as the present session ends. If I do call it the extra session will be for the purpose of finishing gas legislation. I hope, however, that that step may not be necessary."

Consolidated Gas stock dropped 5¼ points yesterday, which, less only a fraction, was recovered, and Brooklyn Union Gas sold down 10 points. According to the reports of specialists, the main sellers were so-called political interests, especially Tammany men, who were described as testifying to their fear of the attitude of the Governor and the Assembly at Albany.

The cause walked to the break in those gas stocks was so distinct from those influencing the rest of the market that they did not even jarr[illegible] selling of other stocks.

PANAMA PURCHASE UPHELD.

Court Refuses to Enjoin Government from Paying $50,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia today decided that the Secretary of the Treasury cannot be enjoined from paying the $50,000,000 appropriated by Congress for the purchase of the Panama Canal property.

The decision was rendered in the suit brought by Warren B. Wilson of Chicago, who attacked the act as unconstitutional. The decision was prepared by Justice Morris. He holds that the Government has a perfect right to construct either a canal or a railroad in a territory over which it exercises exclusive jurisdiction, and that it can levy taxes for that purpose.

DUST MARK LEADS TO ARREST.

Trace of Crooked Finger on Ledge in Murdered Man's Room.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., May 2.—Bert Miller, twenty-nine years old, who came here from Battle Creek, Mich., two weeks ago, was found dead to-day in his bed in a room over a saloon which he rented from his aunt, Mrs. Milo Sexton. His skull had been crushed. A heavy file was found in the room.

In the dust on a window ledge the police found the imprint of a hand with a clearly marked crooked little finger. This resulted in the arrest of Milo Sexton, or Keep. Mrs. Sexton got an order from the court a week ago forbidding her husband to visit her.

ORANGE GIRL SHOT.

Family Says That Helen Vaughan Accidentally Dropped Pistol.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., May 2.—Miss Helen Vaughan, daughter of Henry B. Vaughan of 58 Reynolds Terrace, was shot and severely injured this morning.

The police were told that Miss Vaughan's elder sister, Miss Emma Vaughan, had become ill this morning and that Helen went to a bureau to get a bottle of medicine kept there. A loaded revolver rested over the bottle, and in lifting the revolver out of the drawer it is said to have been dropped on the floor by Miss Vaughan.

HEARST AGAINST TOWNE.

Publisher Gets $8,000 Judgment Against Congressman.

Judgment was entered in the County Clerk's office yesterday for $8,428.10 against Congressman Charles A. Towne in favor of Congressman William R. Hearst. The judgment was on a note made by Towne for $8,000, dated Feb. 16, 1904, payable one year from date.

In his answer to Hearst's suit Towne contended that he had been engaged by Hearst to write a series of newspaper articles for publication in a newspaper owned by Hearst in Washington, D. C., and that the $8,000 which he borrowed from Hearst was to be applied in payment for the articles which he was to write. He contended that he was ready to write the articles, but that no demand had ever been made upon him by Hearst to write them.

ONE KILLED, 150 HURT IN CHICAGO RIOTING

Women Run for Their Lives from Savage Street Fights.

CLERGYMAN BADLY BEATEN

Striking Teamsters Growing Desperate—Non-Union Drivers Use Clubs—Employers Get Injunction.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 2.—One man was killed and fully 150 more or less hurt during this the worst day of rioting since the teamsters' strike began a month ago, and to-night the police are awaiting riot calls all over the city.

The fighting occurred in the heart of the business section of the city, man being shot down within 200 feet of the retail store of Marshall Field & Co. and clubbed at the corner of the Auditorium Hotel in plain view of hundreds of women who were compelled to run from the mob to save their own lives. It was at this point that a man named Charles Bond was struck on the head and killed.

With hundreds of negro and other strike breakers pouring into the city, and the gradual resumption of delivery of goods, the anger and desperation of the strikers increase every hour. Moreover, Judge C. C. Kohlsaat of the United States Circuit Court, at the request of the attorneys representing the seven express companies, to-day issued a temporary injunction restraining all persons from interfering with the wagons of the petitioners or the men employed upon them.

The employers took steps which brought additional industries into line, and completed plans for doubling the delivery of merchandise to-morrow. In the morning the State Street stores will begin delivering with 1,885 wagons. The employers notified Mayor Dunne of their intentions, and formally asked him for protection, whereupon the Mayor instructed the Chief of Police to swear in 1,000 additional men as special policemen.

FIGHTING FIERCE AND SAVAGE.

The fighting in the streets was fierce and savage. The strikers and their sympathizers attacked the non-union men at every opportunity, assailing them with bricks, stones, clubs, knives, and any and every other offensive weapon that they could lay their hands on.

In some instances men who had no connection with the strike were assailed by hoodlums, who beat them first and later accused them of being strike-breakers. A notable instance of this kind was that of the Rev. W. E. Wheeler, pastor of the Ninth Presbyterian Church, who while passing the corner of Desplaines and Adams Streets, on his way to the Pennsylvania [illegible] tacked by three men, who knocked him down and beat him unmercifully until the arrival of the police saved him from further injury. Mr. Wheeler managed to hold one of his assailants until the police could arrest him.

A. S. Utley, floor manager for Montgomery, Ward & Co., was attacked by three men who, he thinks, had been following him for several days, while passing a vacant lot in Oakenwald Avenue, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Streets. The men knocked him down and kicked him about the head and face. He in turn knocked one of them down with a billy, and the others ran. Thinking he had killed his assailant, Utley went to call an ambulance, but when it arrived the man had either recovered and gone away or had been carried off by his companions.

The non-union men, although hopelessly outnumbered, fought desperately. In several instances they drew their revolvers and emptied them into the crowds that pressed around their wagons, pelting them with stones and threatening their lives. The colored drivers especially were quick with their weapons. Large numbers of non-union drivers carried heavy clubs, and they swung them with terrific effect.

William Miles, a colored waiter, who is at work in a lunch room at Adams and Sangamon Streets, was a victim of the strikers' fury, although he had had no connection whatever with the trouble. He was accused of being a strike breaker, and so badly beaten that he had to go to a hospital, where his injuries were pronounced severe.

BATTLE ON A BRIDGE.

One of the worst melees occurred this afternoon when Frank Curry, the strike breaker, was leading several hundred negroes armed with clubs and guns over Rush Street Bridge to the North Side. A union man rushed into the procession and struck Curry two terrible blows in the face, closing one of his eyes entirely. Curry fired two shots, but the man escaped. Then the battle began, and about twenty-five shots were fired, and clubs and bricks flew.

Four men were wounded by a driver in a riot at Polk Street and California Avenue. This trouble was the result of an attempt by the United States Express Company to deliver goods on the far west side without police protection. When the wagon was attacked by a mob the driver returned a volley of stones and other missiles with bullets from his revolver.

Most of the riots to-night were small affairs, but heads were broken, and several arrests made. The most serious was when a crowd of 1,500 men and boys fought with a detail of fifty police. The riot started at Kingsbury and Erie Streets and ended at Halsted and Erie, a mile away, where a blockade composed of 150 teams and two street cars was broken.

The riot followed the successful delivery of four wagonloads of coal for a factory. When the wagons started south in Kingsbury Street from Huron Street thousands of men who had been liberated from work collected missiles of all descriptions and hurled them at the drivers and the escort of police. Two of the negro drivers were knocked from their wagons and had their heads cut open by stones.

Reinforcements of fifty policemen arrived in three patrol wagons and fought the crowd back. They got the teams as far as State Street and the St. Paul tracks, where the crew of a switching train blocked the street and transacted their business leisurely, giving the crowd an opportunity to renew the attack.

Pickets were sent across the river on Halsted Street, and by the time the convoy had emerged from the crowd [illegible] crowd to the west side [illegible] blockade of teams to [illegible] barns for the night stopped them. In the middle of the blockade two electric cars had been stalled, and their passengers had fled.

Here the rioters gave the police their hardest tussle. For nearly an hour they kept up a continued fire of stones. During one charge made by the police several shots were fired by the strikers, which were returned by a volley from the bluecoats. None of the shots took effect. Every pane of glass in the two cars was broken, and three officers, John Wiley, John Lorch, and Thomas Keenan were rendered unconscious by blows on the head.

Finally the blockade was broken by dint of hard work, the policemen in many cases unhitching horses and pushing wagons out of the way into side streets. The caravan then proceded, while a cordon of police stretched across the street and kept the crowd from following. During the fighting nearly a hundred persons stationed themselves on neighboring roofs and threw missiles into the struggling crowd. Twenty men supposed to be leaders were arrested.

In another riot at Fulton and Union Streets, forty-five were arrested after many had been hurt.

PICKETS MOLEST PURCHASERS.

The cordons of union pickets stationed on the curbing in State Street and Wabash Avenue were largely increased to-day greatly in numbers, with the result that, in spite of the vigilance of the police, carriages and hacks were stopped and drivers and their fares warned against attempting to carry purchases home from the boycotted stores.

Store employes burdened with bundles were stopped and their parcels taken from them and torn open and searched by the pickets and union sympathisers to see if they were attempting to deliver goods to customers or carrying their own property to their homes. After assuring the pickets that the contents of the bundles belonged to them they were not disturbed further.

In one instance a hired carriage was stopped in Wabash Avenue, and the occupant, a woman shopper, compelled to get out and walk. Another woman, with both arms full of bundles, was caught by the skirts and stopped as she was about to step into a cab in State Street. The cab driver was warned not to take her as a fare. Undaunted, the shopper walked to another corner, where she hailed a second cab. Again she was stopped by the union sympathisers. Finally she boarded a street car.

The sidewalks and the surface and elevated cars were thronged with men, women, and children carrying bundles of all sizes and descriptions.

Although it was announced last night that the teams of the express companies and of the Employers' Association would be handled by men armed with rifles, nothing of the kind was attempted, save in the case of fifteen drivers employed by the Scott Transfer Company. None of these drivers was molested. Mayor Dunne and Chief of Police O'Neill made every effort to prevent the carrying of rifles, and Superintendent Reid of the Teaming Association informed them that he had not contemplated arming his men.

TEAM OWNERS BALK.

The Team Owners' Association, which employs none but union teamsters, flatly refused this afternoon to make deliveries to any of the firms involved in the strike when ordered to do so by the Employers' Association.

At the Union League Club this afternoon a meeting was held between members of the Employers' Association and the large team owners. It was the desire of the members of the Employers' Association to bring as much pressure to bear upon the team owners as possible, and with this view they had invited to the conference representatives of the railroads entering the city.

The team owners stated their position exactly. They would not attempt to deliver coal to any firm where a strike is now in progress for the reason that their own men would be called out and they would be involved in the trouble with which they considered they had no direct concern.

They were informed that if they would not make deliveries their contracts with the business houses, amounting to millions of dollars annually, would be cancelled. This did not change their attitude, however, and they persisted in their refusal to take part in the strike.

The railroad men, contrary to the hopes of the members of the Employers' Association, did not exert the influence on the team owners that was expected. They took practically the same stand, declaring that the fight was something into which the railroads did not properly enter, that they had contracts with the team owners, that these contracts were at present being fulfilled to their satisfaction, and they could see no reason why the railroads should be dragged into the struggle.

An exception to the general attitude of the Team Owners' Association was made by the Central Supply Association, a large concern, which employs 380 teams. The officers of this company declared that they would make deliveries wherever their contracts called for them, irrespective of strike conditions.

The Commission Team Owners and the Lake Transportation Team Owners' Associations have taken a similar stand to the Chicago Team Owners' Association.

The attitude of the packers, which has been involved in some doubt, is now declared to be opposed to the extension of the strike to their teamsters.

"Armour & Co. have made no agreement whatever that would imperil the delivery of meat supplies," said Manager Conors of that company to-day.

"Our company is not a party to any agreement concerning deliveries," said Edward Swift of Swift & Co.

TO SEE THE PRESIDENT.

President Charles Dold of the Chicago Federation of Labor to-day appointed two committees, one to call on President Roosevelt and the other on Gov. Deneen and ask the two Executives not to order troops to Chicago without an investigation of the strike situation.

The committee which is to make the request of the President is composed of the following: Charles Dold, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor; Cornelius P. Shea, President International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Thomas J. Rickert, President United Garment Workers of America; J. F. O'Neill of the Freight Handlers and member of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and T. P. Quinn, President of the Canvassers' Union.

Members of the State Board of Arbitration are in Chicago. They are here to conduct an investigation of the strike by order of Gov. Deneen. Early in the struggle they offered their services to both sides without avail. Now they will interview leaders of the contest in order to make a full report of the causes and progress of the strike.

CAPTURES OLD SCHOOLMATE.

Burns Thinks That McKezney Robbed His Flat.

John, alias "Rhody," McKesney, who is thought to have entered the apartments of his old schoolmate, Michael Burns, at 222 West Sixty-first Street, on Monday, and stolen various articles of value, was captured by Policeman Hutchins of the West Forty-seventh Street Station last night, after an exciting chase through the west side by a posse of young men, led by the offended Burns.

Burns works in a stock yard on the west side. On Monday afternoon while he was at work some one who knew the geography of the flat and seemed to be aware that Mrs. Burns was out, burst open the door and helped himself to his friend's overcoat, his gold watch, also Mrs. Burns's gold watch, Michael's overcoat, and $110 in cash. Just as he was going out Mrs. Rooney, who lives on the same floor, met him in the hallway. In order to account for his presence, Mrs. Rooney says, the man said that he was in tough luck and asked her for a nickel.

When Burns came home and found that he had been robbed Mrs. Rooney's description of the beggar in the hall convinced Michael that the robbery had been committed by his old schoolmate McKesney. After notifying the police he organized his friends.

They discovered McKesney in a saloon at Eleventh Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, but he dodged out, and a hot chase ensued.

On Fifty-fourth Street, half way between Ninth and Tenth Avenues, McKesney turned at bay and drew a revolver, but Policeman Hutchins knocked it out of his hand and pinned him to the ground.

At the police station a search of McKesney brought to light, besides the revolver, which was fully loaded, two skeleton keys and a knife.

OLD CASTLE WILLIAMS HAS ITS FIRST SUICIDE

Boy Recruit Kills Himself on Governors Island.

DESERTED AND SURRENDERED

Had Not Been Court-Martialed, So Will Be Buried To-day with Military Honors Accorded the Bravest.

For the first time in the history of Castle Williams—the grim old fortress prison on Governors Island—a soldier committed suicide there yesterday. The suicide was Michael Broad, nineteen years old, and unassigned. He enlisted a month ago at Newark, and nothing is known of his family.

Broad was a fine, soldierly looking boy, and created an excellent impression on the recruiting officer who administered the oath to him. Two hours later the recruit disappeared and did not show up again until Sunday, when he walked into the recruiting office in Newark and surrendered, admitting that he was a deserter.

As is the custom, the young soldier, who until tried and sentenced remained a soldier, was sent to Governors Island and locked up in Castle Williams, pending the court-martial that was to determine his fate. He arrived on the island late Sunday afternoon, and was placed in one of the most comfortable cells.

At 9 o'clock the prisoner apparently was sound asleep, and the guard on duty on the tier where his cell was located shouted the usual "Nine o'clock and all's well." When the guard tried to wake him yesterday morning he discovered that the boy was dead. Beside him was a vial, which had contained carbolic acid. How the prisoner smuggled it into the prison is a mystery. Sergeant Way, the prison supervisor, said he believed that the recruit had made up his mind to end his life before he surrendered to the authorities in Newark.

As Broad had never been court-martialed, he died a soldier, and not a prisoner of the United States, and as such his funeral will be the same as that received by the bravest soldier. The following order was promulgated yesterday afternoon:

Special Orders, No. 66.—The funeral of the late recruit, Michael Broad, unassigned, will be held in the old gymnasium at 10 o'clock A. M. to-morrow, the 3d. The Quartermaster's Department will furnish transportation for the remains from Governors Island to Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., and transportation for six (6) pall bearers from Governors Island to Cypress Hills Cemetery and return. The dress uniform will be worn.

By order of Col. Smith.

J. H. MILLER,
Captain and Adjutant Eighth Infantry.

The Chaplain of the Eighth Infantry will conduct the services.

PHILADELPHIA'S GAS FIGHT.

City Councils Committee Postpones Action on Lease Plan.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—As a result of the agitation against the leasing of the Philadelphia gas works to the United Gas Improvement Company for a term of seventy-five years for $25,000,000, the Finance Committee of City Councils to-day decided to postpone action on the matter for the present and consider propositions from other competitors.

When the lease proposition was introduced in Councils last week it was explained that the city was in immediate need of $25,000,000, and for that reason would have to lease the gas works for a long term of years.

Mass meetings were held to-night in several wards, at which speeches were made in opposition to the lease. Plans are still going forward for a demonstration on Thursday at City Hall. One of the things decided on to-day was a meeting to be held on City Hall Plaza, at which prominent citizens will be asked to speak against the proposed lease.

Israel W. Durham, Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania, and leader of the local Republican organization, arrived home from Hot Springs, Va., to-day. He refused to talk for publication, but it is believed that he had much to do with the action taken by the committee of councils.

GOV. FOLK IS MERCIFUL.

Commutes Sentence on Man Who Stole for His Family.

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 2.—Gov. Folk to-day commuted the sentence on Joseph F. Langton from two years in the penitentiary to a term ending May 8. Langton was convicted in April of embezzlement while Assistant Librarian of the St. Louis Public Library.

The Governor says the money was not taken for gambling schemes, but rather to pay expenses due to illness in Langton's family. He has to support a large family and also invalid parents, and is not a criminal at heart. The Directors of the Public Library, the Grand Jury, the court officers, and many citizens asked executive clemency.

Langton will not go to the penitentiary, but will serve out the remaining five days of his sentence in the St. Louis jail.

DIVORCED FROM HER CHILD.

And Got Custody of Husband—Court's Little Error.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, May 2.—To her surprise and chagrin Mrs. Clara L. Russell has discovered that the decree of divorce which she obtained in the District Court here several months ago was from her infant son, Henry Jenkins Russell, instead of from her husband, George Henry Russell, as she supposed.

According to the decree she was divorced from the son and got the custody of the husband. In filling out the decree the name of the son was written where that of the husband should have appeared.

Mrs. Russell appeared this morning before Judge Sutton, who granted the decree, and she was informed that there was no way by which he could rectify the error, and that in order to get a divorce from her husband it would be necessary for her to file another suit.

WAS MISLED, SAYS LAWSON.

Declares He Subscribed for Stock Owing to False Pretenses.

BOSTON, May 2.—A hearing in the suit brought by Paul Fuller of Coudert Brothers, New York, against Thomas W. Lawson to recover $225,000 for Kern Incandescent Light Company stock, said to have been subscribed for by Lawson, was opened to-day in the Massachusetts Supreme Court before Chief Justice Knowlton.

Counsel for the plaintiff contended that Lawson had originally subscribed for $255,000, but that he had paid in only $25,000. When a second call for money, amounting to 25 per cent., was made upon Lawson he refused to pay, counsel alleged. The defendant subsequently wrote a letter to Coudert Brothers alleging that he had been deceived in the entire matter.

Lawson's defense is that he was led to sign the agreement to subscribe for stock by reason of the false and fraudulent representations made to him as to the [illegible] past, as everybody else. But they have been mistakes of the head, not of the heart. In leaving you now, I think I dare to say that, while dwelling with you in this country, I have loved no darkness, nursed no delusions, and allowed no care."

In quoting Cicero and presenting the memorial gift to Dr. Osler, Dr. Mitchell said:

"What humorist selected the gift I don't know, nor do I know what sarcastic genius singled me out to present it. But I suppose my own fitness depended on the fact that I am the youngest man here to-night, and thus best suited to bring the homage of youth to our venerable friend, the Regius Professor. If Cicero had been more scientific in the modern sense of the word, he would have been less vague as to what decade should call us hence.

"Our declining years I take to be those when we have to decline everything that is pleasant. The charming qualities of our Regius Professor continue to testify to his youthfulness. Yet I suspect that he has been long deceiving the world as to his true age, for I must sorrowfully admit that he is well on in years, if Shakespeare tells the truth as to what is given to old age. For he surely has 'honor, love, obedience, troops of friends.' May he live as long as he desires to live. May he know of no age that may be deemed old except in the number of years. Personally, have found old age both happy and productive. And I trust that so will you, Dr. Osler. God bless you!"

Not only was there a tribute of speech to Dr. Osler, but one of song by a quartet, which aroused great enthusiasm.

This is the title page of the song:

OUR REGIUS PROF.

Composed and Sung by

THE SAINT JOHNS HOPKINS GASTRIC QUARTETTE

at the dinner to

DR. OSLER.

THE WALLED-OFF CASTORIA.
New York, May 2d, 1905.

The song itself is as follows:

Our chief, we turn to thee,
Beloved from sea to sea,
To thee we sing.
We love thy genial ways,
Thy wit and merry plays,
Thy matchless eyes' dark rays,
And tribute bring.

CHORUS.

God save the mighty chief,
We part from thine in grief,
God save our chief.
God save our Regius Prof,
Our hats to him we doff,
God save our Regius Prof,
God save our Prof.

Look at his arteries,
Judge of his age by these,
Scarce thirty-five.
May he ne'er pass his prime
In symptom or in sign,
Younger in spite of time,
Long live our chief.

CHORUS: God save the mighty chief, &c.

He'll find there devotees
Of all the deities
In England's realm.
There Volcan holds the fort,
Venus and Bacchus sport,
Mars also has his Court
In London town.

CHORUS: God save the mighty chief, &c.

May he come back to us,
Still to inspire us,
His absence brief.
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
Perennial chief.

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia
Response by.....Dr. Osler

The addresses of Dr. Francis J. Shepherd of Montreal, Dr. James C. Wilson of Philadelphia, and Dr. William H. Welch were devoted largely to reminiscences of their companionship with Dr. Osler during the years which he spent in these three cities, but contained also frequent and cordial tributes to his professional skill and learning as well as to his personal charms. Special stress was laid by all of them upon the inspiring influence of Dr. Osler's personality, whether he was met as a fellow-student, practitioner, or teacher. Dr. Jacobi of this city called forth a storm of applause by an incidental reference to Dr. Osler's mother, who is still living at the advanced age of ninety-eight.

Although the plans for the dinner were originally laid by a committee appointed by the medical Faculty of the University of Pennsylvania, they were perfected by a larger committee of forty representing all the largest cities in the Union and Canada. The immediate arrangements for the banquet were in the hands of a local sub-committee consisting of Drs. A. Jacobi, E. G. Janeway, Charles L. Dana, and Joseph D. Bryant.

The family of Dr. Osler, including his mother-in-law, his wife, and his young son, occupied the centre box in the first gallery. Their appearance there when the dinner proper was about half through was a signal for the entire assembly on the main floor to rise and applaud. Both tiers of boxes were filled with women in gay dresses, who had gone there to listen to the speeches.

The programme printed for the evening bore on its middle page a fine picture of the guest of honor. The souvenirs of the occasion were small apothecary's mortars, in which the icecream was served, and, accompanying them, miniature porcelain pestles. Blossoming dogwood in gigantic bunches adorned the tables and furnished the sole decorations used.

BURNS PLEADS IN VAIN THAT MARRIAGE WAS OLD

Learns Statute of Limitations Does Not Include Matrimony.

WIFE FINDS HIM AT LAST

He Had Married Girl Who Vanished at Time He Disappeared Twenty Years Ago.

Charles Burns of Killashandra, County Cavan, Ireland, behind the bars on a charge of bigamy and desertion preferred by his wife, who was Mary Smith of Ballin Temple, in the same county, now realizes that no statute of limitations operates in his favor and that he is in the grip of the law.

Burns when, May 17, 1883, he married Mary Smith at Ballintemple, was a sturdy young farmer, with a score of acres that were fertile, and for a couple of years was industrious and a good husband. Their boy, Edward, was six months old—he is now a stalwart young fellow—when Charles went with his wife's brother to sell some cattle at a fair. He received the money and vanished. His wife saw him again for the first time Monday night in spite of efforts during twenty years to bring him to account.

One of the neighbors of the Burns family was Susan McHugh, a six-foot rustic beauty. Her disappearance from the county coincided with that of Mary's husband.

Mrs. Burns had no time to fret. She devoted herself to her farm and her boy, and bided her time.

A year ago she decided to extend her quest for her husband by going to the United States, and she found a temporary home with a sister at Pittsburg, Penn. Her counsel was to communicate with the police of every great city, and it was followed.

Whether an enemy betrayed the fugitive or not has not been determined, but last week a letter reached her at her sister's. It informed her that Charles Burns was living at 305 East Eighty-fourth Street, New York, and she was prompt in calling on the Pittsburg police, who communicated with Chief Detective Stephen O'Brien. Detectives Jackson and Doolady learned that Burns lived with a tall woman and a boy three years old.

Burns answered Jackson's rap on the door of his apartment, and Susan McHugh peered over his shoulder. Jackson deftly got Burns aside and told him his wife was down stairs, and the man blurted out that he believed that nothing could come to him because it was twenty years since he was with his wife. Burns finally admitted that he married Susan McHugh four years ago at St. Boniface's Catholic Church, in Second Avenue.

Burns went with Jackson to the elevated railway station at Eighty-fourth Street and Third Avenue, where his wife was waiting with Doolady. On seeing him she threw her arms around his neck and kissed him, addressing him as her "Charley," but he treated her coldly. He was arraigned before Magistrate Breen in the Harlem Court yesterday morning and was remanded until to-day.

The legitimate Mrs. Burns did not, when questioned by Magistrate Breen, seem to be intent on prosecuting her husband. She was tearful, and while she said she wished him "punished as the law says," seemed to be wavering.

TRUSTY ALARM CLOCK AGAIN.

Gives Warning of Burglar—Sympathetic Friend's Plight.

Policeman Hutchinson of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station heard an alarm clock ringing at 8 A. M. yesterday, and knowing that no person living on his beat rose at such an untimely hour, traced the noise to Patrick Coperito's saloon at 220 First Avenue. There he saw a man climbing over the fanlight of the door. He had difficulty in squeezing himself through, and when he dropped to the sidewalk Hutchinson was there waiting. The policeman says he found two alarm clocks, one still ringing, two quarts of whisky, about fifty cigars, and $2.15 in cash. The prisoner gave his name as William Studley and refused his address.

As Hutchinson was taking his prisoner to the station another young man came up and spoke to Studley as if he knew him.

"Don't you worry," he told the prisoner. "Just keep up a stiff upper lip and I'll get you out all right." He said he would go to the station with the prisoner, and Hutchinson didn't mind. When they reached the station the prisoner's friend said he guessed he wouldn't go inside.

"I'm sorry I can't go into the cell with you and keep you company for the rest of the night," he said to the prisoner.

"Why, you can just as well as not," said Hutchinson. "I'll make you a prisoner, too."

And he did. In the morning the friends who said he was William Barksdale, was freed, but Magistrate Breen held Studley in $1,500 bail.

CHECK FOR $482 WAS BAD.

Miller Said to be Son of German Official.

A young man, who gave the name Ernest Miller, twenty-three years old, but refused his address, was arraigned before Magistrate Moss in the Tombs Court yesterday, charged with forgery. He was well dressed, and is said to be the son of a German official, who disappeared from Germany last year after an escapade.

The complainant was Ernest Mechenbach, head of the Mechenbach Importing Company, at 20 Howard Street. Miller was charged with having forged a check on the Canadian Bank of Commerce of Toronto for $482.

Mr. Mechenbach said that early in January Miller called on him and presented a letter reading: "E. Ruch, Barmen, Germany."

He represented himself as the son of a member of the firm of Root, Sporbeck & Co., large exporters of laces. He was cordially received.

Mr. Mechenbach went with Miller to the Canadian Bank when Miller cashed the check.

The bank officials, on a postulation telegraphed to Toronto, were justly alarmed them to notify Mr. Mechenbach, who ar- of Germany. Miller was arrested on [illegible]

MAXWELL RUIN OF CITY, SAYS MAN AT HEARING

Stein Scores School Superintendent and Shorter Day.

HISSES FAIL TO STOP HIM

Many Societies Protest Against Cutting Down of School Hours—Maxwell Says Nothing.

"There is the ruin of the city!" shouted an angry German, pointing an accusing finger at City Superintendent Maxwell during last night's hearing on the "shorter day" proposition before the Committee on Elementary Schools at the Board of Education offices. The remark was the climax of a tirade against the City Superintendent by Gerson Stein, a real estate agent of 52 East One Hundred and Sixteenth Street. He was hissed, but refused to sit down until he was ready. Mr. Maxwell did not reply.

The hearing commenced shortly after 8 o'clock. Nearly every interested society in Manhattan had one or more representatives present, and the majority were against the "shorter day." William H. Allen of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor said that his society would like to see the work of the "part time" and full time classes compared before it would give a decision in the matter. M. Mulligan, representing the West Side Taxpayers' Association, said that the "shorter day" was not wanted in his section. James Clancy of the local board of District No. 12 made an elaborate defense of the three-and-a-half-hour day. He was half way through when Mr. Mulligan interrupted:

Mrs. Herbert Parsons, a fellow-board member of Mr. Clancy's, said that her associate's sentiments were not universal among the local board members, and Mr. Clancy subsided.

It was when a speaker began to praise Mr. Maxwell that Mr. Stein was aroused.

"Why should we have a short day?" he said, jumping to his feet. "For the teachers to go gadding about? To take in theatres in the afternoons? Things are not managed right—Mr. Maxwell is the fault of it. There is the ruin of the city. He gets his big salary and does nothing for it." [Hisses and cries of "Shame!" "Sit down!" &c.]

Mr. Stein kept right on, however, and after the excitement accompanying the incident had subsided the hearing was resumed. Among the societies opposing the "shorter day" were the Neighborhood Workers, the Women Principals' Association, Normal College Alumnae House, Arion Society, Public Educational Society, West Side Taxpayers' Association, and the East Side Civic Club.

EQUITABLE CONTROVERSY CALLS STATE OFFICIALS

Insurance Commissioners Seek First-Hand Information.

ALEXANDER REPLIES TO HYDE

Denies in Affidavit That He Has Betrayed Trust—Attacks the Vice President's Motives.

Superintendents of Insurance from five States, members of the Executive Committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, will be here by to-morrow to ascertain at first hand the details of the controversy in the Equitable Life Assurance Society. The Executive Committee of the convention will hold a formal meeting at the Hoffman House to-morrow morning and plan for such action as they consider the circumstances require.

R. E. Folk, Superintendent of Insurance for Tennessee, and H. L. Prewitt, the State Superintendent for Kentucky, met with President Alexander yesterday afternoon and were assured that he would give them every facility possible in making such examination of affairs as they might desire. To-day, at Mr. Hyde's invitation, they will see him at his offices in the Equitable Building. The two Commissioners who are already here also saw Deputy Superintendent Robert Hunter of this State, and were assured that the investigation now being carried on by Superintendent Hendricks's department would be thorough and unsparing.

It is not the intention of the visiting Commissioners, Mr. Folk said at the Hoffman House last night, to make a move for an investigation by their convention unless a general demand for such a proceeding is expressed by policy holders of the society or they are dissatisfied with the results of the investigation by the New York State Department when that is completed. The other members of the Executive Committee who are expected by to-night or to-morrow morning are F. L. Cutting of Massachusetts, the President of the National Convention; John C. Lennehan of New Hampshire, Zeno M. Host of Wisconsin, and H. B. Appleton, the Second Deputy Superintendent of Insurance of this State.

"It is not our intention," said Mr. Folk, "to interfere with or to anticipate the examination by the New York State Department. But our constituents have been considerably disturbed by the published accounts of the controversy in the Equitable Society, and we feel that we owe it to them to come here and learn of conditions at first hand."

There was made public last evening an affidavit made by President James W. Alexander of the Equitable and filed with Justice Maddox in the suit of Franklin B. Lord against the Equitable. Mr. Alexander said last night in reply to allegations in the intervening petition of James H. Hyde and William H. McIntyre that he is "advised by counsel for the society that those statements are wholly immaterial, and that the only force of effect thereof is to drag into this litigation a real or imaginary controversy between myself as an officer of the society and Mr. Hyde as an officer of the society." Mr. Alexander also said:

"I do not admit the truth of the statements contained in said communication of Mr. Hyde to the board, but, on the contrary, I assert that in many respects they are absolutely contrary to the truth; and, under advice of counsel for the society, I decline to enter into any detailed discussion with regard to the matter, except to say that, so far as it is charged or implied that I have been actuated by any motive in this matter other than the welfare of the society, such charge is absolutely untrue, and except, further, that so far as I am charged with any violation of any duty as a trustee under the trust deed annexed to the intervening petition, there is no basis or foundation for such charge, and that I have done nothing contrary to my duties under said trust deed.

"My duty to the society, as its President, is paramount to any theoretical or fanciful duty that I may be supposed to owe to Mr. James Hazen Hyde since he has attained the age of twenty-one years."

ALEXANDER'S AFFIDAVIT.

Mr. Alexander's affidavit says:

"The affidavit of James Hazen Hyde, sworn to April 25, 1905, and presented with the amended petition of intervention of Messrs. James H. Hyde and William McIntyre, contains much that, as I am advised by counsel, is wholly immaterial, impertinent, and scandalous. As no one opposes the intervention of Messrs. Hyde and McIntyre, and as the order allowing their intervention has already been signed by the acquiescence of all the parties to the cause, the presentation of these papers is manifestly for no legitimate purpose. I have declined to be drawn into any controversy with regard to matters which I am advised are of no relevancy, but I do not intend to permit the unfounded assertions of this affidavit to pass without contradiction.

"Mr. Hyde has presented many propositions to the Special Committee of the Board of Directors, and I do not know that it is of any importance to this matter whether the paper which he annexed to his original petition or the paper which he annexed to his amended petition, marked Exhibit C, are the papers which he decided to rely upon. At all events they have no relevancy to the matter before the court.

"The allegation in the affidavit of Mr. Hyde that since the beginning of this action Mr. Tarbell and myself have in violation of any agreement or of any pledges renewed any agitation to take away from the stock the rights reserved to it by an alleged agreement of all the parties is absolutely false.

"Pursuant to the resolution of the Board of Directors adopted at the meeting held on April 26, 1905, at which the pending amended charter was adopted, Mr. C. B. Alexander, one of the counsel for the society, has, I am informed, done all in his power to procure the approval by the Superintendent of Insurance of the proposed amended charter, for which charter Mr. James H. Hyde voted, and to which he assented. I am advised that the counsel whom, as President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, I instructed to take charge of and defend this action on behalf of the defendant society, has urged upon the court in the strongest possible way the denial of any injunction restraining the final approval of said charter.

"I am now informed by counsel that the special counsel for Mr. Hyde in his so-called petition for intervention in this action has now taken the position before the court that the proposed amended charter cannot be approved without the consent of the holders of three-fifths of the stock in favor of such amendment, and that it is now insisted by said counsel on behalf of Mr. Hyde that a stockholders' meeting should be held to authorize the proposed amended charter. In the petition originally filed on behalf of the said Hyde by said special counsel, the said Hyde and his said special counsel took the position that no amendment of the charter affecting the election of Directors could be made without a majority of the stock, and that no such amendment of the charter as has now been submitted to the Superintendent of Insurance for approval can lawfully be made by the defendant society without the consent of James H. Hyde and the said William H. McIntyre and his co-trustee, 'as the owners of a majority of the stock.' In view of the position now taken by the said James H. Hyde, through his personal counsel, that the charter cannot be amended without the consent of holders of three-fifths of stock, it is apparent that the assertion that I have not kept faith in the matter of the proposed charter is without foundation, and that, on the contrary, Mr. Hyde appears before the court in the attitude of antagonizing the approval of the amended charter as it has been adopted."

MORE RETIREMENT REPORTS.

Reports were set on foot in Wall Street yesterday that the Frick Investigating Committee of Equitable Directors had suggested to President Alexander that he retire from the Presidency and persuade Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell to go out with him. In connection with these the story that Postmaster General George B. Cortelyou would have the Presidency offered to him, and that James H. Hyde would retire temporarily was revived. Mr. Alexander authorized his secretary to deny that the question of his resignation had ever been broached to him by the Frick committee or that he had any intention of leaving the society. A similar denial was obtained from Mr. Tarbell's office, and a member of the Equitable board who has been in touch with the work of the Frick committee added that he knew the committee had not approached Mr. Alexander on the matter.

In the United States Circuit Court here petitions were filed yesterday by three Philadelphia policy holders of the society seeking permission to intervene in the suit instituted by J. Willcox Brown of Maryland to get a distribution of the surplus and an accounting of moneys that may have been wrongly used by officers of the society. The intervenors are Dr. Edward E. Montgomery, whose policies amount to $152,500; T. Ashby Blythe, with policies of $38,500, and Howard B. Arrison, whose policy is for $2,000.

THE BROWN SUIT.

Battle & Marshall, attorneys for Col. Brown, issued a statement in explanation of the intervention, which in part is as follows:

"The objects of this suit are, first, to secure a division of the surplus, and, second, as the case develops, to compel an accounting to the society by the Directors and other officers of the profits which they have made by the administration of the funds of the society.

"We have stated to policy holders that we are in accord with Mr. Frick's published statement that the society is solvent; in fact, we have gone further, and said that when some of Mr. Frick's fellow-Directors have been compelled to restore to the society the profits they have made by the use of the society's funds, the surplus of the society will be considerably increased."

Before Justice Bischoff in the Supreme Court yesterday argument was made on the application of A. Edward Wobdruff, counsel for Herbert E. Tull, a Philadelphia policy holder, who is suing for an accounting of the Equitable surplus, for an order for the examination of James H. Hyde, James W. Alexander, and other officers of the society before trial. Justice Bischoff indicated that he would grant an order to show cause why an order for such examination should not be granted, and it is expected that new application will be made to-day on this line.

Frank H. Platt, who was counsel for the Crimmins committee of policy holders, yesterday discussed the proposal of James H. Hyde to Judge Maddox of Brooklyn in connection with the intervening petition in the Lord suit. Mr. Hyde offers to transfer his stock, to be voted for twenty-eight Directors to be nominated by the policy holders under conditions to be determined, and twenty-four by himself.

PLATT TALKS OF HYDE.

Mr. Platt said:

"More than a month ago Mr. Hyde agreed with the policy holders that he would have the board adopt a two-year mutualization plan, and at the same time would so reorganize the Executive Committee that during the two-year period the company would be under the control of persons favorable to the policy holders.

"When the Directors met Mr. Hyde caused the board to adopt the two-year plan, but he had the board refuse to carry out the rest of the agreement. The plan was adopted with knowledge by Mr. Hyde that the Lord injunction suit would be commenced before the plan could be carried out. As soon as the Lord suit was begun Mr. Hyde intervened as a party, and while he pretended that he was still favoring the two-year plan, his counsel were in court saying that it was illegal. In the amended petition he now comes out squarely against the plan, although he says he favors it with some conditions. In the first place, he takes the ground that the plan is illegal unless it is approved by three-fifths of the stock, under Section 32 of the stock corporation law.

"Neither Mr. Hyde nor his counsel made any such suggestion as that at the time when the agreement was entered into. He says in his petition that he approved the plan only upon the condition and agreement that he should be assured against any right on the part of the society to further amend the charter without the consent of three-fifths of the stock. The agreement which was made has been published in full, and it contains no such reservation by Mr. Hyde, nor is it true that any such reservation was made by him."

NO DIVISION OF SURPLUS.

Wisconsin Court Against Equitable Suit of Insurance Commissioner.

MADISON, Wis., May 2.—The State Supreme Court to-day denied a rehearing in the case of State Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host against the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

Host sought some time ago to compel the Equitable to distribute several millions of its surplus funds among its policy holders in Wisconsin and the court decided adversely. The denial of a rehearing ends the case in Wisconsin.

COL. STOKES'S SPEECH STIRS UP GUARDSMEN

Is Said to Have Attacked His Own Brooklyn Regiment.

McLEER WILL INVESTIGATE

Colonel Denies That His Talk About $28 Uniforms Was Intended as Reflection Upon Command.

National Guard circles in Brooklyn are stirred up by reports of a speech said to have been made recently by Col. William A. Stokes in criticism of his own regiment, the Twenty-third, at a military dinner. The regiment is Brooklyn's pet.

The discussion has led to official action by Gen. James McLeer, commander of the Second Brigade. At the request of Gen. McLeer, Col. Stokes will this morning meet him and give his side of the case. Whether anything further will be done in the matter by Gen. McLeer depends upon the outcome of this meeting.

The reported criticism was expressed at a reunion dinner of the Thirteenth Regiment Veteran Association on Tuesday night. Col. Stokes was a guest. According to the reports which came to the notice of Gen. McLeer, Col. Stokes, while criticising his own command, said some flattering things about its rival, the Thirteenth. He is said to have found fault with the Twenty-third for fostering a feeling of exclusiveness, which retarded the growth of its membership, and to have referred to "its bum old twenty-eight-dollar gray uniform" as a handicap to recruiting. The Colonel was reported to have also criticised the veterans of the regiment for not showing a proper interest in its welfare.

Yesterday Gen. McLeer sent a note to Col. Stokes expressing a wish to hear his side of the story. Last night Col. Stokes called the General up on the telephone and told him he would meet him this morning.

"I cannot, of course, say what course I will pursue in the matter until I have talked with Col. Stokes," said Gen. McLeer last night. "I will say, however, that no one can make an unjust attack upon any regiment of my brigade without being called upon to substantiate his words. It matters not what his rank may be. The Twenty-third Regiment has always performed well the duty required of it, and its record is all right. It was ready with as large a percentage as any regiment to go to the front in the Spanish war, but was not ordered from home. It is a splendid organization, and I will not stand to have it unjustly criticised by any one."

When Col. Stokes was spoken to last night about the trouble he declared that in the reports of his remarks at the dinner he had been misquoted, and would have no difficulty in convincing Gen. McLeer of this.

"It is true," he said, "that I praised the Thirteenth at the dinner. I was a guest of the regiment's veterans. Col. Austen has recruited the Thirteenth up from a very slender command to one of 1,200 men. I congratulated him upon this, and also upon the excellent recruiting methods which made this possible. In connection with this I took occasion to regret that the Twenty-third was handicapped in the matter of recruiting, pointing out that a man entering the Thirteenth received the State uniform for nothing, whereas upon joining the Twenty-third he was called upon to pay $28 for the distinctive uniform worn by my command. I thought this a handicap in recruiting, and frankly said so. If that has been taken as a reflection upon my own command, I did not intend it as such."

The Wanamaker Store — Store Closes at 5:30 o'clock — The Wanamaker Store

INDICATIONS

A sort of spruce picturesqueness, quaint and jaunty, governs fashion this season even in the smallest things. Small fans, all of wood, prove the point. Odd or conventional in shape, made of unvarnished light wood, with a ribbon holding the sticks together, and bright floral decorations painted in clear water-colors, they lend a touch and piquancy to the Summer toilette. 50c each.

* * *

Very appropriate Favors for Spring dinner parties, are Watteau cifina toys, at 30c to $1.50, to hold the bonbons or nuts. They are tiny white pianos, harpsichords, watering cans, wheelbarrows and what-not, decked with blue and white forget-me-nots and gold lines—as in the days of the Belle Marquise.

* * *

Little girls, from 4 to 10, will look their prettiest beneath the new Leghorn Flap Hats that we brought to them from France. The brims are wide and graceful, edged with lace straw, and the crowns are high. Soft folded, shaded silk—in tones of pretty colors—end, at the back, in a loose knot and broad streamers. $2.25 each.

* * *

Partly because of the war-interest, chiefly because of their fitness for the open-air life, Japanese trappings are going to be used more than ever in Summer homes. Stone Lawn Lanterns are artistic. They used to stand as votive offerings on the temple lawns—rough, properly proportioned stone pedestals, each with an opening to hold a small light at evening. $15 to $30.

* * *

Japanese Wind Harps are delightful, hung at porch ends or at a window. Lovers in Japan send these swaying musical bells of painted glass or leaf-shaped metal to their ladies, and the obliging breeze makes them tinkle and recall the lovers to mind. 25c for the glass ones; metal harps, $1.25.

* * *

Japanese Lamps, too, are inexpensive and fitting. Japanese Jars, shapely and rich in color—green or yellow or melon-striped—covered with a wicker lattice, are selling here at far below their worth. $6 to $10. New wicker shades from Japan, with green or red linings, cost only $2 each.

* * *

Hampshire Pottery Lamps—American in spite of their name—are also most harmonious to Summer settings. Rich tulip-green finish, in severe urn, vase or squat shapes—very handsome with red mosaic or green metal and bead-fringed shades. The Hampshire Lamps are sold at $9 to $20.

* * *

Ribbons—ribbons—ribbons, especially Flowered Ribbons. They are decreed for belts, girdles, bretelles, millinery—entire frocks are beautifully made of the wider sorts. The ribbons are covered close with flowers, either great clusters of small blossoms or single huge blooms like magnolias and orchids and roses. 25c to $5 covers the range—the prettiest collection we have had, by the way.

The Season Of the Frock Coat

The height of the season for the Double-breasted Frock Coat and Waistcoat is here, and no man who makes any pretension to dress remains unprovided with this important apparel.

The Wanamaker stocks are unusually well provided in these garments at all seasons, but naturally our lines are at their best at the present moment. There is not a size or proportion for the tall, stout, short-stout or regular figure that is not provided for. In fact, so complete and comprehensive is the size-assortment that we very frequently fit, without any alterations at all, men who had supposed that they would have to go to a tailor to get clothing to fit them.

We do not know of another stock that approaches ours in this fullness; and, where we are not quite satisfied with the fit of the garments, we have our tailors make the alterations in the same expert manner as though you were having a try-on with your custom tailor.

The materials in Wanamaker Clothing are of the very finest character, and the workmanship is of the very highest order—the collars, lapels and buttonholes all being made by hand.

Wanamaker Double-breasted Frock Coats have the same style and finish as custom-tailor work, and the fit must be absolutely satisfactory before you secure them; and yet you pay just about half what the custom tailor would charge.

Double-breasted Frock Coats and Waistcoats of black thibet, unfinished worsted, imported English vicunas, at $20 to $35.

Striped Worsted Trousers, in the very handsomest patterns, at $5 to $12.

Fancy Waistcoats in a great variety, at $2.50 to $6.50.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

More of the Women's Raincoats At $12

The rapidity with which the six hundred Raincoats were sold out last week started us trying to find more to meet the demands of people who were unable to share in the offering, because the raincoats were sold out before they got here.

We discovered that the manufacturer had two hundred and twenty-five coats which were just coming from the hands of the tailors. These we have secured to sell at the same price, $12 each.

All are fresh and new, just finished, in the very latest styles, and in a very wide variety. Those who were disappointed before will come promptly now, as this is the last that we shall receive, and they are likely to go as quickly as the previous lot.

The pieces are in handsome shapes, and the cutting is very beautifully done. To illustrate the values, the lot includes about ninety ten-inch Nappies, so large that they might fairly be called bowls for salads, sliced tomatoes or fruit. They would regularly be worth $7.50; these are $4.50 each.

8-inch Bowls, at $2.75, worth $5.

Elegance in The New PORTIERES

The American manufacturers of draperies have succeeded in bringing their output this Spring—both in point of weave and attractiveness—within striking distance of their foreign competitors. Our showing is elegant and very moderately priced.

The Cotton and Mercerized Armures still remain the most popular hangings. They are effective and inexpensive.

These are a few suggestions:

ARMURES—A small fleur-de-lis figure in full color line; plain colors, bordered with narrow strip of tapestry in bright colors. $4.75 a pair.

SILK HANGINGS—A very attractive light-weight Summer portiere in silk and cotton, dark rich colorings; odd designs; edges neatly trimmed. $15.50 a pair.

Third floor.

Fine Crepe Shirts Made to Order

We are showing a beautiful collection of soft, cool Scotch Crepe Shirtings, that will be pleasing to particular men. The patterns are exclusive with us, and the variety shown is unequaled in the city.

Wanamaker Custom Shirtmaking is of the very highest order. The shirts we produce are not only superb in style, but the fit, comfort and finish of the shirts are above criticism.

All sorts of materials—hundreds of patterns, of course—but we want you particularly to see the new crepes.

Plain Negligee Shirts, $5 each; plaited bosoms, $5.50 each.

At the Sign of the Best Shirt, Broadway and Ninth street.

Smart Derbies That Are Comfortable

The Wanamaker Derby Hats have made a splendid reputation among men who will not forego the dignity of a Derby Hat, yet who dislike the rigid circle of the ordinary Derby.

The Wanamaker Derbies are light in weight and self-conforming, making them as easy on the head as a soft hat, yet presenting the smart character of the best Derby hats made. The man who once wears them never goes back to the rigid and uncomfortable Derbies he has known before.

Made in shapes and proportions for men of all figures, and in four grades—$3, $3.50, $5 and $6.

Second floor, Ninth street.

JOHN WANAMAKER

BURGLAR'S FATAL LEAP.

Jumped from Third-Story Window—Discovery Accidental.

An investigation which detectives of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station happened to make yesterday afternoon into the case of an unconscious man found on West Sixty-first Street, led to the discovery of a daring attempt at burglary in which the burglar was fatally injured.

Patrolman Lyons was attracted by a crowd at Sixty-first Street and Columbus Avenue early in the afternoon and found an unconscious man lying on the sidewalk. Some people in the crowd said the man had fallen out of a window. An ambulance took him to Roosevelt Hospital, where it was found that his skull was fractured and his spine broken.

Capt. Cooney later, nothing the entry on the station blotter, detailed Detectives Doussis and Chapman to the case. They went to [illegible] and found that the man had entered the house by the window. They found that the man had entered the house by the window. They found that the man had entered the house by the window. They

TROOPS OVERAWE POLES; ARMED PEACE PREVAILS

Infuriated Workmen Threaten a General Strike.

MONDAY'S DEATH LIST NOW 62

Many Persons Were Beaten Into Insensibility—Jews in Southwest Russia in State of Panic.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, May 3.—Armed peace prevailed in Poland yesterday, following the savage events of May Day. Warsaw, Sosnowiec, Lodz, Kalisz, and other industrial centres saw no repetition of Monday's rioting and bloodshed, but order was maintained only by military force.

The first fruit of Monday's sowing is a formidable strike of angered workmen, which is spreading widely, setting free thousands of employes and increasing the difficulty of the authorities in preserving order. Long-continued industrial troubles, however, have impoverished Polish workingmen, and starvation will be an active ally of the Government in bringing about a resumption of work.

The Governor of Kalisz has issued a proclamation gravely denying "rumors concerning disturbances at Kalisz on Monday," and at the same time exhorting the people to be tranquil in order to "avoid further sacrifice of life."

Reports of the rioting at Warsaw tell of revolting cruelty on the part of the troops. People were driven into courtyards and beaten with the butts of rifles, some of them into insensibility. The limbs of some of the victims were broken.

The bomb thrown into a Cossack patrol near the Vienna Station, Warsaw, struck the head of a Cossack's horse, blowing the horse and rider to atoms and killing two other Cossacks and two women.

At Lodz workmen attacked the police with bombs and were charged by dragoons and Uhlans, who cut off the bomb throwers, drove them into a house, surrounded it, and then fired upon those inside, killing three persons and wounding many. In the same city a woman who was looking out of a window was shot by a Cossack.

According to reports from Kalisz the workmen there for a time had the upper hand of the police and gendarmerie, disarming and stoning them until they were rescued by cavalry.

While there were practically no disturbances yesterday in the Jewish cities of Southwestern Russia, dispatches today say that the people are in a state of panic.

The Droug, (Fiend,) a newspaper edited by M. Kroushevan, has appeared at Kishineff. Kroushevan was editor of the Kishineff Bessarabetz, articles in which, it has been charged, were largely responsible for the massacre of Jews in 1903.

The mill owners at Byelostok, Southwestern Russia, have fled in fear of their lives.

The official account of the bomb explosion here at 6 o'clock yesterday morning drolly attributes it to "experiments in chemistry," but it undoubtedly was one of those accidents, now of frequent occurrence, caused by Terrorists loading bombs.

WARSAW, May 2.—The May Day death roll totals sixty-two, including ten persons who died in the hospitals in the course of the night. Probably 200 were wounded.

Crowds gathered this morning at the Tenth District Police Station, where the bodies of thirty victims, men and women and three children, were awaiting identification. The crowds were dispersed by Cossacks.

Some minor disturbances occurred today in different sections of the city. All day long infantry and cavalry patrolled the streets, which were crowded with people, who denounced yesterday's slaughter.

The soldiers were evidently nervous, and open outbreaks resulting in a repetition of yesterday's terrible scenes were only averted by the evident desire of the authorities to prevent a clash, coupled with the fear inspired by the soldiers' bullets.

The population is most bitter against the military, and the Government officials expect many attempts at revenge upon the officers who commanded the troops yesterday, all of whom are known. Cossacks are patrolling the streets in companies on account of the danger to smaller detachments.

The Polish press is silent on the subject of yesterday's happenings. The official Russian paper prints a short and entirely accurate report. The Governor General of Warsaw is said to be greatly upset by the turn of affairs.

The Nationalists have arranged the usual demonstrations for to-morrow, the one hundred and fourteenth anniversary of the proclamation of the Polish Constitution, and disturbances are highly probable.

The workingmen are in an ugly and uncertain mood. The workmen in all the factories struck to-day. The committee of the Social Democratic Party of Poland and Lithuania issued a manifesto proclaiming an immediate general strike in consequence of yesterday's bloodshed.

The efforts to cause a general strike are not thought likely to succeed. The people have not yet recovered from the exhaustion and losses resulting from the last strike. Nevertheless the strikes inaugurated here and in other cities are rapidly spreading, and 75,000 persons are on strike in Lodz.

Reports conflict regarding the beginning of yesterday's encounter in Jerusalem Street. According to the most generally accepted version, the authorities had forbidden workmen marching in procession to carry red flags, but the workmen decided to ignore the order. When the procession reached Jerusalem Street the police ordered the workmen to stop, but they refused to do so, and a police officer thereupon fired a revolver, giving the signal for the infantry to fire.

During the encounter in Jerusalem Street the troops not only fired, but used the butts of their rifles and their bayonets and swords. Many women and children had their heads and limbs broken. Some of the injuries were of a terrible nature, and there were cases of the soldiers entering the courtyards of houses and attacking those hiding there.

When the troops fired after the bomb was thrown near the Vienna Railroad Station four persons were killed and seven were wounded. All the windows in the neighborhood were shattered.

At Kalisz, Russian Poland, in the course of a service in a church yesterday the congregation began singing patriotic songs, whereupon soldiers and police entered the building and attacked the people, wounding many of them. A free fight ensued, in which weapons were wrested from the police, shots were exchanged, and stones were thrown. A dragoon, a woman, and a man were killed inside the church.

A squadron of cavalry was summoned and dispersed the crowds. The church, having been defiled with blood, was closed for reconsecration.

There was an explosion in the police station of Minsk yesterday evening, following which a crowd fired on a detachment of troops. The troops returned the fire, killing many persons. Subsequently order was restored. There have been many arrests at Minsk.

TO MAKE ROJESTVENSKY GO?

French Admiral Starts from Saigon on Mysterious Errand.

TOKIO, May 2.—An uneasy feeling is again growing in Japan that the Russians are taking an unfair advantage of Indo-Chinese ports.

No doubt is felt regarding France's sincerity, but many reports indicate that Admiral Rojestvensky is abusing the hospitality of Russia's ally. It is incredible that he has been cruising for the past eleven days beyond territorial limits. He s evidently using anchorages access to which is inconsistent with any principle of strict neutrality.

The Japanese are showing much patience and forbearance, but naturally the situation is becoming daily more open to suspicion.

By The Associated Press.

SAIGON, May 2.—Rear Admiral de Jonquières, the French naval Commander here, sailed from Saigon to-day on the cruiser Guichen.

His destination was not announced, but it is presumed that the Admiral's departure is in connection with the preservation of French neutrality.

JAPAN NOT EXPECTING PEACE.

Newspapers Do Not Attach Weight to Intervention Rumors.

TOKIO, May 2.—In reference to the rumors of intervention in the cause of peace, Japanese journals, while fully appreciating the humane purpose of those who suggest it, consider that it would scarcely be possible to effect an arrangement insuring permanent peace unless Russia should approach Japan direct.

In view of the threats of Russian statesmen to wage a war of exhaustion it is declared that Japan's only course is to fight on with unflinching resolution.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 3.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says:

"The diplomatic representative of one of the great powers closely connected with the war states that it is undeniably true that President Roosevelt is endeavoring to make peace as soon as possible."

KISSED BY GEN. LINEVITCH.

Troops Drawn Up on Easter Day and Saluted by the General.

GUNSHU PASS, May 2.—There was a touching incident in the course of the Easter celebration here. After the morning service all the troops in the region around headquarters were drawn up in line before Gen. Linevitch's tent and the Commander in Chief came out, greeted the troops, and passed down the line saluting every soldier with a kiss.

All the men were much moved, and many of them wept. The incident served to increase their boundless worship of the gray old leader.

Gen. Linevitch continues energetically the reorganization of the various departments of the armies.

ENGLAND A SIEVE FOR US.

Balfour Says We Get the Good Aliens and She Gets the Rest.

LONDON, May 2.—The House of Commons reassembled to-day after the Easter recess.

The debate on the Aliens bill was commenced by Sir Charles Dilke, (Advanced Radical,) who opposed the measure and moved that it be rejected.

Joseph Chamberlain supported the bill as being a measure tending to keep out cheap labor. He said the bill was merely a step toward greater things. The principal reason for its introduction and support by the Ministerialists was that it was an effort to protect workingmen against the labor of foreigners. It would be but a small step between this bill and the bill which he hoped to see introduced shortly to prevent the goods these people made from coming into competition with those made in Great Britain.

Premier Balfour pointed out the moderation of the bill, which, he maintained, did not interfere with the right of asylum, and which expressly provided that poverty alone should not exclude aliens.

The Premier said the United States had shown a remarkable power of absorbing men of different nationalities and turning them all by a process of national alchemy into American citizens; but the absorbing power had limits.

It must be observed, the Premier continued, how foreign legislation, and especially that of the United States, had reacted upon Great Britain. Many aliens en route to the United States who were not provided with through tickets had remained here, and many of the unfit who had reached the United States had been returned to this country. Great Britain had become a sort of sieve which let through the fit to America, but retained the unfit. Unless something were done Great Britain must remain a sieve in which only the useless dregs were left.

Sir Charles Dilke's motion was rejected by 211 to 59 votes, and the bill was seconded without revision.

MODEST PROF. ROENTGEN.

Keeps Away from Congress to Celebrate Anniversary of Discovery.

BERLIN, May 2.—Prof. Röntgen is too modest to attend the international congress called to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the discovery of the Röntgen ray and to collate the latest applications and developments.

The congress opened here on Saturday, and the professor promised to be present, but in spite of this and although his name was on the programme, he said he simply could not attend the sessions, as it would be impossible for him to face the crowd which had gathered to glorify his work. Consequently the professor telegraphed his acknowledgments from Würzburg, Bavaria.

Dr. Charles Lester Leonard of Philadelphia, President of the American Röntgen Society, regards the congress as being of high value to the medical profession because the results attained by many eminent experimenters have been gathered together and made available for the physicians of the world.

Baron Kaneko Says Japan Will Depend on America.

MARKET FOR IRON AND GRAIN

Japan's Exports to This Country Include Millions of Dollars in Raw Silk and Tea.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Baron Kaneko of Japan has been making a brief visit to Washington, and left this evening for New York. His visit to the United States has been for the special purpose of studying economic conditions. The Baron said to-day:

"In the next five or ten years American trade with the Far East, particularly with Japan, will expand with enormous rapidity.

"The reason is plain. We have to depend on America for raw materials, and you have to depend on Japan for raw materials. Our cotton factories depend entirely upon American raw cotton. We must depend on you for tobacco leaf. We look to you for breadstuffs, for iron and steel, cast, bar, and sheet iron, and machinery. These things we cannot make in our country.

"On the other hand, we send you raw silk—you cannot raise it. We give you about $50,000,000 worth of tea each year. In other things which never compete we provide your country, and the balance of trade is carried out by this means.

"At present we cannot tell when the war will end, but sooner or later normal business conditions must return. We have spent enormous sums of money. We have had a great strain on our financial power. It will take four or five years for us to recover, and by that time the United States will have established a firm grasp on the East, since you have such low interest on your money, such tremendous money power and skillful business men. The United States will be the gainer, and you will have trade there pretty much your own way.

British Destroyer Lost.

CORK, May 2.—In the course of a torpedo attack at Berehaven last night the torpedo boat destroyer Syren ran on a reef at the eastern entrance of the harbor and remains on the rocks with her back broken.

The Syren was steaming at the rate of twenty-six knots an hour when she was wrecked. Her crew were taken off by other vessels of the flotilla and her guns and stores are being salved.

There is no hope of saving the Syren.

LOUBET RECEIVES McCORMICK

Speeches on Friendship Between America and France Made.

PARIS, May 2.—President Loubet received Ambassador McCormick at the Elysée Palace this afternoon. Mr. McCormick was accompanied by the entire staff of the American Embassy.

M. Loubet, who was accompanied by Foreign Minister Delcassé, received the American Ambassador in the Hall of the Ambassadors. After a cordial exchange of greetings, Mr. McCormick presented his credentials, and spoke of the century's friendship uniting France and the United States in an alliance more enduring than that of treaties. He referred also to the recent closer feeling of friendship between France and the mother country of Americans. These feelings of friendship, he said, were of the greatest benefit to commercial and pacific interests, which were those of the progressive world.

President Loubet, in replying, said France had no prouder heritage than her participation in the work which brought the powerful American Nation into being. More than a century's test had not been able to interrupt the friendship first established.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 3.—The correspondent at Paris of The Times comments upon the importance and significance of American Ambassador McCormick's address to President Loubet, and says his reference to the Anglo-French entente is perhaps one of the weightiest expressions of American feeling which has been forthcoming for some time past.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

The Great Solvent and Eliminator of URIC ACID and other POISONS.

"Doubly Efficient in Rheumatism and Gout, and an Important Corrective of Digestive Failures."

John V. Shoemaker, M. D., LL. D., Professor of Materia Medica and Therapeutics in the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, etc., in the New York Medical Journal, July 22, 1899: "The BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is doubly efficient in rheumatism and gout. It dissolves uric acid and phosphatic sediments, as well as other products difficult of elimination, while at the same time it exerts a moderately stimulant effect upon the renal cells and thereby facilitates the swift removal of insoluble materials from the body. Without such action insoluble substances will precipitate in the kidneys and bladder. The intense suffering produced by stone, together with consecutive pyelitis and cystitis, are avoided by prompt elimination. Unquestionably, although the speedy removal of uric acid and other products of faulty tissue change is of conspicuous benefit, yet to prevent their formation is a service still more important. This service is performed by the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER when it corrects those digestive failures which are responsible for the production of deleterious materials.

James L. Cabell, M. D., A. M., LL. D., Formerly Professor of Physiology and Surgery in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia, and President of the National Board of Health says: "The BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in Uric Acid Diathesis is a well-known therapeutic resource. It should be recognized by the profession as an article of Materia Medica."

Dr. Chas. G. Hill, Professor of Nervous and Mental Diseases, Baltimore Medical College, Baltimore, Md.: "In many forms of nervous exhaustion, accompanying an excess of urates and phosphates, it is invaluable."

Dr. J. T. DeBlanchard, Professor Montreal Clinic, SM., SN., V. U.: "I have used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in most obstinate cases of Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, in Stone in the Bladder, in Uric Acic Gravel, with the most efficacious results."

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER is for sale by Grocers and Druggists generally. Testimonials which defy all imputation or question sent to any address.

HIT ALDERMEN AGAIN OVER VETO BY MAYOR

Senate and Assembly Forward Pennsylvania's Programme.

STEINWAY TUNNEL SHELVED

Shifting Franchise Power Unconstitutional, Says Grady—Brackett, Breaking Ranks, Praises Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—The Senate backed up the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in its campaign against the Aldermen by passing, over Mayor McClellan's veto, to-day the Elsberg bills, which provide that authority over franchises shall be vested in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The vote was 33 to 15.

At the same time that the Elsberg bills were being considered in the Senate the Assembly passed the measures extending the time limit for construction of the New York Connecting Railway. It was the Aldermen's refusal to act upon this franchise that led the Pennsylvania to come to Albany with the proposition to curtail the powers of the board. The Assembly vote on extending time for the bridge was 82 to 43, and on extending time for the railway link 85 to 49. Mr. Palmer raised the point that bills giving away public property to private interests required 100 votes. Speaker Nixon ruled against him.

Shortly afterward the Assembly killed the Goodsell bills relating to the Steinway tunnel by sending them back to the Rules Committee. The Goodsell bills would have given the New York and Long Island Railroad Company the right to construct a tunnel under the East River at Forty-second Street and to connect with the Manhattan Subway system. Majority Leader Rogers said he had been informed that the bills were practically useless unless the Elsberg bill, now in Rules Committee, was passed.

Senator Brackett was the only Republican to vote against the bills taking the franchise power from the Aldermen. Senator McCarren, who voted for the bills when they were originally before the Senate, voted against them to-day. He explained that he had thought the change would expedite rapid transit for Brooklyn, but was willing to accept the Mayor's judgment that there would be even greater delay. Brackett's vote was a great surprise. It was the first instance this session of his taking issue with Elsberg. He said:

"I cannot vote to override the veto of the Mayor on these measures. I agree with him that the principle of the bills is wrong. The Common Council directly represents the people, and because there may be some fault to find with the manner in which they have exercised their powers is no reason why we should transfer those powers to a House of Lords. The next step will be to transfer the franchise giving power to a single individual.

"I want to say that the attempt, which it was generally understood at the commencement of the session was to be made, to put the Mayor in a hole has met with dismal failure. Instead of being put in a hole the Mayor in my judgment has climbed up a ladder.

"The Mayor has also been right on his Water bill."

Senator Grady said that it was not proper to abolish an office simply because an officer had been unfaithful. The same objections which had been urged against the Board of Aldermen could be urged with much more force against the Legislature.

"Judge John F. Dillon has given it as his opinion that these bills are flagrantly unconstitutional, and if you pass them you will never get the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to exercise the powers which this legislation seeks to confer upon it. I know that the Mayor will not, and I understand several of the other members of the board also will refuse. That will mean that all rapid transit improvements will stop."

Senator Elsberg contended that the bills violated no principle of home rule, but merely transferred from one city board to another powers which it was thought the latter board could more efficiently exercise. If the Board of Estimate refused to exercise the powers conferred upon it, the board could be compelled by mandamus proceedings.

"All right," Grady retorted, "that would suit us. The Board of Estimate would then be in a position to claim that the law is unconstitutional and might hold up the New York Connecting Railway franchise until the courts pass on this point. Mandamus proceedings could have been commenced just as well against the Board of Aldermen.

"But mandamus proceedings against the Board of Estimate will not be commenced if that board refuses to act. Oh, no; we will then be told that the thing to do is to transfer the franchise power to the State Railroad Commission and the Public Utilities Commission."

The Gardner bill to allow inspection of Grand Jury minutes, whereas no one now has access therto save the District Attorney, the Grand Jury, and the Justices, was passed in the Senate, 28 to 14. Brackett and McCarren led the fight for the bill. Cobb and Hinman opposing. Mr. Cobb said:

"There is something back of this bill. Somebody has been indicted and somebody is working for the quashing of that indictment. There is no public demand for this kind of legislation."

He moved to reconsider, but his motion was defeated.

The Armstrong bill to prevent docking horses' tails came within one vote of passing the Senate. Senator Armstrong read opinions from leading veterinarians of this country and England in which they called the practice "cruel, barbarous, and unnecessary." It was shown that 402 cases of tetanus had set in following the docking in a single wholesale operation.

Most Democrats voted for the bill. A number of the Senators own docked horses, and their arguments in private prevailed.

HALTS PURE ELECTIONS BILL.

Assembly Amendment May Have Shelved Measure for Session.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—Mr. Merritt, Second St. Lawrence, offered an amendment to the Brackett Corrupt Practices bill in the Assembly to-day whereby the provisions of the measure are extended to include newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals, so that wherever money is paid to any publication for support it must appear in the bill of particulars regarding election expenses to be filed by candidates. The amendment was adopted 75 to 51. The delay consequent upon insertion of the amendment and reprinting of the bill, it is feared, will kill the measure.

Mr. Merritt thought the bill might destroy the possibilities of "what we know as a political organization." He saw in the bill possibilities of blackmail. It would force all campaign transactions to be done by committees.

Mr. Palmer quoted President Roosevelt as favoring the widest publicity in regard to campaign expenses.

The bill making a unit of representation in Queens County Conventions the election district was passed, 86 to 35. Its object is to make a break in the power of Joseph Cassidy. The bill aroused the opposition of several Tammany men.

RAINES HOTEL BILL REPORT.

Applies to Structures More Than Thirty-five Feet High.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—Senator Raines this afternoon presented the report of the conference committee on the excise amendments aimed at the Raines law hotels. The bill compels certification of all hotels more than 35 feet in height by the Fire, Health, and Building Departments of the larger cities. The report was adopted. The licenses taken out yesterday cannot be affected this year. The Assembly amendments to which Mr. Raines objected were cut out.

The Saxe bill, pertaining to the Hotel St. Regis controversy, by which it is expected that the right of the hotel to maintain a bar will be confirmed, was advanced to third reading in the Senate.

Only six votes were recorded against the F. G. Whitney bill, amending the excise law, in the Assembly. An amendment, offered by Mr. Tompkins, striking out the penalty on druggists, was defeated, and the bill passed by a vote of 112 to 6. The measure provides that any druggist convicted of violation of the excise law shall forfeit his druggist's license for one year, in addition to his liquor license. It further provides that any person convicted of keeping a disorderly house, or of any felony, shall forfeit the excise license.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP BILL.

Mr. Hartman the Author of an Inclusive General Plan.

ALBANY, May 2.—Municipal ownership of public service corporations in all cities of the State is the essence of a measure introduced in the Assembly to-day by Mr. Hartman. The main provision of the bill follows:

"Every city of this State shall have power to own, construct, acquire, purchase, maintain, and operate gas, electric light, heat, and power plants and street railways within its corporate limits, and to lease the same or any part of the same to any company incorporated under the laws of this State for the purpose of operating street railways for any period not longer than twenty years, on such terms and conditions as the city counsel, Board of Aldermen, or corresponding municipal legislative body shall deem for the best interests of the public."

In each city the proposition must be submitted to popular vote, and afterward approved by the Board of Aldermen. It provides for the issue of "public service" certificates.

RAILROAD BOARD INCREASE.

Senate Passes Tully Bill to Enlarge State Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 2.—The Senate to-day passed the Tully bill increasing the Railroad Commission from three to five members by a vote of 29 to 12. Senators McEwan, Hinman, and Brown, Republicans, voted in the negative. Hawkins, Dem., voted for the bill.

There was scarcely any discussion. On the roll call, Senator Grady said that there was absolutely no good reason to be urged for the increase.

"Since the railroad companies must pay the freight, you might as well increase the commission to fifteen," he added.

Bills Signed by Governor.

ALBANY, May 2.—Gov. Higgins to-day signed a measure designed to protect secret fraternities from the unauthorized conferring of their degrees and the solicitation by unauthorized persons of applicants for degrees, secrets, or membership in such fraternities. He also signed:

Senator Brackett's bill, designed to relieve the Legislature of a large number of escheat bills.

Senator Hill's, requiring the owners of vessels operating on inland waters to pay for inspection of their vessels by the State.

CITY'S CLAY GARDEN MOLD.

Engineer Says It Is Harmful—Controller May Hold Up Bills.

Controller Grout has received from Merritt H. Smith, principal assistant engineer of his department, a report relative to the charge that the city was not being fairly dealt with under the contract it had made for the furnishing and delivering of 10,000 cubic yards of garden mold for the Park Department in the Borough of Manhattan.

It was charged that this material, which was to be used as a top covering in portions of Central Park, was not really garden mold, but had been taken from cellar excavations on the east side, and was more clay than anything else, and that instead of improving the condition of the soil where it was placed it really harmed it.

Mr. Smith finds these complaints to be true, and says that the only way to get a satisfactory quality of garden mold is to place an Inspector, not at the place where the mold is delivered, but at the point where it is obtained. As a result Mr. Grout undoubtedly will hold up the bills of the contractor unless the specifications are complied with.

AGED MISSIONARIES BARRED.

Immigration Authorities Exclude Deformed Murray and Blind Wife.

Unless Secretary Metcalf of the Department of Commerce and Labor comes to the aid of Mr. and Mrs. George Murray, two aged missionaries who have been barred by the local immigration authorities, they will have to give up a lecturing tour on which their hearts have been set for years. They arrived on Sunday, cabin passengers, on an Anchor liner and were excluded by the authorities on the ground of liability to become public charges, through physical infirmities.

Mrs. Murray is totally blind, and both her husband's feet are deformed. For almost a quarter of a century they have been engaged in missionary work in Palestine, where Mrs. Murray lost her sight. They came here to give a number of lectures on the Holy Land. Mr. and Mrs. Murray have appealed to the Federal authorities in Washington.

SUBWAY EARNING 10 PER CENT

Controller Says So—City Gets Interest Check for $363,877.87.

A check for $363,877.87, representing the city's share of the interest on the $35,000,000 of rapid transit bonds, less deductions and interest on the contractor's bond of $1,000,000, was sent to the Controller yesterday by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. It was received as a payment on account and subject to the figures to come from the experts. Controller Grout, however, said that there would be very little variance from the figures as set out by the Interborough.

If the Interborough earns 5 per cent. to the end of the year the city will receive an extra 1 per cent. on the bonds for sinking fund purposes. Mr. Grout said yesterday that there was little doubt that the city would receive this sum, as the Subway was now earning nearly 10 per cent.

FAGAN IRON WORKS BURNED.

Owner, ex-Mayor of Hoboken, on Board Kaiser Which Will Dock To-day

Three alarms were turned in last evening for a fire at the Fagan Iron Works, on Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, between Coles and Monmouth Streets, Jersey City, and the entire plant was destroyed. It consisted of a foundry, storehouse, and pattern shop, and more than 3,000 patterns were burned. There was no one in the building at the time but the watchman, the workmen having quit at 5:30, and the fire started in the foundry while the watchman was on duty in one of the other buildings.

The damage to the building and machinery was placed by Mr. Fagan at $60,000, but an official of the company said that with the patterns destroyed the loss would be much greater.

The head of the firm is Lawrence Fagan, ex-Mayor of Hoboken. He has been in Europe all Winter, and is aboard the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which reached port late last night, but will not dock until this morning.

45-CENT SUIT FAILS.

Government, at Great Expense, Defeats Miss Goodwin.

It was determined officially yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers that Miss Mary M. Goodwin of Boston cannot recover the sum of 45 cents exacted as duty by the Collector of Customs at Bangor, Me., on a souvenir spoon of American manufacture returned from Newfoundland.

It appears from the evidence taken in the case that Miss Goodwin, following an annual custom, sent a souvenir spoon to a niece who resides at St. John's. The donor specified that if the spoon in question did not match other articles of a similar nature it might be returned. This was done, and when the spoon reached Bangor on its way back to this country the Collector levied 45 cents duty on the article, on the ground that it was imported from a foreign country.

Miss Goodwin paid the duty, but immediately filed a protest with the Board of Appraisers asking for a review of the Collector's action. Judge Waite of the customs tribunal and John A. Kemp, counsel to the board for the Treasury Department, went to Boston, where Miss Goodwin appeared at a hearing and requested the board to order the Collector to return to her the 45 cents. She said that, as the spoon was of American manufacture, no duty should have been levied on it. She let it be inferred that she needed the money more than the United States.

General Appraiser Hay, in an opinion written for the General Board yesterday, denies her claim. It is possible that Miss Goodwin will carry the case to the Federal Circuit Court. The litigation has already cost the Government several hundred dollars.

MASKED ROBBER BAND RAID A COUNTRY BANK

Blow Open "Burglar Proof" Safe and Get Over $5,000.

TOWNSPEOPLE IN PURSUIT

Thieves Fire at Following Inhabitants of Gilbertsville and Escape with Aid of Stolen Teams.

ONEONTA, N. Y., May 2.—A band of masked robbers drove into the village of Gilbertsville, about eighteen miles from here, at 3 o'clock this morning, blew open with dynamite a safe in the private bank of E. C. Brewer, and made good their escape with booty estimated at between $5,000 and $10,000.

When the startled villagers were awakened by the muffled roar of the explosion and had been halted by the pistol fire of the retreating bandits, they found that the robbers had completely isolated Gilbertsville from the outside world by cutting all the telegraph and telephone wires. Efforts to communicate with neighboring towns were futile, and when the village folk finally started in pursuit, the robbers had gained a lead which could not be made up.

Teams which had been stolen from barns and used by the robbers in their approach to the village and their subsequent flight were found abandoned by the roadside. Daylight found the bandits not far from Gilbertsville, and it is believed they then left the highway and went into the woods afoot. The woods are being searched.

It is believed there were five men in the band. That all were heavily armed was shown by the frequency of their fire when the first of the villagers arrived in the vicinity of the bank. The men first pried open the front door of the bank. Two holes were then drilled into the heavy steel doors of the newly installed "burgair-proof," safe, and into these the explosive was inserted. The explosion wrecked the safe and shattered every window in the building. Portions of the safe were found many yards from the building.

The robbers gathered up all the money they could find and started on a run just as the first of the awakened villagers reached the scene. Plans for pursuit were quickly made. Postmaster W. S. Root and C. P. Root, his brother, started for Mount Upton, the nearest railroad station, six miles away. They had gone but half a mile when they came upon a team hitched to a telegraph pole. One of the horses had become entangled in the harness and thrown himself. The robbers apparently had made an attempt to right the harness in the darkness, but finally abandoned the effort and made off. The team proved to have been stolen from a neighboring barn.

Continuing on their way, Postmaster Root and his brother came upon a one-horse surrey near Mount Upton. An axle of the vehicle was broken, and a short distance away was the horse, belonging to a farmer in the vicinity and taken from his barn during the night.

It is believed that after this vehicle failed them the robbers made their way into the woods, as no further trace of them could be found.

BINGHAMTON, May 2.—It is certain that three of the men who committed the Gilbertsville robbery are the professional Post Office and bank burglars who blew open the safe of the Post Office at Port Dickinson, adjoining this city, ten days ago. The three men were seen at Mount Upton this morning, where a description of them was obtained. The men have committed many daring burglaries in this vicinity during the past few weeks.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS MEET.

Will Elect State Deputy and National Delegates To-day.

The tenth annual State Convention of the Knights of Columbus began yesterday in the Hotel Astor. Delegates, seated and alternate, to the number of about 1,000 presented credentials.

The first function of the convention was attendance at a solemn high mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Archbishop Farley welcomed the delegates.

There are many candidates for the position of delegates to the National Convention, and it is expected that at the election to-day there will be spirited balloting. A State Deputy also will be chosen.

A committee of delegates escorted Police Commissioner McAdoo to the convention hall. The Mayor was invited, but as he could not attend he named Commissioner McAdoo to represent him.

"You are welcome to this town," said the Commissioner, in closing his address, "despite its critics and professional disparagers; to this city whose philanthropy, honesty, and charity are only equaled by the colossal proportions of its great wealth."

After the session the delegates visited the American Museum of Natural History, in Central Park. Last night they went in a body to the Lyric Theatre, and to-day they will visit Ellis Island. A ball will be given to-night at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory, Sixty-eighth Street and Broadway.

It developed yesterday that there are four open candidates for the position of State Deputy—John P. O'Brien; the present State Deputy, Francis D. Thorne; Dr. John G. Coyle of New York, and John Mannion of Buffalo.

The report of State Deputy Francis D. Thorne shows that the membership of the order in New York State is 35,859.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., May 2.—This was Virginia Day at Hampton Institute. Robert C. Ogden and his guests spent the morning at the Whittier School, where the higher grade students act as instructors of the poor colored children of the neighborhood, gaining under experts the experience they will need when they go out upon their missions of teaching in the rural regions of the black belts of the Southern States.

The Trustees of Hampton, with Mr. Ogden's guests, assembled at noon to review the parade of the Indian and negro boy and girl students. They marched past them headed by the very competent band of the institute, the young men in military uniform and the girls, who marched even better than their brothers, in white gowns. After the review the students marched into the great dining hall, where they sang grace. The visitors were then conducted to the Cleveland Hall for luncheon.

At 2 o'clock the students, headed by their brass band, marched to the gymnasium, where the exercises were opened with prayer. The students sang plantation melodies. The Indians sang the weird but charming melodies of their fathers. After addresses by graduates John Graham Brooks discussed the race problem, which, he said, probably was the hardest with which the world had to deal. The solution must be in the industrial-educational work of Hampton, the students of which had become centres of hope for the colored race, building comfortable homes, teaching the others to do likewise, and showing them how to make the best of the soil they cultivated.

Booker T. Washington received an ovation when he stood up to speak. "This is an occasion of the greatest encouragement and satisfaction," he said. "There have been those who for forty years have predicted war in the South between the races, but there has been no such war. There is a war, and that is waged against ignorance, crime, and immorality. The races should get together, as in the days when the Lees went with their Bibles to teach colored children in the Sunday schools. Fitzhugh Lee was always sympathetic and helpful to the colored man. The Southern colored men grieve over his death as deeply as do the white men of the South.

"The people of this country should be patient with my people while they are passing through the period of their progress. We are largely servants, and the first thing in progress must be that we should be good servants. The nearest way to the heart of any one is through good cooking. One of the objections urged against universal education has been that when all the negroes are educated there will be no servants. An educated servant is the best servant for educated people."

In the evening at the Cleveland Hall services were held in memory of Alexander Purves, who was Treasurer of Hampton Institute.

ELLIS ISLAND CONTRACTS.

Competition for the Catering, Baggage and Money Changing Rights.

The scores of representatives of banking houses, express companies, and caterers who have been haunting the immigration building at Ellis Island for the last two weeks seeking figures upon which to base bids for the privileges of feeding immigrants and Government employes, transferring the immigrants' baggage, and exchanging their foreign money, made an exodus yesterday, and to-day the bids will be opened at Washington by Commissioner General Frank P. Sargent. Three-year contracts are to be awarded.

The number of bidders has been without precedent. It is believed, as more than 300 copies of the specifications have been applied for. The keenest contest is expected over the restaurant contract, which is at present held by Hudgins & Dumas. That firm is confident that the privilege will remain where it is, citing the opinions of the five or six hundred employes on the island that they "don't want to become boarding house wrecks," and are satisfied with their restaurant as it is.

Holder Hudgins of the firm will also place before the Washington officials the records of the restaurant in conforming its menu to the various religious observances maintained by the immigrants. On American holidays the bills of fare have been enlarged by the addition of turkey, plum pudding, &c., without cost to the immigrants.

A TAMMANY THUNDERBOLT.

Alderman Haggerty Wants a Salary Cut—Amazement in the Board.

Alderman Haggerty caused a sensation at the meeting of the board yesterday and disturbed the usual quiet of the routine by introducing a resolution reducing the salary of one of the men in a city department. This is the first move in that direction since Tammany came into power.

Before Alderman Haggerty had a chance to state fully the purport of his resolution, Alderman Myers objected. Alderman Myers always objects to anything emanating from the Tammany side.

"But this is a resolution reducing a salary," said Haggerty.

"What?" gasped Myers. "Say that again."

Mr. Haggerty explained. It seems that Charles Benn, the auditor and chief bookkeeper of the Department of Corrections, who died a month ago, had for years received a salary of $3,600. In appointing his first assistant to the place Mr. Lantry fixed the new man's salary at $3,000 and so reported to the board of Estimate.

When it became the turn of Alderman Downing, from Dewey's district, to vote he opposed the resolution, saying that he

POLICE AND BURGLARS BATTLE IN HALLWAY

THIEVES ARE WELL ARMED

Cartridges, Money, and Mask Hidden in Clothes—One Prisoner Thought to be Former Soldier.

Two burglars, who gave the police of the Tenderloin Station a stiff fight before being captured in a hallway of 387 Sixth Avenue at an early hour yesterday morning, were later held by Magistrate Whitman in Jefferson Market Court for Special Sessions in $3,000 bail each.

The two men, who said they were Joseph Martin, nineteen years old, and William B. Davenport, twenty-nine years old, who is thought to have done army service in the Philippines, are believed to be two dangerous Westerners.

Shortly after midnight Policeman Dwyer noticed three men loitering around the door at 387 Sixth Avenue. The offices there are occupied by a dentist and a haberdasher. The men walked toward Broadway and Dwyer resumed his patrol. When he returned, trying the doors as he went along, he noticed that the outer door at No. 387 was ajar and a faint light glimmering inside. Dwyer had a glimpse of two men working at the inner door with a "jimmy."

The policeman silently stepped back, and, meeting a newsboy, told him to run to the corner and tell Policeman Murphy to come along quickly.

As the boy started off a whistle sounded from the opposite side of the avenue. Dwyer saw the men inside the doorway start and listen and guessed that an accomplice had sounded a warning. Dwyer sprang into the hallway just as the inner door fell open under the "jimmy," and, single-handed, engaged the two men. It was pitch dark and he was having a hard time of it when Murphy arrived to assist him. The policemen used their night sticks while the burglars used their "jimmies." No shots were fired, as each man was on the alert to prevent his opponent from reaching his revolver. The fight lasted in the dark hallway for over five minutes, and the silence was broken only by the panting of the men and the occasional thud of a blow that went home.

The fight might have lasted for an hour, as the men were evenly matched, had not Detective Keenan of the Tenderloin Station been alarmed and gone to the rescue. The burglars, not without some further fighting, were overpowered and dragged to the sidewalk.

An electric lamp and a patent "jimmy" were found on Davenport, while each man had a loaded revolver. A round of cartridges was found sewn in the lining of Davenport's coat. Tied around his knee was a small silk band with a pocket in it containing a fifty-dollar bill and more cartridges. Inside Martin's shirt the police found a black silk mask.

THE PRESIDENT AND THE STRIKERS.

On the day which brings from Chicago the news that the strikers there are in an uglier mood, that the rioting in the streets of the city is more open and vicious, and the attacks on non-union men more frequent and daring than at any other time since the beginning of the trouble, the announcement is made in a dispatch from Glenwood Springs, Col., that President ROOSEVELT "has agreed to give the striking teamsters an opportunity to present their petition when he arrives in Chicago on May 10." According to Chicago dispatches in which the story of the deliberations, of the intentions, and of the violent doings of the striking teamsters has been set forth, they had it in mind to ask the President to intervene as he intervened in the anthracite miners' strike, and to request him to persuade the employers to agree to arbitration. It is added in the Glenwood Springs dispatch that the President "has given the strikers no encouragement other than agreeing to receive a delegation from them should an audience be requested."

Law-abiding persons in the City of Chicago will be glad to hear that the President has given the strikers no encouragement. They deserve none, and the activity with which they are carrying on private war against the business of Chicago indicates that they need none. They are already doing what they can do and what they dare do to create a condition of anarchy. In order to determine whether the President was under any obligation to receive a committee of the strikers or whether he was warranted in agreeing to receive their representatives and listen to their petition some little knowledge of the origin and progress of the strike is required. It is a "sympathy" strike. The garment workers were having some trouble, and the Teamsters' Association, made up of men who drive trucks, delivery wagons, and do teaming of all sorts, undertook to render aid. The trouble has spread until now there is a general strike of teamsters throughout the city. The Employers' Teaming Association in attempting to break the strike brought in non-union drivers upon whom, according to their wont and custom, the strikers proceeded to make murderous attacks. The non-union strikers were beaten, stoned, mauled, and have been in many cases disabled by serious injuries. The property of business houses employing teamsters has also been injured or destroyed. Street riots are of daily occurrence, and have often proved to be beyond the power of the police to quell. Last week Judge KOHLSAAT issued an injunction prohibiting interference with the teams of the Employers' Teaming Association. This injunction has been disobeyed in many instances. The Employers' Association has now armed its teamsters with rifles, carried openly in order to avoid violation of the ordinance against concealed weapons.

The Chicago Tribune makes a timely though novel application of the cry used by both parties in the late municipal ownership campaign that "the city owns the streets." The city, that is, the people of the city, are not now permitted to use the streets, it appears. The riotous strikers by their acts of intimidation and violence deter private citizens from going about their lawful concerns in the city's highways, and manufacturers and merchants are almost altogether prevented from carrying on their business wherever it involves the use of trucks or teams. It is the opinion of The Tribune that if there are not enough policemen the militia should be called out, and if militia protection is inadequate then the National Government should be appealed to to protect the citizens of Chicago in the exercise of their lawful rights.

It is in such a controversy that the President in a measure becomes involved by consenting to listen to one of the parties to it and receive their petition. Mr. ROOSEVELT'S intervention in the anthracite strike was regarded with grave misgiving by the friends of law and order. The belief that his action in that controversy gave aid and comfort to strike agitators and encouragement to the striking spirit has perhaps not diminished with the lapse of time. It is possible that he consented to receive and listen to the persons who are making a battleground of the streets of Chicago before he was fully informed of the nature of their acts. But he could lay claim to a fine or of the merit of their cause. He may not have known that twelve of the labor leaders active in the teamsters' strike were indicted by the Grand Jury of Cook County on Saturday last. The indictments were found for conspiracy to do illegal acts, and among the men indicted are President DOLD of the Chicago Federation of Labor, President SMYTH of the Coal Teamsters' Union, President SHEA of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and many business agents of the teamsters' unions in the various trades. The right to petition for a redress of grievances is one that persons under indictment and persons engaged in rioting or in the commission of murderous assaults upon peaceable workingmen may not claim as a matter of right. But the main question involved is not one of propriety—it is whether the President's consent to receive them will encourage the strikers to further and more ferocious assaults upon the non-union teamsters.

ALDERMANIC DESUETUDE.

The Elsberg bill transferring the power to grant franchises from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment was passed by the Senate yesterday over the Mayor's veto. It is expected and it is certainly to be hoped that the Assembly will take like action. The fact that by rumor or direct accusation the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is represented to be an ardent supporter of this measure does not, in our judgment, in any appreciable degree diminish its merits or furnish a sufficient reason for deserving its defeat. The attitude of the Pennsylvania Railroad toward any public question or any project of legislation is a matter of merely temporary concern. The taking away from the Board of Aldermen of the right to demand bribe money from every corporation seeking a franchise in this city is a matter of permanent interest and concern to the people of New York. A good bill is not made bad by the fact that among its supporters is a corporation actuated by interested motives or employing improper methods.

That the passage of the Elsberg bill is desirable and demanded by considerations of public welfare would be admitted, we suppose, by a large majority of intelligent observers of the manner in which the Board of Aldermen has exercised its power over franchises. Some years ago after long labors we had the Aldermen reduced to a condition of "innocuous desuetude." Deluded by finespun theories about a municipal legislature with large powers in which it would be the ambition of the chief men of the city to sit, the makers of the charter most improvidently restored to the Board the powers we had one by one withdrawn from it. The opponents of this feature of the charter were promptly justified by the Aldermen, who ever since the consolidation have been behaving after the manner of their kind. It is no valid argument against the bill that its passage is desired by interests that would cheerfully buy franchises of the Aldermen. Just so long as the Aldermen have the power to grant or to withhold franchises they will continue to insist on being bribed, and human nature being what it is, and the ardent desire of men and of corporations to do business and carry through their undertakings being also what it is, bribes will be paid for the passage of franchises. Indeed, by continuing this function of the Board the city makes bribery practically the inevitable condition of franchise granting. That is not good public policy, it is not good morals, it is not even decency. Irrespective of what this or that corporation may think of the bill the public welfare demands this diminishment of the Aldermanic powers.

A DISCREDITED JUDGE.

It is intimated from Albany that Justice HOOKER of the Supreme Court may resign rather than stand trial on the recommendation of the committee of the Legislature that he be removed by joint resolution. We should say that resignation would be best for him, and would gain for him the only consideration that public opinion can possibly now accord him, a recognition of the fact that he had saved the State the trouble and expense of his removal.

In saying this we do not think we can fairly be charged with prejudging or in any degree prejudicing the case of the Judge. There really cannot be said to be any reasonable doubt as to the facts. They have been carefully and impartially examined, and the report which finds them sufficient ground for recommending his removal is signed by all the active members of the committee. Should the Judge elect to ask for a hearing before the Legislature, the only basis of any hope that he would not be removed is the doubt as to whether the Legislature would think that his offenses come within its jurisdiction. That doubt is very slight. As to his committal of the offenses, there is no doubt whatever. Nor is there the slightest doubt that the offenses were serious and disgraceful. Admitting that they were not committed in his capacity as a Judge and that therefore he may not legally be removed on account of them, it still remains true that they were the acts of a greedy, unscrupulous man, and that they "show a personal unfitness in him to occupy the position of Justice of the Supreme Court." It is nothing less than outrageous that a man of this sort should be on the bench of any court. If he will not resign, he must be got rid of at any cost of time or money or trouble. But he could lay claim to a fine and lingering sense of decency if he should resign.

THE CORRUPT PRACTICES BILL.

We suppose that the amendment of the Corrupt Practices bill in the Assembly yesterday will cause fatal delay and defeat the bill for this session. We regret it exceedingly, for the bill is a very important and very practical measure for the suppression of a great evil. There had been a marked sentiment of approval of the bill aroused throughout the State, and there was pretty good reason to expect that it would become a law. It is, however, encouraging that the bill should have made as much progress as it did. We assume that it will unquestionably be brought in again next year. Meanwhile it can need only a fair understanding of its purpose and effect to awaken a completely effective opinion in its support.

State pride should be sufficient to secure this step in advance. Fifteen years ago New York set the example of adopting a law for the suppression of corrupt practices, which was followed in other States. It has done nothing since, while fifteen other States have advanced to the point fixed in the bill now before the Legislature. This is based on the principle of publicity—real and detailed publicity—which has worked admirably in Massachusetts, in Missouri, in California, and, to less degree, in other States. Briefly stated, the provisions of the bill require that no person shall spend any money to secure a nomination or an election, except for certain defined personal expenses, save through a political committee charged with the matter, and that every such committee shall keep a careful account of all moneys received and the sources thereof and of all expenditures made and the purposes of such expenditures, and these accounts shall be filed with designated public officers, who shall inspect them, and if they are insufficient shall take legal steps to require their completion. Failure to comply with any obligation imposed on candidates, committees, their agents, public officials, or individuals is punishable by fine and imprisonment. In the case of a candidate elected to office, such offense works forfeiture of his office.

This is all there is to the bill. It is simply a measure to turn on the light. It is in line with the most intelligent thought on the subject in this country and in England. It is fully justified by experience. It is the measure that was proposed by President ROOSEVELT to the Congress of the United States. If it be adopted by the State of New York, there is little doubt that it will be adopted generally throughout the country and its adoption by Congress would be greatly promoted.

COLUMBIA'S $500,000.

The unknown benefactor who has given Columbia half a million dollars for "the college" is very unlike the majority of munificent millionaires in hiding his name, and doing his munificence in such a stealthy and surreptitious way. It is very likely, however, that the name is only temporarily withheld, and will be brought out with due honors at Commencement. There will be no dispute that, not merely for its immediate usefulness in accommodation, but also for its furtherance of the "college spirit," the lack of which has been deplored for Columbia, and which is so difficult to foster in so huge a town, the new building with its immediate neighbors will be one of the most valuable of the university's educational agencies.

It is also true that Columbia is in need of all the benefactions that any of her friends may be disposed to bestow upon her. New Yorkers in general have a very inadequate notion of how the scope and ambitiousness of the university's schemes, and with them the exigencies of her pecuniary requirements, have expanded within the past few years and since she became a real university. Prof. GOLDWIN SMITH, a witness of undoubted expertness, has advanced the opinion that it is not the small colleges but the great universities that are really most in need of help. Having become, as he puts it, "instead of a gymnasium of culture, an emporium of knowledge, a very large staff and very expensive outfit are required." There is no danger at all that an institution with the aims that Columbia has acquired will be overendowed, no matter how many times such gifts as that she has just received may be multiplied.

THE RIGHT OF DIVIDENDS.

The statement prepared by the Consolidated Gas Company in opposition to the bills prepared by the Stevens committee contains the following suggestive sentence: "Of course the company is entitled to earn and pay dividends on its gas investments."

Of course. So far as we are aware no community has ever objected to a corporation engaged in conducting an important public utility earning and paying satisfactory dividends upon its investment. But public opinion does not recognize, and has never recognized, the right of a corporation to earn dividends on two dollars for every one dollar of its investment. The evidence taken by the Stevens committee led to the conclusion that the lighting business in New York has been enormously overcapitalized; that the franchises on which this overcapitalisation was based are in many instances of doubtful value or no value at all, and that the fixed charges in consequence of this overcapitalisation are excessive. From the point of view of the holder of gas securities who has acquired them by purchase, what they paid for them may be considered as gas investments; but it does not follow that the company has the right to tax consumption enough to pay dividends upon such securities if they represent nothing but arbitrary increases of capitalization, primarily designed to permit the original investors to get their money back while retaining securities of greater value than those originally purchased by them. The fact that on such inflated issues of interest or dividend bearing securities dividends or interest can be earned would seem to show that plant and franchises together are worth what they are capitalized at; but whether the unearned increment of franchise values due to municipal progress and the growth of population does not in part, at least, belong to the community is the one troublesome question which the advocates of the municipalization of public utilities are pressing for an answer, and which admits only of a very different answer from that which the corporations are willing to give.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Mourning a Lost Delusion.

Somebody down in Pittsburg has been making several remarks—intended to be very solemn and moral, but really pathetic or amusing, according to the point of view—on the use of translations in the study of the classic authors. "In my day," is the familiarly preteristic beginning, "it was thought dishonest to use a 'crib' or a 'pony' or a 'trot,' or whatever you please to call it. Now I am told that the use of such books is accepted and even condoned by professors, and that it is impossible for a boy to get through college without the aid of one. So much the worse for the boy and for the college, it seems to my old-fashioned ideas. But, after all, if it be true that the use of a key or a translation is recognized by the teacher, and that, as I am told, he makes allowance for it in giving out the lessons the boys are to study, then I can only say that the boy cheats no one so much as himself—unless it may be the weak-minded parent who sends him to college, under the mistaken impression that he will work out his own translations instead of 'lifting' them from a 'trot.'" It is quite true that in other days the student who lightened the labor of "getting out" his Latin or Greek by utilising a translation was considered dishonest by his instructors, and, indeed, he usually was so, since the practice was sternly forbidden in most colleges, and in them the student's tacit agreement and explicit pretense were to avail himself of no such assistance. Then, as now to a considerable degree, there prevailed the curious delusion that there was "mental discipline" or some other mysterious advantage in looking up a word in the dictionary—an advantage utterly lost when the meaning of the word was acquired in any other way—and that the easier the other way was the wickeder it was held to be. That is to say, work was done for work's sake, without any particular regard to whether the results were good or bad, and the classics of ancient literature were treated as mere exercises in grammar. As a consequence, a large majority of the virtuous boys never gained even a suspicion that the books they "read" had a single gleam of human interest, and the boys not virtuous entered upon a deliberate course of petty criminality which left them injured instead of benefited by what was in itself a demonstration of sound common sense. A select few were bold enough to steer between the two reefs of the dictionary and the translation, and, realising the true nature of the classics and the true object of studying them, arrived at a comprehension of their authors by what was at once the easiest and best path. Using instead of abusing translations, they acquired a facility which the abject slaves of the dictionary never gained. There has been an improvement in this matter of recent years, and the present tendency is to ask the student what he knows and can do, instead of how much dismal drudgery he has performed to the waste of the most precious part of a life. And yet people like this Pittsburg person will lament the decrease of student honesty, and sigh for the days when stupidity reigned almost supreme.

Hunting Suits for Church Wear.

We are waiting with some impatience to hear just what impression the President created when he and the members of his party attended church on Sunday, dressed in hunting togs that showed all the usual effects of vehement activity in a rough country. According to the dispatches, ours as well as others, the distinguished worshippers presented an appearance so distinctly "Western" that the assembled ranchmen and their wives were filled with joy and enthusiasm, and, forgetful of the place and time, indulged in vociferous cheers. The cheering, presumably, we must admit, and yet we are compelled to suspect that the joy and enthusiasm had an underpinning of grief—possibly of resentment. For it is to be noted that the Presidential party did not present an appearance distinctly "Western," but one distinctly incongruous with "Western" ideas as illustrated by the resident members of the congregation. For the latter were all dressed in their excellent best, differing in no obvious respects from the best of the East, and it really was not the most tactful of compliments to join in their devotions without paying the usual regard to the usual conventionalities of civilized life. It was said, and no doubt truly, that the President and his friends wore what they did at that interesting service because they had nothing else to wear, but with their large facilities for transportation there was nothing to prevent them, if they had chosen to be thoughtful, from carrying along one suit of sightly raiment for each in anticipation of emergencies easy to foresee, and we are convinced that if they had done so the effect produced would have been much better, both immediately and after the natives had taken a second thought. The orator who once ventured to address a Bowery audience in his shirt-sleeves was made to realise that he had made a serious mistake. That the President was saved from the same realization in an analogous case is presumably due to the fact that the West can afford to ignore the little slips of strangers and is too courteous to see offense where none is intended.

Can Trees Act as Elevators?

A controversy, the queerness of which lies in the fact that its subject is one upon which there should be no difference of opinion, has been started down in Macon, Mo., by a lawyer, who gravely told of a cottonwood tree which as it grew had lifted high in air a big stone lodged among its branches by a blast fired in 1897. The spectacle of the stone, according to the lawyer, was received with as much interest and respect as the narrator's evident good faith made it seem to deserve—was, that is, until somebody who had at least a glimmer of knowledge as to the way trees grow, saw fit to consult some of the local experts. They admitted that the rock was in the tree, and that a blast put it there, but the gradual elevation, of course, they denied. "The branches of the tree," said one of them, a civil engineer, "have lengthened in eighteen years, and the trunk has increased in size, but the stone has not moved an inch. Drive a nail in the trunk of a young tree, and in ten years it will occupy the same distance from the ground. Engineers working along river bottoms make record markings on tree trunks, knowing they will preserve their exact altitude throughout the years, though the trees may have towered considerably higher than when blazed by the axe. The sap courses through the limbs and extends the branches, but it only widens out the trunk." Some people cannot or will not recognize the truth when they hear it, and the engineer's decision was not accepted by all of the Maconians. The most vehement of the doubters made a dozen bets with him, which the clerk of the Circuit Court has duly recorded, that a stone which they solemnly placed in the fork of a young tree will get nearer the sky before an agreed number of years can pass. Whether the lawyer who started the dispute has risked any money on his own contention is not stated, and if he hasn't he must be having a lot of quiet fun.

FITCH'S GRAVE UNMARKED.

Still a Chance for the Country to Do Honor to His Memory.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of the interest taken in the approaching centennial of the application of steam to the propulsion of boats by Fulton, it is interesting to know that the United States Government concedes the priority of such application to John Fitch, having inscribed his name on the walls of the Congressional Library at Washington among the great inventors.

Writers in your columns have spoken of a pictorial description of the first trip of John Fitch's boat on the Collect Pond here in New York, where now stands the Tombs Prison. Such a picture hangs on the walls of the Van Cortlandt manor house in Van Cortlandt Park, now under the control of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The principal difficulty with John Fitch was unquestionably that which interferes to-day with the plans of those not in possession of a "political pull."

John Fitch lies in an unmarked spot in a neglected graveyard at Bardstown, Ky., while Robert Fulton's monument is in Trinity Churchyard, New York City, beside the grave of Alexander Hamilton, and thus the cynosure of the thousands who visit that hallowed spot. It is not too late to link together the names of John Fitch and Robert Fulton now that the centennial of practical steamboating approaches. E. W. F.

BAD ENGLISH OF TEACHERS.

A Horrible Example from a New York High School.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to a letter signed "Citizen" in this morning's TIMES, with regard to the poor English used by some of the teachers of the city, I beg to inform you that not very long ago an evening high school teacher of English—who is also a B. A., and, I believe, a day high school teacher—came with his pupils into the room where I was sitting, and, before half the pupils were in the room, he began talking about the development of the paragraph by illustration and by various other "ations," his idea evidently being to imitate those peripatetic philosophers of old and (incidentally) to show off.

And he did show off. His language was about as follows: "If you had done everything you could to obtain something you wanted, and then was to say * * * You've all met those kind of people."

I am in a quandary as to how it is that a man speaking so incorrectly can obtain a position as teacher of English in a high school of New York City.

Meaning of Inspiration.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"W. K." states in yesterday's paper that infallibility has no foundation in the Bible itself. There is no higher authority on the subject than Christ, and His numerous quotations from it show that He was thoroughly acquainted with it, and He says in St. John x., 35, "And the Scripture cannot be broken." I take it that this refers to its teachings and not to dates or years mentioned, which, through accident, have been incorrectly translated.

Mount Vernon, May 2, 1905. D. F. E.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to make an effort to define "inspiration." It is obvious that the words and the mental pictures may differ, while the truth, the reality, remains the same, and I had supposed that the minds of the writers of Scriptures were, by direct contact with the Divine Mind, inspired to perceive the truth, the thing, the reality, the relation, and that they were obliged to express it in such language and mental pictures as they could command. A Plea for Bowling Green.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A letter published in THE TIMES of April 30 recommended the destruction of Bowling Green, because the streets inclosing it are narrow and congested with traffic.

New York once had as many interesting historic spots as Boston or Philadelphia, but they have been destroyed, because her people were either too ignorant to know or too sordid to care about her glorious history—because they considered it of more moment that streets were narrow and congested with traffic than that future generations should be noble and patriotic. What thinking person has ever stood in the theatre of great events and not been ennobled and inspired thereby? Why do thousands go yearly to the Roman Forum, the Acropolis of Athens, the historic shrines of past glory?

Should "the Street and Park Commissioners get together" with any such treasonable purpose as the destruction of Bowling Green, surely the people of New York would rise in vehement protest at such desecration. Destroy Bowling Green! Destroy Independence Hall and Concord Bridge! C. F. M.

The Times's Baseball Supplement.

From The Stroudsburg Times.

A striking illustration of the photographers', cutmakers', and printers' capabilities was given in THE NEW YORK TIMES Sunday by an illustrated supplement.

It was the size of two pages, and the centre cut was of thousands of "fans," who turned out to witness the first ball game at the Polo Grounds. Below it were views of the grand stand, and the border features were made up of photographs of the men who comprise the New York National and American League teams. The picture is well worth having by the enthusiast.

Since having occupied its new building THE TIMES has had a number of features, the prominent one being a four-page colored supplement reproducing famous paintings, portraying the leading stage folks and some prominent persons, and the excellency of this work is [illegible]

A REMEDY FOR SMOKE NUISANCE

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest your editorial concerning smoke in New York, in your issue of April 27, 1905, and wish to congratulate you upon the correct stand you have taken.

The smoke nuisance from boiler furnaces can be almost entirely avoided by the adoption of proper furnaces adapted to the fuel used and by the employment of a sufficient amount of intelligence to properly handle the fires.

The whole secret of burning coal smokelessly is to obtain complete combustion in the furnace and combustion chamber before any appreciable amount of the combustion gases meet the chilling water surfaces of boilers or other surfaces to be heated.

Such practice will not only secure smokelessness in operation, but it will also result in fuel economy to such an extent that special furnace constructions properly installed will prove to be an excellent investment.

There is not the slightest reason why bituminous coal should not be burned freely in New York City without smoke or other nuisance, and all that is required to secure such results is careful furnace design and the services of a fireman having a fair amount of intelligence.

A slight smoke will result from the use of anthracite coal carrying 5 per cent. or over of volatile matter, and such coal is obtained from the western part of the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania, but as the gaseous matter included in the coal increases, giving us the semi-anthracite, the semi-bituminous, the Eastern bituminous, and the Western bituminous coals, the difficulty of burning coal without smoke increases unless special provisions are made in the furnace construction.

The writer has had no difficulty whatsoever in burning Western bituminous coal running in the neighborhood of 45 per cent. volatile matter with an absolute smokeless chimney, and as less difficulty is experienced in burning the bituminous and semi-bituminous coals of the East, there is no reason why bituminous coal should not be used as freely here in New York City without nuisance as anthracite coal, and this would not only lead to a decrease in fuel bills, but in many cases its use would be followed by increased steaming capacity, and should bituminous coal become a strong competitor of anthracite coal in this market a decrease in the cost per ton is certain to follow. FIREPROOF WOOD.

A Reply to Mr. Starrett and Others Who Pronounce It a Failure.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter signed Paul Starrett in your issue of April 29 has been brought to my attention. I have carefully investigated the "truth" about the 5 per cent. rebate on "fireproof" wood, and the use of the wood by the United States Government.

Regarding the rebate, Mr. W. A. Anderson, Superintendent of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, has informed me that the rebate had been recently revoked because flagrant instances of violations of Section 105 of the Building Code had become quite frequent.

Mr. Anderson declared emphatically that no member of the Board of Fire Underwriters had ever said that "fireproof" wood was worthless, as Mr. Starrett says in his letter. He did say, however, that the material was misnamed, because it would carbonize under great heat, and would not communicate flame "when properly treated."

I find that the League Island Navy Yard of Philadelphia has received within the past month several thousand feet of "fireproofed" wood, which is now being used in the construction of a Government building.

I have studied the chemistry and modus operandi of treating wood in order to make it uninflammable during the past ten years and watched the rise and fall of many pretenders in the business, and am not surprised at the present climax, when builders and others are interested in a hurry to get rich without giving due attention to the interest of the public.

I have gathered an array of evidence from architects, builders, engineers, and chemists on both sides of the Atlantic. Statements from men of high calibre, whose opinion ought to be valued, which not only say that wood can be but that it is made uninflammable by proper chemical treatment.

Wood which will not flame under 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit is something the world needs in building construction, because it will not communicate fire. It may carbonize and crumble into dust, but that is all. VERITAS.

As to Capitals.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The frequent recurrence of Winter, Summer, &c., on your page spelt with capitals reminds me of a rule I learned in elementary rhetoric. "Capitals should be used for the days of the month and months of the year, but not for the seasons." If I am wrong in this I shall be pleased to be corrected; if right the suggestion will doubtless add to the correctness and value of one of the best daily editorial pages in the country.

A Bill to Aid Street Cleaners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly take notice of Assembly Bill No. 109, Int. 1,254, introduced by Mr. Gustave Hartman, from the Sixteenth Assembly District, which has recently passed the Assembly. The bill contains provisions for a raise in wages of $60; eight days' vacation a year, payment of overtime, and Sunday work pro rata, for employes of the Street Cleaning Department, particularly the sweepers and drivers.

We feel that the further passage of the bill in the Senate, as well as through the hands of the Mayor and Governor, would be greatly facilitated by further publicity, and I hereby take the liberty to make a request for such notice on behalf of L. A. No. 1,848 K. of L., this being a street sweepers' association organized for the east side members of the department. JOHN LANDUSKY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of this morning appears a letter which you have headed "Junk in the Japanese Navy," and in which the writer asks for "the name of a single vessel sold by Great Britain which is not at least twenty years old."

The issue of The Illustrated London News for Feb. 25, 1905, gives photographs of thirty-nine vessels discarded by the navy of Great Britain, of which thirty-six are less than twenty years old, fourteen less than fifteen years, seven less than twelve years old, and one but three years old. Among them are such well-known ships as the Australia, (1888,) Camperdown, (1886,) Nile, (1890,) Rainbow, (1892,) and Medusa, (1902.) JOHN THOMPSON.

CONSUMPTIVES ON TRAINS.

Danger to the General Health Involved in Present Traveling Facilities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

During a recent visit to the army General Hospital, Fort Bayard, New Mexico, which is a sanitarium for the treatment of consumptive invalids of the army and navy, I had an opportunity to inspect the institution and to note, the methods employed in treating this disease, and, incidental to the railway journey involved, an experience which shocked my sensibilities as a medical man.

I refer to the risks incurred by those in health in transportation by the transcontinental railroads, which traverse the great Southwest, at this season, when thousands of consumptive sick are seeking this region for the benefit of their health, and to the perils of the journey to the sick themselves. The danger to the well lies chiefly in the foul, germ-laden, and dusty air of the sleeping cars, which latter quality is mechanically irritating to the air passages and creates a receptive condition in the lungs of those breathing it for the growth of the specific germ of consumption, while, on the other hand, pure, fresh air is the element chiefly relied upon for the cure of those afflicted with this disease.

At Fort Bayard, of the 300 or more sick, not one but sleeps in the open air; nor are they, indeed, ever housed, day or night. Pure, germ-free, and dust-free air is the sheet anchor which is mainly relied on to check the ravages of the disease. Now, what are the conditions of existence incident to long journeys in the sleeping coaches of these transcontinental railroads?

I traveled by one line to Fort Bayard, returning by another, and on each the conditions were practically the same; the sleepers were crowded—in some instances two in a berth—and quite half of the passengers were unmistakably consumptives, and some of them too ill to leave their berths during the day. The atmosphere of the car was loaded with dust, as always in traversing this arid region, and not being permitted to settle, where it would do the least—harm, was forever kept in motion by means of broom and brush in the hands of the negro porter, zealous for the good appearance of the plush-covered seats.

It seems to me the public should demand a change in all this. It certainly would do so if exposed to any other disease in the same way, and the danger of infection is surely as great in this as any other, and the consequences as serious. Trains bearing invalids in numbers to consumptive resorts should have attached invalid coaches, specially constructed and equipped, with trained nurses in attendance, to whom, rather than to the caretakers of the car, their comfort and safety should be charged.

I am sure there are cases which receive their final stroke on these journeys in search of health that might recover but for the stress of the journey under the conditions now existent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The story of Thomas Dixon, Jr., told in Sunday's TIMES finds an echo from a farmer located in Northern Ohio, who writes as follows:

"Life on a farm is very exhausting. It means early rising, working with heavy tools in a heavier soil, association with animals rather than men, wearing dirty and unsightly clothing, little reading or travel, a constant battle with the rude forces of nature, and the crafty wiles of the traveling agent. The profit, if there is any, comes but once a year, and a failure cannot be remedied sooner. A farmer needs to be as impervious to discomfort as a hitching post. Wet feet or dry, hot sunshine or blizzards, buttons on or off, out he must go to dig and delve and drive.

"He can't sit down to read, for he would go right to sleep from sheer exhaustion; he can't write more of a letter than to say 'he is well and hopes these few lines,' &c., from pure mental fatigue. The few brief unsatisfactory glimpses he gets from papers of what is going on in the world only adds to his wretchedness by awakening a curiosity for further investigation that can never be satisfied. If there is an idealess preacher in the whole range of the conference—a poorer stick than all else besides—he is sure to be sent to the farmers; and to supplement this pabulum for the soul all country editors take a delight in stuffing our papers with sermons by Talmage instead of comforting and reviving literature from Mark Twain. It's sad, and even the vivid green and white of the wheat fields and orchard blossoms fail to bring entire relief."

Relics of Gen. Jonathan Williams.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial in your excellent paper a few days ago the naming of Castle Williams was spoken of. It brought to my mind the fact that in the attic of our house there is hanging a portrait of Gen. Williams. Where it came from I do not know, but it has been there about sixty years.

We also have in our family possessions a pair of eyeglasses which bear the inscription, "Benjamin Franklin to his nephew, Jonathan Williams," and on another part of the handles my grandfather's name, Gen. Morton. I presume Gen. Williams gave them to my grandfather, but of that I know nothing. The glasses are bound in silver, with long handles, and are intended to be held in the hand while in use. In my grandfather's portrait they are represented hanging by a black ribbon around his neck.

We would be pleased to present the portrait to the authorities if they would care to have it, provided it be proved to be genuine; but I do not know how to proceed in the matter.

Gothic Type Again.

According to the Berliner Tageblatt the short-sightedness of recruits is beginning to cause grave anxiety to the German War Office. "Bismarck himself," comments The London Chronicle, "who had to take to glasses long before he was out of office, was strongly of this opinion, though, from motives of patriotism, he would not hear of the abolition of the Gothic type, and invariably refused the gift of any book printed in Roman characters. But the anti-Gothic party is now gaining ground, and several newspapers and numerous scientific works are printed in Roman type, which the Emperor himself is said to favor."

A FISH STORY.

It happened once a school of shad
Swam up the river cool.
Since it was Sunday, they of course
Became a Sunday school.

There all the little shad were taught
The story of their start;
How Adam Shad and Mistress Eve
Both played a losing part.

When Eve was made from Adam's rib,
In gardens fringed with moss,
He had so many millions left
He never felt the loss.

And then a serpent came to tempt
With most alluring squirm.
Eve hesitated, pondered, bit,
And gobbled down the worm.

She said 'twas good—another came
And tempted Adam sore.
The sprats fell sick, but they rose,
And then were seen no more.

BRILLIANT TESTIMONIAL TO MADAME MODJESKA

Over $10,000 Realized at Opera House Benefit.

ADDRESS BY MR. STEDMAN

Paderewski, Unable to Appear, Tells in Letter of His Debt of Gratitude to the Actress.

Standing on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon Mme. Helena Modjeska, with tears in her eyes and a voice breaking with emotion, expressed in a few brief phrases her appreciation of the splendid testimonial tendered her by her friends and admirers, and which had served to bring together a noteworthy assemblage moved by the common impulse of paying a tribute of sympathetic appreciation to a great and favored artiste. This incident provided the dramatic climax of the afternoon, and its impressiveness was emphasized in a stage picture of remarkable beauty.

Grouped about Mme. Modjeska were the actors in costume who had supported her in the powerful first scene of the second act of "Macbeth," while on either side pages held aloft flickering torches that cast their lambent flame upon the scene. The actress, robed in white, with an orange scarf falling about her shoulders, stepped forward as Edmund Clarence Stedman walked upon the stage bearing an illuminated memorial from which hung the Polish and American National colors. Then followed Mr. Stedman's address and the actress's response, both interrupted again and again by renewed applause.

There had been moving incidents before this moment. Paderewski, who was unable to be present, sent a letter to Daniel Frohman, and the first mention of the pianist's name by David Bispham, who read the missive, was the occasion for vociferous applause. The letter follows:

For many months I have been looking forward to the 2d of May, anticipating one of the greatest joys of my career. The thought of joining you all on this solemn occasion has been my pride for many months. The sudden adversity of fate makes me feel now grieved and humiliated, and words cannot express all the bitterness of my disappointment. But there is still a pride and a joy I cannot be deprived of—the pride of belonging to the same country, to the same race which sent into the wide world one of the greatest and noblest artists of all times and nations; the joy of being one of many to whom Mme. Modjeska had been good, kind, and generous. The first encouraging words I heard as a pianist came from her lips; the first successful concert I had in my life was due to her assistance. Unable to be present, I beg of you to convey to Mme. Modjeska the homage of my profound admiration and gratitude, and to extend my sincerest thanks to all who contribute to make this day the day of legitimate and crowning triumph for a career great, noble, pure, and beautiful. Sincerely yours,

I. J. PADEREWSKI.

In the lobbies prominent actresses sold programmes, candy, and posies, reaping a harvest of small change and currency to be added to the fund. At one hostelry just across the way the man behind the long counter was kept busy changing bills into sliver.

"What's the use," he remarked finally, "they'll get it all anyway. So why not give up in a lump?"

As a matter of fact, however, though the actresses labored faithfully, they were no more insistent than the occasion seemed to justify. The programme, handsomely printed on heavy plate paper, contained half-tones of all the artists who participated in the affair, together with a critical appreciation of Mme. Modjeska, by Jeannette L. Gilder, and this poem, written by Richard Watson Gilder, for the occasion:

There are four sisters, known to mortals well,
Whose names are Joy and Sorrow, Death and Love.
This last it was who did my footsteps move
To where the other deep-eyed sisters dwell.
To-night, ere yon painted curtain fell,
These, one by one, before my eyes did rove
Through the brave mimic world that Shakespeare wove.

Lady! thy art, thy passion were the spell
That held me, and still holds; for thou dost show,
With those most high, each in his sovereign art—
Shakespeare supreme, and mighty Angelo—
Great art and passion are one! Thine, too, the part
To prove that still for him the laurels grow
Who reaches through the mind to pluck the heart!

The splendid programme has already been printed at length, and need not be repeated in detail here. Interest largely centred in the scenes from "Macbeth" and "Mary Stuart," played by Mme. Modjeska, and they were followed with rapt attention. On occasions of this kind the critical voice may well be stilled, but it is only fair to state that the acting of Louis James in the scene in which Macduff announces the death of Duncan awakened the audience to one of the tremendous outbursts of the afternoon.

Mr. Stedman, in making the presentation to Mme. Modjeska, said in part:

Madame Modjeska: In the absence of the eloquent poet and dramatic critic to whom the privilege by right would fall, it is my grateful office to present you with the address in response to which you make this day so memorable. The scroll bears the signatures of brothers and sisters of your own profession, and of your attached votaries in other walks of life—all united in devotion to the drama, and to the cognate arts of beauty and expression, and all made now associates by their delight in your genius and career. So absolute is the sincerity of their homage, so manifest at this moment the gifts and personality which have inspired it, that I might well end here with the lines of an old English poet:

"Enough! and leave the rest to Fame!
'Tis to commend her, but to name."

Yet, for our own honor and content, we would fain, like Viola, go on with our "speech in your praise, and then show you the heart" of a tribute worth even more to the givers than to her who receives it.

A quarter-century ago you came to us from a land invested with traditions of valor, beauty, and romance, that martyr-land, alas, bleeding this hour for Freedom, and it has bled so oft before; from that land to which America is still in fealty for gallant aid in our own struggle for liberty; from the land of Pulaski and Kosciusko—the Motherland, in aftertime, of Chopin and Sembrich, and of Paderewski, (to whom our thoughts go out to-day;) from the brave and soulful country that flashed its sword in our behalf, and that in our own time enthralls us with song, music, and through you with impassioned tenderness and artistic power.

The felicities of art are limitless, and, as in creations of our master playwright you found the most alluring range for your own powers, so your fresh impersonations awake in us the sense of "something rich and strange."

Some haunting note of pathos is wont to lend its vibration to our choicest testimonials. I am sure, Madame Modjeska, that you recall the now historic scene when Hamlet was enacted in this place as a tribute to Lester Wallack, and when around you—the Ophelia of the play—was gathered a group of such actors as a single event rarely has brought together. Here was the princely Booth; and here, of the foremost, were Barrett, Mayo, Florence, Wheelock, Edwards, and John Gilbert—still without a successor; here, too, was Jefferson, incomparable as the First Gravedigger, and, like the rest, without a thought of self, but all for the glory of the play.

That radiant homicycle has vanished! last of all, Jefferson has returned to the mountain, and we shall see his smile no more. You, their younger sister, to whom they gave their pride and support—long may your enviable years flow on, consecrated alike by the star-light of the past and the sunshine of the present!

It was estimated that something over $10,000 would be realized from the matinée after deducting various expenses, including $600 for the rental of the Opera House.

PADEREWSKI MUST REST.

Better, but Nervous and Fatigued, Says His Physician.

Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, arrived in this city from Boston yesterday morning. Accompanied by his family and his physician, Dr. Fronczak, he went directly to the Hotel Manhattan. He did not leave his rooms throughout the day. Dr. Fronczak said concerning his patient's condition: "I will say that he is improving, although quite nervous and in need of rest after his fatiguing journey from Boston. He must take rest for some time—absolute rest. This is essential to his recovery."

YELLOW PUP STOOD GUARD.

Abandoned by Owner, It Howled Until Tenants Protested.

Into the Alexander Avenue Station last night entered Edward Herrman of 719 East One Hundred and Forty-fourth Street, indignant; also a number of other tenants of the same flat house, furious.

"We want protection!" cried Mr. Herrman to the Sergeant.

"Indeed we do!" chorused the indignant tenants.

"From what, pray?" said the Sergeant gravely.

"A yellow pup," was the reply.

"This yellow pup," said Mr. Herrman, "has been abandoned by an outgoing tenant on the third floor rear. It has been howling all day. Now it's hoarse, but still it howls. The doors of the flat are wide open, so are the windows. It's cold and burglars may come in. We want protection and peace."

The Sergeant said all he could do was to send a man to keep away burglars.

A policeman was sent to watch the house.

The situation was becoming acute when Henry Klinkerfurst, a teamster, who lives on the second flor, said to the assembled tenants:

"Why, I know the dog; he's often ridden with me on the wagon; just watch me."

"Here, Bunco! Bunco!" we called as he entered the hall. The dog gave a bark of delight, followed him to the street, and trotted away.

Then the windows were shut and the household retired.

MAN WITH BARREL HERE.

German Has Pulled It 7,000 Miles on a Big Bet.

Johann C. Eisenhans of Waldkirch, Baden, Germany, arrived in town last night from St. Louis and went to 85 East Fourth Street. He is on his way back to Germany, having walked more than 7,000 miles on a wager of 20,000 marks that he could not walk to St. Louis from his native town and back in two years, earning his living as he went. A feature of the bet was that he had to drag after him a stoutly made beer barrel filled with earth from Waldkirch and weighing 190 pounds. His two years will be up on May 23, and he will sail next Wednesday.

When he finally tramped up to the East Fourth Street house he was very weary, and his clattering barrel attracted a large crowd.

After getting the Pope's blessing in Rome, he said, he went to Rotterdam and took ship for Quebec. He carries a book signed by the Mayor of every city through which he has passed. He is thirty-eight years old, has bushy black hair, wears a rainbow-colored sweater, baggy trousers, and heavy shoes.

His chief adventures, he says, have been with American dogs, and many a time, he says, he had to fly for his life with his barrell bobbing at his heels. He dared not leave it and he dared not stop.

He has his stock joke, too. Many times, he said, politicians would introduce him as the man with the barrel, and when he would meet the Mayor of a town the Mayor would say that often men with a barrel had called on him, but their barrels were filled with another kind of dust. That joke, he says, he has laughed at 300 times.

"When I get home," he said, "I will start a saloon with my 20,000 marks. I will exhibit my barrel, and I have 500 photographs which were made on my journey."

The barrel is three feet long, two feet thick, with an iron handle five feet long. It is painted red, white, and blue.

MRS. GILBERT'S MEMORIAL.

Committee in Charge Decides It Shall Be a Window.

The first meeting of the committee on the propcsed memorial to the late Mrs. Gilbert, in which members of the theatrical profession and of Bloomingdale Church are interested, was held at the offices of Daniel Frohman at the Lyceum Theatre yesterday.

It was decided that the tribute should take the form of a memorial window.

Members of the committee representing Mrs. Gilbert's personal friends are Runyon Pyatt of Rogers & Pyatt; Reid Moore, President of the New Amsterdam Bank; Mrs. Charles W. Terrum, and the Rev. Dr. Stinson. Other members of the committee who represent the theatrical profession are John Drew, Amie Russell, and Daniel Frohman. The treasurers will be Reid Moore and Daniel Frohman, to whom contributions may be sent.

Another memorial in the form of a statue has been suggested, but this plan has nothing to do with the memorial window project.

"LEAH KLESCHNA" IN LONDON.

Audience and Critics Enthusiastic—Lena Ashwell in Title Role.

LONDON, May 3.—At the New Theatre last night Charles Frohman produced C. M. S. McLellan's drama "Leah Kleschna," Lena Ashwell taking Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske's part, the title rôle.

The play was received with enthusiasm. The audience was held spellbound to the end, and the drama made the most striking success that has been seen in London in a long time.

The critics greet the production with unwonted unanimity, describing the play in most eulogistic terms as one of the best that has been sent to London from America.

Some of the critics express surprise that Mr. McLellan, who was known in London mainly by his "Belle of New York," should have written such a fine and powerful play. The Daily Chronicle says:

"There hitherto were seven wonders of the world. The eighth is added in the mere fact that the author of 'The Belle of New York' should be also the author of 'Leah Kleschna,' the strongest piece of sheer stagecraft we have known from any source for years."

The Standard says:

"It is a piece far out of the common, and holds out the promise that in Mr. McLellan a new power has arisen."

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske has stated that she purchased the English rights of "Leah Kleschna" and that she intends to carry the matter to the courts. She also asserts that she collaborated in the writing of the play.

MISS BARRYMORE'S NORA A FINE ACHIEVEMENT

In the Difficult Ibsen Role She Displays Rare Ability.

HER LAST ACT A SURPRISE

A Characterization That Fully Justifies Young Actress's Claims to Artistic Recognition.

Torvald Helmer	Bruce McRae
Nora Helmer	Ethel Barrymore
Dr. Rank	Edgar Selwyn
Nils Krogstad	Joseph Brennan
Mrs. Linden	Sara Perry
Anne	Eleanor Wilton
Ellen	Davenport Seymour
The Helmers' Children	Chester Pullman, Beryl Pullman, Helen Pullman

No matter how long it may be given to Ethel Barrymore to appear before the public, it is doubtful if she will ever again be placed in the position of undergoing just such a trial as was hers last night. For, with what even the most friendly of her admirers were inclined to view as the temerity of youth, she had elected to challenge comparisons in a rôle not only of extreme difficulty in itself, but made more so by reason of the fact that it has been utilized for a display of virtuosity on the part of the foremost actresses of the stage.

Times change in the theatre as well as out of it. Not so many years ago the youthful actress seeking recognition as an artist of the higher order would probably have selected "Juliet" as the medium of her ambition. To-day the study of the rich warm glow of youthful impulse and passion gives way to the cold, gray, and barren shadows of life as it is understood in the bleak Northland.

It was to have been assumed by even those most in opposition to Ethel Barrymore's claims to consideration that in the first two acts of Ibsen's "A Doll's House" she would be an interesting if not necessarily convincing Nora. The charm of her girlhood, her impulsive youthfulness, and her buoyant play of spirits seem naturally attuned to these passages of the drama. But by persons to whom her claims have always been those of a mere pleasing personality any thought of her ability to realize the deeper notes of Nora's development was regarded as little short of folly.

There will no doubt be notes of dissent in the general acclaim which is likely to greet her achievement at the Lyceum Theatre. But it is difficult to see how any one who views the performance with a mind free of prejudice can fail to admit that she has fully justified her claims to be considered seriously.

And surprisingly enough her performance of the rôle is best in those passages where there was most to fear. From the moment of her first appearance in the final act until the parting words to Torvald Helmer she played with a sure touch and gradually developing authority of expression.

Of the oftimes annoying peculiarities of Miss Barrymore's speech, the gurgles and gasps had completely disappeared, and she had ceased for the time being to be merely a very charming young woman playing a part provided to display her own individuality.

This Nora has many splendid moments. In the first act the girlish, light-hearted irresponsibility of the butterfly creature is finely conveyed in innumerable happy touches, and, though we have here, again and again, reminders of the Ethel Barrymore we have known, the personality is to our mind fully in keeping with the spirit of the scenes. With the entrance of Krogstadt she begins to sound a note truer and deeper. The first scene with him is splendidly played; the pride, the contempt, and the childish innocence of her forgery's possible consequences being indicated with delicate nuance of voice and facial play.

The romp with the children provides one of the most delightful incidents of the evening. The dancing of the tarantella is carried forward with an abandon that contrasts finely with the nervous, fearful suspense that has just preceded it.

Her scenes with Dr. Rank are played with a show of exquisite sympathy, and there is a sincere note of sorrow in the simple announcement of his coming death. Indeed, from this moment on until the end Miss Barrymore's Nora has a rarely compelling quality of moving pathos.

If this performance of Ibsen is open to any serious faultfinding, it will probably be on the grounds that it is not "atmospheric." It was difficult at one time last night to reconcile one's self to the idea that this was not a Nora of our own clime, but, though the scene of "A Doll's House" is laid in Christiania, is it not a bit too much to demand that the actress herself shall provide an atmosphere suggestive of the place of action? The rôle of Nora, like every other stage figure that has justified the praise applied to great studies in character, is more or less universal in its application.

Was not the Nora of Agnes Sorma a German Nora, was not that of Rejane French? Does Duse cease to be the Italian when she plays the part? It is the mind, the heart, the soul that we seek in the acting of these rôles.

Of the supporting actors in this production Edgar Selwyn is entitled to a fair share of praise for a finely suggestive performance of Dr. Rank. Bruce McRae, to our mind, fails to indicate with sufficient clearness the innate force of Torvald Helmer.

TARGET HOLDER DESERTS.

And Marksman Grives at This Sad Lack of Confidence.

César Bauer has gone back to the simple life of the French peasant, and Col. Gaston Bordeverry, the marksman, is mourning the absence of his main assistant. Bauer vanished yesterday morning.

Bauer had been with Col. Bordeverry for several years; the marksman hired him in Rouen, France, when he was giving exhibitions there. He withstood the ordeal of having candles, lumps of sugar, boxes of matches, and money shot from his head without an apparent tremor of the nerves, until last week, when the engagement began at the Hippodrome. Bordeverry remarked his strange loss of courage then, but Bauer insisted that the weakness was only temporary.

The shooter boasts that he never makes a miss, and he could not understand Bauer's timidity. The man went through the performance on Monday with shaking limbs and white face, but there was no suspicion in the mind of Bordeverry that he was on the verge of quitting yesterday. He vanished after breakfast from his boarding house in West Fortieth Street and search for him has proved unavailable. During the performance yesterday Mme. Eugenie Lausanne, Col Bordeverry's feminine target, took Bauer's part in the show.

The marksman said last night that he would not feel so bad if Bauer's leaving had not implied some reflection upon the Colonel's marksmanship.

ESTES-LOGAN WEDDING.

Ceremony at Brick Church and Reception at National Arts Club.

One of the prettiest weddings of the year took place last evening at 6 o'clock at the Brick Presbyterian Church, where Miss Tanette Logan, daughter of Walter S. Logan, was married to Howard Green Bayles, son of Dr. James C. Bayles.

The chancel of the Brick Church was beautifully decorated with large ferns. Against this green background were placed enormous clusters of white lilies. Around the gallery ran prettily woven strings of fir and cedar.

There was an extraordinary happening, when, just after the Rev. Dr. Richards had completed the marriage ceremony, the bride, instead of kissing her husband, according to custom, turned the other way and kissed her father, Walter S. Logan. He was visibly pleased.

The maid of honor was Miss Elting Marshall of Washington, granddaughter of the famous Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. The bridesmaids were Miss Nathalie Young of Wilkesbarre, the Misses Rachel and Helen Kenyon of Brooklyn, Miss Ruth Prossett of Boston, Miss Adele Keys of New York, and Miss Mary Stewart of New York. The ushers were Samuel Stewart, William Duncan, Hollister Logan, brother of the bride; Donal De Kesson, Mr. De Schweinitz, and Charles C. Peck. The best man was Dr. James C. Bayles, father of the bridegroom.

The ceremony over, the newly married couple, bridesmaids, ushers, and guests set out for the reception at the National Arts Club. The wedding attracted much attention from the crowds on Fifth Avenue.

The National Arts Club had never been so elaborately decorated before, it is said, as it was last night. Eight of the largest rooms had their walls entirely covered by boughs of fir. The rich green of the background was relieved by scatterings of roses and lilies. The dancers moved in and out through arches of green.

The bride's gown was of accordion-plaited white taffeta, with point lace. The veil was fastened with diamonds. Her mother wore pale lavender silk with lace over. Another one of the striking gowns was that of Mrs. Theodore Sutro; it was a pale green taffeta with diamond ornaments.

Among those present were Edmund Clarence Stedman, Herbert H. Kellerd, Dr. Charles W. Kirkby, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Sperry, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Corbett, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Cady, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hagaman Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Myer, Dr. Charles H. HEAD TAX ROUSED IRE OF TRAVELING BRITON

Re-entered United States from Canada and Had to Pay $4.

PROTESTED AT WASHINGTON

Hurried There to Tell Embassy Officials What He Thought of Iniquitous American Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Henry Simpson, an Englishman of means, is making a tour of the United States with his family. He likes everything except the head tax on aliens, which, he declares, is an outrage.

Mr. Simpson and a niece, after arriving at Boston in one of the Cunard steamships, went to visit some friends in Canada. When they returned to the United States, via Niagara, a customs official boarded the train and imposed the head tax of $2 each.

"What!" gasped Mr. Simpson. "I thought this was a free country. Besides, I arrived at Boston, and if a tax was to be paid, the Cunard Company must have paid it."

"But you have been to Canada, and—"

"Certainly I have been to Canada. I am a British subject!"

"Nevertheless," said the customs official, with due respect, "if you wish to re-enter the United States you must pay again."

"Then, as a British subject, I pay the $4 under protest. I will have this matter aired. I will call upon the—the—er—the—"

Commissioner General of Immigration at Washington," assisted the customs man politely.

"Thank you. I will call upon him and have this matter thoroughly aired. And if I obtain no satisfaction I shall call upon the British Embassy. Imagine a country professing freedom and justice—"

Then the train steamed out.

The moment he arrived in Washington Mr. Simpson, still indignant, called upon the Commissioner General of Immigration. After a brief interview he made for the British Embassy. Arrived there he introduced himself as Mr. Henry Simpson, said that he was a British subject, and told his story.

"I called at the Commissioner's, and he informed me that the head tax was the law, and that if I crossed to the Canadian side to-morrow morning and returned in the evening I should be compelled to pay the head tax over again, and every time I crossed and recrossed.

"I am afraid it is the law," said the representative of his Britannic Majesty, sadly.

"The law!" thundered Mr. Simpson. "I tell you, Sir, a nation putting such iniquitous laws into practice ought to belong to the class of a sixth-rate country of the civilized peoples!"

And Mr. Simpson, having thus relieved his feelings, took his departure, but still unmollified, and vowing that he would write to The Times about it.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

A solid, prosperous business is a man's proudest monument and most valuable legacy.

A man should build his business for all time—thinking more of his family in after years than he does of himself in the immediate present.

A trade-mark may be made to be worth millions, and it is a value which cannot be stolen or frittered away. A good business, well known and thoroughly advertised, is an asset of great value—of peculiar worth to those into whose hands it goes as a legacy from those who built it.

The firmest and most permanent foundation upon which a business can be built is advertising. Make your trade-mark and the qualities of your goods known to the utmost limits of your possible market and keep up the educational work persistently and unceasingly.

You can reach a splendid clientele through THE SATURDAY EVENING POST. THE POST reaches 800,000 families every week, which means 4,000,000 people. It is not given away or "clubbed" or sold by premium schemes. People buy it because they want to read it, and a magazine of this kind, of course, makes the best possible advertising medium. The fact that it is a weekly magazine instead of a monthly, enables the advertiser to reach the public four times as often, and therefore make four times the impression.

FLYBACK WAS FIRST IN TRACK RECORD TIME

Three-Year-Old Won the Sprint Handicap in Fine Style.

PASADENA TOOK THE STAKE

Long Chances Filled Places in Jamaica's First Race—Oaklawn Again Victorious.

In recompense for results that were just as unexpected and disastrous as the present Jamaica meeting has been able to produce, visitors witnessed a programme of racing that from start to finish was full of sensation. There were head-and-head contests in most of the six races, but the distinguishing feature of the sport was the lightning changes in position made in the run through the short stretch, and the amazing defeats experienced by horses that the crowd already had begun to cheer as winners.

About the most surprising of these quick-change results was the outcome of the last race of the day, a sprint handicap at six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward. Delhi, one of the choices for the Metropolitan Handicap, and the top weight in yesterday's race, was one of the three horses withdrawn, leaving Toscan to go as the top weight, while Irene Lindsay was the favorite of the five that ran. It was a close betting contest, however, with each of the starters well backed, Flyback being the second choice and Oxford the next in favor. Toscan led away from the post, Irene Lindsay at once going up to him, and the pair racing neck and neck, alternating in front to the last turn, where Oxford joined them. Flyback, last at the start, still being last when the field turned into the stretch and looking hopelessly beaten. Irene Lindsay dropped back beaten on the straight, and the watching crowd divided between Oxford and Toscan as the leaders fought on to the winning post. It was not until the field was in the last furlong that Flyback appeared as a contender, and then he came on with a superb rush, and, running over the leaders in the last half furlong, drew to the front and won by three parts of a length from Oxford in track record time, the three-year-old finishing the six furlongs in 1:12 2-5, just equal to the best performance over the course, made by Orthodox a year before.

Eight horses ran in the first feature of the day, the Williamsburg Handicap at six furlongs, for three-year-olds, though a field of fifteen was named on the card. Through the betting Pasadena and Diamond were equal favorites, the outsider Buttling, first away, was the pacemaker, with Diamond Flush second and Pasadena third to the bend into the stretch for the run home, where Diamond, last to that point, was hopelessly beaten. When headed for the run to the winning post, Buttling stopped short, and Cairngorm went up from fifth place and joined Pasadena, a fine struggle ensuing out, with Cairngorm seemingly winning until just on the post, where Pasadena drew out a bit under the whip and won by a scant length.

Four favorites were beaten, while the only positive choice to win was Oaklawn. The weather was cold and the attendance large. Summaries:

Betting Allowed on Texas Race Tracks

HOUSTON, Texas, May 2.—Gov. Lanham today approved the bill which permits betting at race tracks on the day that the races are run. It was stated while this bill was pending that if it became a law first-class tracks would be established at Dallas, Houston, and San Antonio, and possibly Fort Worth, to conduct winter meetings.

A syndicate composed of Eastern men and Texans is back of the project to establish the tracks.

DELHI IN A FAST TRIAL.

Horse Worked a Mile for Metropolitan Handicap in 1:40 2-5.

The most impressive trial shown by any of the horses engaged in the Metropolitan Handicap, to be run to-morrow at the opening of the new Belmont Park race course, was that of James R. Keene's great four-year-old Delhi, the largest money winner of 1904 among the three-year-olds, in his final gallop for the Metropolitan at the Sheepshead Bay race track yesterday morning.

Delhi was entered in the last race of the afternoon at the Jamaica track yesterday, but his trainer James Rowe decided the night before to scratch him from the race and work him out in private for the big race of to-morrow. The gallop was made early in the forenoon, Delhi going out ridden by a good-sized exercise boy, and carrying all of 120 pounds. He went away at a fast pace, and carried about the same rate of speed over a distance of nearly a mile and a furlong, pulling up in the last sixteenth, and finishing in 1:54 2-5 easily. The first mile, the distance of the Metropolitan, was timed by many horsemen in 1:40 2-5, a few making it a fraction slower. The fractional time of the gallop was as follows: First furlong, 0:13 3-5; quarter, 0:25 2-5; three furlongs, 0:38 3-5; half mile, 0:48 2-5; five furlongs, 1:00; six furlongs, 1:13 2-5; seven furlongs, 1:26 4-5; mile, 1:40 2-5, and mile and a furlong, 1:54 2-5.

On the strength of the work Delhi at once was installed the horsemen's choice for the Metropolitan, and there is every probability now that he will be the favorite for the race to-morrow. In the Metropolitan Delhi will carry 124 pounds.

At the Jamaica track four Metropolitan horses raced yesterday in the final public trials for the big event to-morrow, and one of the four, Pasadena, in James McLaughlin's stable, was returned a winner. Pasadena, with 114 pounds, or eighteen pounds more than he is handicapped at in the Metropolitan, winning the Williamsburg Handicap, for three-year-old, six furlongs, in 1:13 2-5.

AMERICAN TEAM AT NORFOLK.

Tennis Players Practice for Matches Abroad—Clothier Still Absent.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., May 2.—America's trio of lawn tennis experts, Holcombe Ward, the National champion in both singles and doubles; William A. Larned, the ex-champion, and Beals C. Wright, champion in the doubles, paired with Ward, put in a long day at practice on the courts of the Country Club here. Both Ward and Larned confined themselves to singles during the morning, and both displayed excellent form. Despite the injury that Larned sustained to his ankle during the Winter, he was unusually fast on his feet today.

There was a vigor about Ward's work and his racquet play that indicated that he was fully up to championship form in every respect. He brought off his cross-court shots with a snap, and his trick of sending the ball to the most unexpected parts of the tennis court frequently caught Larned completely off his guard and earned the point cleanly by a pass or a well-placed drive. Larned also accomplished good work in the doubles against a local pair and also against Larned and a local player.

The continued absence of William J. Clothier, who is also spoken of as a member of the American lawn tennis team that will meet the opposing nations in an effort to wrest the Dwight F. Davis International Challenge Cup from the Englishmen, has caused considerable comment among the players gathered here.

If by any possible chance Clothier, who was ranked second to Ward last season, should not be included in the American challenging team it will jeopardize the chances of the Americans winning the trophy back, all agree. It would also practically mean the elimination of Wright from the team and thus add additional complications as it is the belief of all the experts Ward and Wright comprise the most formidable doubles pair that it is possible for this country to send against the Belgians, French, Australians, and Englishmen. Wright has been showing rare form in his play with Ward, and his place on the challenging team could not be filled so as to assure the Americans success in the doubles event.

Raymond D. Little, the ex-intercollegiate champion of Princeton, is expected to arrive from New York before the end of the week. Several other of the ranking lawn tennis players are also scheduled to appear, so that the men who are to try for the International Cup may have practice against players of their own calibre.

MISS ADEE'S TENNIS HONORS.

Racquet work of the most strenuous type on the part of Miss Juliet Adee yesterday won for her and her partner, Frederick Watson, the final honors in the lawn tennis tournament of the Southampton mixed doubles on the canvas covered courts of the St. Nicholas Rink. Seven times Miss Adee was within a stroke of defeat at the hands of Miss Jeanie Barger-Wallach and her partner, Theodore Roosevelt Fell. Each time Miss Adee swooped down on the ball at the net like a whirlwind and by splendid smashing and driving that outplayed "Teddy" Fell on his own territory Miss Adee saved the match for her side and won it by the score of 3—6, 7—5, and 6—1.

BOARD OF REVIEW RULINGS.

Many Disputes Among National Trotting Men Judged and Adjusted.

The Board of Review of the National Trotting Association began its annual session at the Murray Hill Hotel yesterday to consider questions of rule and to settle disputes arising among horsemen within the National body.

The most interesting case was presented against James Butler, President of the Empire City Driving Club and a leading New York horseman. It involves $30,000 paid to him contrary to the instructions of the National Secretary by various associations, the product of the winnings of certain of Mr. Butler's trotters.

The contest arises because of the allegation that Monroe Salisbury of California, while manager Access, by the purchase of horses employed by Butler as manager of some of his horses and was financially interested in two of them, Consuela S., 2:17¾, and Arleto, 2:09¾, who won $14,000 of the total amount in controversy. No decision in the case was reached. It is expected a settlement will be effected to-day.

Other important cases presented for consideration incuded several appeals from previous judgments entered. In almost every case the former action was reaffirmed. In the case of J. E. Goldberg of Detroit, suspended because of non-payment of entrance fees for his horse John McEwen, this plea was entered that the offense was committed during the owner's illness by his trainer, without his knowledge, and that the trainer had entered the horse subsequent to its suspension without authority. In spite of this, the suspension was continued.

Similar action was taken in the case of William Barnsdale, Jr., of Bradford, Penn., and his trainer, Allie Merrifield of Baltimore.

The suspension of James Wilson of Buffalo, whose horses were entered at the Allentown meeting by C. A. Smith, as trainer, under aliases, without his knowledge, was raised, and a case ordered brought against Smith instead. The temporary reinstatement was ordered of George B. McC. Wellover of Lock Haven, charged with starting the horse Dentine at Erie, Penn., under the alias Svengali. Similar action was taken in the instance of a number of leading trotting men in the case of Fred Tompkins of Ossining, N. Y., suspended since 1895 for starting a horse out of class.

The Newton (Conn.) Fair authorities were ordered to refund entrance fees in races which did not fill on its card at its last meeting, and R. C. Mitchell, R. E. Platt, H. G. Curtis, and P. H. McCarty were suspended until the order was complied with. G. B. Lewis of Oswego, N. Y., was suspended until the money won by his horse, Afton L., at Elmira, Liberty, and Rochester, while under suspension, was returned.

In the case of P. P. Barton of Scranton against L. A. Patterson of Cachondale, Penn., it was decided that Brighton, Patterson's horse, started out of class at Cobleskill and the return of Brighton's winnings was ordered. Brighton made a mark of 2:19½ at Norwich, N. Y., on Sept. 1, three weeks before the Cobleskill race, and, according to the ruling, should have been barred by the conditions of the latter race.

TO DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Proposal to Have Eastern and Western Athletes Meet.

The Executive and Advisory Committees of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America met in Philadelphia a few days ago and discussed among other things a meeting between the Western and Eastern track champions. F. B. Ellis, graduate manager of the intercollegiate games and also manager of the University of Pennsylvania relay meet was the originator of this idea.

His plan was to hold the intercollegiate championships and the conference track meet on the same day, and then the first and second man in each event in the both meets compete a week later. The result of this meet would determine the champions of America. It was the idea to have the Eastern team go West the first year and then have the Westerners come East in the following year.

There is little likelihood of the project going through this year, as both associations have already fixed May 30 as the date for their championships.

Greater New Yorks Could Not Hit Winter and Were Easily Beaten.

The Greater New Yorks sustained another defeat at the hands of the Boston team at American League Park yesterday, and the victory was accomplished in such easy style as to cause much surprise among the 2,500 spectators. Coming here with a record of but three victories and ten defeats, six of the latter being at the hands of the Washington club, it was not expected that the champions would show any sudden reversal of form, and the local team and admirers had additional consolation in the knowledge of all the experts Ward and Wright comprise the most formidable doubles pair that it is possible for this country to send against the Belgians, French, Australians, and Englishmen. Wright has been showing rare form in his play with Ward, and his place on the challenging team could not be filled so as to assure the Americans success in the doubles event.

Raymond D. Little, the ex-intercollegiate champion of Princeton, is expected to arrive from New York before the end of the week. Several other of the ranking lawn tennis players are also scheduled to appear, so that the men who are to try for the International Cup may have practice against players of their own calibre.

Winter was by no means invincible, however, in the fifth inning, in which a single and a double were made, Winter kept the hits against him down to three.

On the other hand, both Puttmann and Powell were batted freely. The cold weather undoubtedly operated against the efficacy of the New York pitchers, while it had the opposite effect on Winter. It was a contest in which batting was responsible for the victory. The fielding was of the ordinary kind, there being but one instance in which the play partook of a brilliant character. That was in the fourth inning, when Chase caught Parent's low hit with one hand, which resulted in a double play.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, May 2.—St. Louis fell victim to the sixth successive shut-out on these grounds to-day. Kitson was very steady and effective in tight places. Morgan was somewhat wild, and this cost most of the runs, hits following bases on balls. Gleason's work at third base was the fielding feature. The score:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New Yorks Beat Boston Through the Mistake of Pitcher Young.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 2.—Pitcher Taylor was hit at will by the Boston Nationals this afternoon, and but for the most stupid kind of a play by Pitcher Young the champions would have been defeated. For seven innings the local men were in the lead, but in the eighth, with his team one run to the good, Young committed a blunder that would make a schoolboy hang his head with shame. Two men were out at the time, and the visitors had men on second and third bases. Donlin hit to Young, and, instead of throwing to first, where he could have put out Donlin with ease, one of the "Giants" yelled to Young to throw it home. He foolishly obeyed, and Gilbert slid under Needham with the tying run. In the tenth inning Gilbert led off with a double, went to third on Bowerman's sacrifice, and scored when Ames sent a fly to right field.

Taylor was hit safely ten times, and most of the Boston hits came together. New York got eleven hits off Young, but Needham's weird throw to third in the fifth inning gave the "Giants" two runs.

Taylor was so easy for the locals that McGraw played his winning card in the eighth, when he sent Clarke to bat for Taylor and Clarke responded with a neat single to right field. Ames took Taylor's place in the eighth inning, and, after allowing Raymer to get second on a base on balls and a wild pitch, he struck out the next three batsmen. In the ninth inning, with men on first and second and none out, Ames put out three men in order. In the tenth inning the locals did not get to first.

Devlin's fumble of Cannell's hit, Tenney's infield out, and Abbaticchio's single gave Cannell a run in the first. In the second Sharpe doubled and scored on a sacrifice and Needham's single. Wolverton forced Abbaticchio at the plate in the third, and then scored on a passed ball and Barclay's single. Four singles, a base on balls, Donlin's fumble, and a wild pitch gave Boston three runs in the fifth.

Wolverton's failure to field Bowerman's hit, Taylor's sacrifice, and hits by Donlin and Strang gave Bowerman a run in the third. In the fifth Bowerman singled and Taylor got first on called balls. Donlin sacrificed. Strang hit to Raymer, who caught Bowerman at the plate. Needham threw over Wolverton's head to get Taylor, and the latter scored. Strang flied out to Bresnahan's hit. In the sixth Dahlen got first on called balls on Devlin's hit an infield out, and Raymer's fumble of Taylor's grounder.

In the eighth Dahlen reached first on called balls, and Devlin flied out to Cannell. Gilbert singled to centre, and Bowerman flied out to Raymer. Clarke hit to right field, scoring Dahlen. Donlin hit to Devlin, who threw home instead of to first, and Gilbert was safe at the plate. Donlin was caught stealing second.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST COMMERCE CARRIERS

Eighteen Years' Work of the Inter-State Commission.

FORMAL CASES TOTAL 770

Courts Refuse to Enforce the Board's Orders in 24 Out of 32 Rate-Discrimination Decisions.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—In response to a resolution of inquiry adopted by the Senate on Jan. 10 concerning the number of complaints against commerce carriers filed with and disposed of by the Inter-State Commerce Commission since its organization, the commission to-day submitted a reply to the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce.

The number of formal complaints filed with the commission from April 5, 1887, the date of its organization, to March 1, 1905, is 770; the number brought to final hearing and determined by the commission or otherwise concluded, 400; cases settled or discontinued, 206; indefinitely postponed, 74; cases heard, but not decided, 20; partially heard, 27; not heard, 43.

The commission has rendered 312 formal decisions, 24 memorandum decisions, 13 decisions on application for rehearing, and five decisions for relief under the long and short haul provision of the statute.

Since Jan. 1, 1900, 2,296 informal complaints have been filed and 2,171 disposed of by the commission. Prior to the date mentioned, informal complaints usually were received in the form of letters and filed away as correspondence.

The number of cases heard and determined by the commission and taken to the courts to enforce the commission's orders is forty-five. In eight cases the ruling of the commission was sustained; in twenty-nine cases the courts declined to enforce the commission's orders; four have been discontinued, and four now are pending in Circuit Courts.

In twenty-three cases the courts held, directly or by implication, that the statute did not give the commission authority to make the orders sought to be enforced; in other words, that the things done which constituted the grievance could not be prevented under the present law.

The number of cases involving unjust discrimination taken to the courts is thirty-two. In eight the ruling of the commission was sustained, and in 24 the courts refused to enforce the orders.

The commission says that "these are typical and representative cases. They illustrate the different kinds of injustice and wrongdoing of which complaint is made and which are found to exist, and show, in most instances, that the regulating act, as construed by the courts, does not give the commission authority to apply the needful remedy."

Hugh L. Bond of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad continued his statement before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce to-day. He argued that the present law was adequate for all purposes, but declared it was unfortunate that the act was weighted with many duties. Discriminations as well as rebates between persons were now prevented.

While Mr. Bond was discussing the power of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, Senator Cullom asked:

"Could we not give the commission power to say when a rate is unreasonable? That is all there is in the case."

"That is all there is in it, but it has gone much further than that," replied Mr. Bond.

"It seems to me," remarked Senator Clapp, "that if there is only one question here we ought to get down to it."

"Let us have no flimflam here," continued Mr. Bond.

He then asserted that what Chairman Knapp asked for when advocating the Nelson-Esch-Townsend bills in 1902 was not the same as the commission wanted now as shown in the Esch-Townsend bill, or the Hepburn bill, which, he said, was "just as bad."

James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railroad will be heard by the committee to-morrow.

FOR COLUMBIA'S NEW HOME.

Rutherford Stuyvesant Pierrepont Said to Have Given $500,000.

At a mass meeting held at Columbia University yesterday, President Butler and Dean Van Amringe addressed the undergraduates upon the plans now being outlined for the creation upon South Field of a new college home. As outlined by President Butler and Dean Van Amringe, the plans call for the erection upon the east, or Amsterdam Avenue, face of the field of a new building, to be known as Hamilton Hall, which will be the centre of the new college establishment, the completion of Hartley and Livingston Halls, the dormitories now under construction, and the building of as many more residence halls as the increase in the number of students may demand. The west face of South Field will be devoted to buildings for the School of Fine Arts and other departments.

No mention was made by either of the speakers of the name of the donor of $500,000 to Hamilton Hall, but it is generally believed in university circles that Rutherford Stuyvesant Pierrepont, a senior in the academic department, gave the money. A rumor that a gift for this purpose would be forthcoming from the Pierrepont family before commencement day has been heard about the campus throughout the Winter.

Mr. Pierrepont is an oarsman of ability and one of the most popular students on the Heights.

When Hartley Dodge was a senior in the college he gave the university $300,000 for Hartley Hall.

At the conclusion of the meeting the students and officers present, headed by the senior class in cap and gown, marched to South Field and the first spadeful of earth turned in preparation for beginning work on Hamilton Hall was thrown up by Dean Van Amringe.

MUSICAL INSTITUTE PLANS.

Frank Damrosch Tells of New Organization's Wide Scope.

On the North German Lloyd steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm, which sailed yesterday, was Frank Damrosch, who has gone to Europe on a search for teachers for the newly established Institute of Musical Art, chartered by the Regents of the State University, endowed with $500,000 by James Loeb, and which has also a large annual subscription. Mr. Damrosch said:

"I am going to Europe to engage, if possible, eminent teachers for the institute—especially for voice and pianoforte. Of course, the institute wants the best that can be had, but we do not intend to ignore American talent when it is of the highest class. The newspapers have already spoken of the engagement of Franz Kneisel and the members of the string quartet which bears his name for the string department. That ought to serve as an earnest of our purposes.

"Perhaps there will be no harm in saying that we are also negotiating with Ernst Schilling—Paderewski's pupil, who has played twice in New York this season—for the pianoforte department, and Mrs. Hess Burr of Chicago for the vocal.

"We have leased the old Lenox mansion at 53 Fifth Avenue, and are making alterations to fit it to the purposes of the school. We have arranged, also, to provide that 'atmosphere' of which we hear so much when foreign schools of music are discussed. The students are to have the privilege of admission to private rehearsals of some, if not all, of the principal orchestral and choral societies in the city.

"Courses of study have all been arranged. There will also be special artistic courses, and for entrance to these high qualifications will be enforced. There will be a course for teachers of music in the public schools, a preparatory course for pupils of all ages, and a course for lovers of music who wish to learn how to listen to music.

"We expect to open on Oct. 11."

HEARST BUYS COSMOPOLITAN.

Gets John Brisben Walker's Magazine, It Is Reported.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, May 2.—It was reported here to-day that William Randolph Hearst has purchased The Cosmopolitan Magazine from John Brisben Walker. The terms of the transaction could not be learned, but one of the conditions was said to be that Mr. Walker should be managing editor for five years. Mr. Walker denied himself to correspondents who sought confirmation of the report, but there is no doubt that the deal has been made.

At the office of The New York American, Mr. Hearst's newspaper, no verification of the report could be obtained last night, though it was said that rumors to the effect that the purchase had taken place had reached the office. Mr. Hearst himself sailed for Europe yesterday.

CHURCH TRUSTEES RESIGN.

Leave Williamsburg Congregation When Plan for Union Fails.

Because consolidation between the Ross Street Presbyterian Church, in Ross Street, near Bedford Avenue, Williamsburg, and the First Reformed Dutch Church, at Bedford Avenue and Clymer Street, could not be brought about, six Trustees of the former church have resigned. They are John S. McKeon, Col. Andrew D. Baird, Horatio G. Craig, Charles W. Hubbell, John N. Darlington, and Samuel G. Dobbs.

Since the Williamsburg bridge was opened the character of the neighborhood has changed and many members of both churches have moved away. The six Trustees of the Ross Street Church who have now resigned, came to the conclusion last Fall that a union of the two churches would be for the best interests of both. The matter came before the Ross Street Church society and all the members of the Board of Trustees were in favor of consolidating for pecuniary reasons. Since then some of the Trustees have changed their opinion.

The annual meeting of the church society was held Monday night, at which the Treasurer's report showed a large deficit. It was made up by those present, but the six Trustees who were in favor of consolidation resigned and their places were immediately filled.

JOKE CAUSED FATAL WORRY.

Frightened by Remark, Hotel Man Died on the Same Day.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, May 2.—Worry over a friend's jest is said to have been responsible for the death of Leon Kahn, proprietor of "The Old Homestead," a hotel at Union Avenue and First Street, Mount Vernon. Kahn was forty-two years old, and until recently had never been sick a day during his twenty years' residence here.

He met an old friend on Saturday morning who said jokingly:

"Another white shirt will finish you."

Kahn went home and asked his boarding mistress if he looked bad.

"Why, no," she said. "You haven't looked better in years."

Kahn, though, wasn't satisfied. During the day he asked at least two dozen friends if he looked sick. They all answered in the negative.

That night Kahn's heart began to pain him and Dr. A. T. Banning was summoned. Heart disease was the physician's diagnosis, and a few hours later Kahn was dead. He was buried this afternoon in the Jewish Cemetery in Sherwood Park, Yonkers.

A NOVEL BARBER'S SHOP.

Some Remarkable Appliances Employed in The Times Building.

From The Barbers' Journal.

George Duncan's shop, which has just been opened in the new Times Building, at Times Square, which is at the junction of Broadway, Seventh Avenue, and Forty-second Street, cost $10,000 to fit up, and the rent is $4,000 a year. This is said to be the limit of cost and rent for a barber's shop in New York.

The shop is in the basement on the Seventh Avenue side of the building, its daylight coming through hundreds of vault light lenses. Its illumination at night is by incandescent electric bulbs in the plaster cornices. The entire color scheme is white, enlivened only by sprays of delicate pink floral wreaths embossed on the white tiles that surround the nine beveled and square plate glass mirrors which form the background and face the nine white enameled Kline ball-bearing chairs.

A continuous slab of white marble, supported on polished nickelplated posts, carries the toilet accessories. A white marble washstand with nickelplated open plumbing, of course, is arranged, as is also a marble sterilization plant.

The shop is a sanitary one; indeed, a vacuum cleaning plant sucking out all the dust and dirt. Even the woman who scrubs the floors has abandoned the mop and removes the soapy or rinsing water by the aid of a suction pipe. The bootblack removes all the dust and dirt from shoes by the same process, and, instead of the whiskbroom, uses the suction arrangement to remove the dust from one's hat and clothing without scattering it.

This same process is used instead of the conventional blowpipe, which gives the recipient a cold in the head, to draw away loose particles of hair and dandruff without scattering them.

The main shop is a long, rectangular-shaped one with an "L" attached. In the "L" room are the manicures and chiropodists, while a third adjoining and connecting room is the office and waiting room. All the floors are the finest small-size white Carrara marble mosaics with Grecian borders of red, white, and black. The wainscoting is white tiling. The only woodwork in the shop is that of the doors and show window frames, and they are of oak, fireproofed and heavily varnished.

Duncan, the boss of this swell barber's shop, has long been an interesting figure in New York barberdom—for he is the man who received the biggest tip that a journeyman barber ever got. Duncan was employed in the Hotel Cadillac for over seven years, and among his customers was Douglass Gordon, a wealthy young man about town. One day, in June, 1903, while Duncan was shaving Gordon, the latter asked him why he did not open a shop of his own. Duncan said that he was without means or he would at once buy a good shop that was for sale for $1,400. Gordon, when he paid for his shave, handed Duncan a check for $1,400, and told him to go buy the shop he wanted. Duncan bought the shop at 672 Eighth Avenue, and after running it for a year sold it to the New York Barber Company—its first Convention.

He then retired to Middletown, Conn., where he bought a tobacco farm of seventy acres, which he still owns. But he could not keep out of the barber's business, and for some time has owned a fine shop at 455 Amsterdam Avenue, corner of Eighty-second Street, which is now for sale.

In the Times Building he is again on his old familiar stamping grounds among the horsemen, autoists, theatrical folk, and professional people in the heart of the hotel and theatre district of New York. Messrs. Schunck & Ogg of 222 Canal Street, New York, fitted up this superb shop, which is one of the great features of the wonderful Times Building, itself one of the sights of New York.

The Times Building, in which this barber's shop is situated, is worthy of special note. It is the most remarkable business structure standing on the globe. The Pyramids of Egypt, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Eiffel Tower, and all other topliftical structures erected by man pale into insignificance.

This structure is at Forty-second Street and Broadway, which might be called the centre of New York City—and of the American Continent, for that matter. The building is 476 feet high, and nearly half of it is underground. From the curb to the roof is 362 feet, from the curb to the lowest basement 97 feet.

There are twenty-four great skyscrapers in New York, but, except the Park Row Building, these are all far below the Times Building. Of course there are higher things in the world, but they are in the shape of towers, spires, &c.

The tower on the City Hall in Philadelphia, on which stands the bronze statue of William Penn, is 537 feet high. The Washington Monument is 555 feet high. The Eiffel Tower in Paris is 984 feet high. The Cathedral of Cologne is 525 feet high. The Pyramid of Cheops is 480 feet high. The Strasburg Cathedral is 468 feet high. The Cathedral of Milan is 355 feet high. Stocks Improve Further; Call Money Easy, 2¾@3¼%.

Continued Progress Made in the Correction of the Excessive Speculative Reaction.

Yesterday's market was characterized by a strength both more spontaneous and moderate than that shown on Monday, springing from a confidence in the situation more diffused than was felt on the earlier day. It then required more independence of judgment than the majority possessed to resist the facts and canards unsettling confidence, but the leaders having shown the way, a following was quickly attracted. The encouraging thing was that there was so little realizing upon the advance thus established, suggesting that the stock taken was held for something more than a turn. Yesterday even the pooled stocks shared in the improvement, notably Tennessee and Smelters. Exceptional movements were the decided weakness in Consolidated Gas upon Albany selling quite as much as upon Albany legislation. If history repeats itself, these profits will be harvested with difficulty. Assuming that laws for cheaper gas are enacted, it will be long before they are enforced, and meanwhile this closely held property will sell for whatever insiders choose. Northwest also showed specific strength upon the announcement of an issue of stock upon terms offering stockholders rights figured at 17 per cent. No sales were made at that figure, the bid and asked price being about equally distant from the calculated worth.

The day's market was moved more by these considerations than by the effect of the day's developments, which nevertheless may yet have greater effect. Disregard of shots in Warsaw and Chicago was reasonable enough yesterday, but they are reminders that there are disturbing factors apart from the struggles of the Stock Exchange. The weakness of sterling was the reflection of London's confident purchases of our securities, and is welcome at a time when Paris is bidding for gold. The price of copper metal was reduced, but the course of Amalgamated reflected rather sympathy with the stock market movement than with the commodity upon which the company's profits depend. Mexico entered upon the gold standard with as little incident as the United States when it passed through a similar experience, but the market here took no note of it, although London placed a higher estimate of its effect upon the worth of Mexican securities. The wheat market was firm, although the weekly report makes the condition "unusually promising." The strength in corn can hardly be attributed to the same influence as the planting is not yet done. The cotton crop is now under the influence of acreage reports, of which three leading estimates are remarkably close to a decrease of 14 per cent. The April report of failures reflects conditions as sound in trade as in the reports of railway and industrial corporations.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Dull Market, as Conservative Bankers Expected—Everything Bearish.

The market yesterday fulfilled the expectations of conservative banking interests by displaying a tendency toward dullness. The total amount of shares dealt in dropped from 1,600,000 for Monday to barely a million shares yesterday, thus demonstrating that liquidation had run its course, but that at the improving prices there was not much demand for stocks. This is in line with the ideas of the conservative banking interests, who believe that the market is entitled to a rest. There were absolutely no rumors of any importance, and there was no news to account for any movement either way—evidence that there was a lull in the battle, and that both bulls and bears were resting on their arms waiting for further developments.

Against Bull Campaign.

There is a very distinct impression prevalent in the Street just now that the large banking interests do not favor a resumption of an active bull campaign at this time. The word seems to have gone forth mysteriously that an advance in the market must be without the support of the big interests until further notice. For this reason traders expect a fluctuating market for some time with, if anything, a downward tendency. The short interest is believed to have covered to a large extent, for the demand in the loan crowd was reported as not at all urgent, and the buying power in the market outside of the short interest is considered unimportant at this time.

***

Union Pacific Meeting.

Expectation regarding the outcome of the meeting of the stockholders of the Union Pacific on Friday next at Salt Lake City is quite on the qui vive. The Street has an idea that the outcome of that meeting will throw a light of considerable meaning on the situation in the Northwest. The stocks of railroads concerned in that situation were all quite uncertain in yesterday's market. Union Pacific advanced slightly, while St. Paul declined fractionally. Between the two the Street did not know what position to take. The opponents of the Harriman 'dea are very mysterious about the attitude they propose to take. It is quite reasonably certain that unless they have a good chance to win out they will stand aside at the meeting. But it appears to be equally certain that they will not rest in their endeavors to accomplish whatever plan they may be working on until they have carried their day. Until then conflicting ideas are likely to make themselves felt in the market.

Nearly All Bearish.

Almost all the traders were again bearish yesterday. They put out lines of short stock as prices advanced during the day on the theory that without any visible means of support the market was bound to sag back. Their ideas were not borne out by yesterday's movement, but few of the short sales made yesterday were covered, for the traders believe that unless there is some substantial reason to keep stocks buoyant, their tendency is to sell off. The market is absolutely professional now, and is likely to remain so for some time.

Bear Drive Failed.

In the second hour of trading yesterday some of the bears made an attempt at a drive at the market. They found, however, that prices showed a considerable amount of resistance to attempts to depress them, and the drive was abandoned. The refusal of the market to give way attracted a good deal of favorable comment, and a number of shorts thought it advisable to cover their contracts. There is an old adage that it is dangerous to sell a dull market, but when that market combines dullness with stubborn resistance to selling orders then it becomes doubly dangerous.

Field and Others Back.

Traders that had been lost sight of during the recent advance are again very much in evidence, and they are pushing their advantage for all it is worth. Jacob Field attracted more attention yesterday than he has for weeks, and other floor operators on a large scale, unconsciously or otherwise, imitated his example. In the recent advance Jacob Field was entirely eliminated as a market factor, but the break in prices enabled him not only to recoup whatever losses he may have had previously, but to collect a substantial profit besides.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 2.—Money was in pronounced demand in the market to-day for the consols settlement and various calls, including Exchequer bonds, $10,000,000, and Grand Trunk, $3,750,000. Discounts were easy. The demand for bar gold for France was keen.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was generally quiet and cheerful, despite the disturbances in Russia. Consols were easy, owing to stiff contangoes, but they closed steady. A moderate investment demand hardened first-class securities.

Americans were the liveliest section. They opened weak, and advanced to well over parity on New York and local support. Operators were cautious, following Wall Street rather than taking the initiative, while the position there is uncertain. In the afternoon stocks further improved on Wall Street, and Continental buying and closed firm.

Foreigners were quietly firm, with a hardening tendency, especially Japanese. Imperial Japanese 6s conversion 6s of 1904 were quoted at 100⅝.

Yesterday's fall in copper attracted a fair amount of buying to-day. The metal closed at 65½.

Money, 1½@2½ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 2⅜ per cent.; for three months' bills, 2⅜ per cent.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 32.02; Lisbon, 7.25.

Bullion to the amount of £20,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to Malta.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 2.—A much stronger tone pervaded the market to-day. United Railways incomes opened at 58¾, a gain over yesterday's close of ⅛ per cent., and rose to 59⅛. United Railways 4s gained ¼ per cent. Brewing lists made a substantial gain of 1 per cent. Maryland Telephone first 5s, which have remained quiet for several weeks, this morning opened ¾ per cent., at par. Atlantic Coast Line 4s gained ¼ per cent.

In the trading in bonds there were a few which had fractional losses. Carolina Central 4s lost ¼ per cent., to 98¼. Atlantic Coast Line of Connecticut twenty-year 5s opened steady at 96¼, and dropped to 96. Other bonds were steady.

In the stock list United Railways certificates sold up to 14¾. The local money market shows lenders well supplied with funds, and offerings have tended to retard the movement toward higher rates, while the reserves of the National banks in the city are averaged below the legal requirement, there does not seem to be any scarcity of money. The total sales were: Shares, 580; bonds, $226,500. The list follows:

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Substantial Gains Made by Nearly All Active Issues.

United Copper Preferred Regains 3 Per Cent. Dividend — Northern Securities Stubs in Larger Demand.

All the stocks that assumed any prominence in the market for outside securities yesterday were strong. In most issues the trading was not in large volume, but the showing was favorable in comparison with the previous few days, when the business was practically confined to a few issues. United Copper continued among the most active issues. The preferred yesterday sold ex dividend of 3 per cent., and in addition to recovering the full dividend advanced nearly two points more. It closed at 72½, showing a net gain of 4½ points. The advance was due to buying by insiders, who say that the stock has been selling too low. Comparison is made with Amalgamated, and the claim is advanced that United preferred paying 6 per cent. is entitled to sell higher than Amalgamated, paying 4 per cent. Insiders also lay stress on the fact that United Copper preferred has an issue of only $5,000,000, about one-thirtieth of the amount of Amalgamated Copper.

***

STANDARD OIL rose yesterday to 635 and then dropped back to 624. The impression prevails that within the past few days orders have been given to buy Standard Oil with the apparent purpose of advancing the price. It is claimed that several buying orders have appeared in the market at the same time from the same source, a method that is better calculated to put the stock up than to secure it as cheaply as possible.

***

NORTHERN SECURITIES was strong all day. Just at the close it reacted fractionally from the highest, but it closed with a substantial net gain at 160¾. The stubs were also in larger demand. They sold as high as 525 and closed at 500, a gain of 100 points.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 2.—New York exchange to-day, time and call loans, 3½@4½ per cent.

Further improvement in the Rastern market aided in another rally in some of the stock on the local Exchange. Can preferred was the leader in both activity and strength, nearly 1,500 shares changing hands during the morning on the scale-up from 70 to well above 71. Can common held well above 12. Biscuit common was in small demand and rallied fractionally to above 60. The preferred was easy around 117. Other issues that showed some morning strength were carbon common, with a gain of over a point at 61½, and Subway at 54. Elsewhere pressure persisted. Ogden Gas 5 per cent. bonds fell 2 points, to 91; West Chicago stock dropped 5 points on a sale of 50 shares at 45, and both Boxboard issues were liquidated. The preferred sold down a point, to 11, and the common dipped again below 2. Afternoon trading took Can preferred to 72, and there was a small rally in Boxboard issues. Carbon common improved another point, to 62½. Subway eased again. Edison went at 160. The list follows:

Kansas City Southern Proxies.

The Kansas City Southern Railway Company Proxy Committee, Herman Sielcken, Chairman, calls attention to the stockholders to the fact that the books of the company will close on May 7 for the purpose of the Annual Meeting to be held on May 17. SOUTHERN IRON PROSPERITY.

Alabama Consolidated's Report Shows Much Larger Output.

Although the merger of the Southern iron properties has fallen through, for the time the prosperity of the iron industry in the South has not diminished the slightest. According to the report of the Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron Company for the first quarter of this year, the net earnings were $190,936. After paying fixed charges this left a surplus of $135,000.

The output of the company has been greatly increased within the last few months, the average output of coal now running to about 14,000 tons a week, or at the rate of 750,000 tons a year, and the coke to over 25,000 tons a month. The iron output, likewise, is being greatly increased, and in addition the company is now building as rapidly as possible another furnace at Gadsden at a cost of $350,000 to make 200 tons of iron a day.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Deal for Prominent Parcel on Sherman Square—Thirty-second Street Building Sold—High Price Near Times Square—Sales by Brokers and at Auction.

Bryan L. Kennelly has sold for Lyman Rhoades and John Harsen Rhoades the property on the north side of Seventy-third Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, having a frontage of 68.3 feet on Seventy-third Street and extending 75 feet along Broadway and 78 feet along Amsterdam Avenue. This property, facing Sherman Square and opposite the Seventy-second Street Subway station, is one of the most prominent on the west side. The buyers, James Butler and Peter McDonnell, will add several stories to the buildings now on the site and convert them into business structures, with bachelor apartments on the upper floors.

Sale of 32d Street Building.

The J. C. Lyons Building and Operating Company has sold the new eleven-story building 11 and 13 West Thirty-second Street, on plot 50 by 98.9.

High Price on Forty-fourth Street.

The dwelling at 104 West Forty-fourth Street, 16 by 100.5, has been bought by John Dunston, the Sixth Avenue restaurateur, through his attorney, Champe S. Andrews. The price paid for the property, $42,750, it is believed, establishes a new high record in the street blocks between Sixth Avenue and Times Square. Mr. Dunston bought recently the abutting properties 103 and 105 West Forty-third Street, and also controls, under a long lease, 759 to 763 Sixth Avenue. Plans are now being prepared by Architects Carpenter & Blair for the remodeling of the Forty-fourth Street house and for the erection of a new building on the vacant space at the rear of the properties controlled by Mr. Dunston. This instance of business expansion is very largely attributed to the recent opening of the Hippodrome.

Builders Buy on 138th Street.

Schreiber & Reinlieb have sold for Henry Feuerstein the plot 200 by 100, on the north side of One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street, 150 feet west of Amsterdam Avenue, to a Mr. Frederick, and have resold the property to builders for improvement with five five-story forty-foot apartment houses.

The Harlem Presbyterian Church has sold its property, 100 by 99.11, on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, 35 feet west of Madison Avenue, taking in exchange the plot, 100 by 100, at the southwest corner of Mount Morris Park West and One Hundred and Twenty-second Street, owned by J. C. Lyons.

Sol Stern has resold for Jacob C. Simon the three five-story flats, 56, 58, and 60 West One Hundred and Seventeenth Street, each 25 by 100.11. Mr. Simon bought the properties through the same broker about a month ago.

FOR SALE.

The Unearned Increment

is a very real thing; it is the money which comes to us through no exertion of our own. In no way can it come to us so surely as by owning land which is bound to increase in value. You want a home of your own, but at the same time you want a good investment for your money. I can offer you both. Larchmont Park, where I want you to buy and build a home is in Larchmont, on the Sound, only eighteen miles from 42d Street, and directly on the line of all the tremendous improvements in transportation which are now under way. This is not a cheap land development scheme; it is a high class residential park intended for, and being rapidly brought up by, the right kind of people, and you are neglecting your opportunities if you do not see it and write me for full information.

CUP YACHT MAYFLOWER WAS SAFE IN THE MUD

That Is, for a While—Then She Stayed at Anchor.

AND NOBODY LACKED FOOD

Sunday Party on Old Cup Racer Had Good Time Despite Delay in Getting Back.

The yacht Mayflower, which was the successful defender of the America's Cup in the international races of 1886, which sailed away with a party of pleasure seekers on board on Sunday afternoon, and which had not been heard from late Monday night, turned up safe and sound in the mud inside Sandy Hook yesterday morning, with everybody on board well, and, contrary to expectations ashore, supplied with a well-filled larder.

The news that the whereabouts of the Mayflower was causing some anxiety to Mrs. Joseph B. Mally, whose sister, Mrs. E. M. Barker, owns the Mayflower, became known on Monday night, when Mrs. Mally telephoned to THE NEW YORK TIMES and inquired if the marine news contained any reference to the famous old craft.

Word came from the Hook yesterday morning that the Mayflower was ashore. Soon after this Joseph Percy Mally, brother-in-law of Mrs. Barker, the owner, chartered the tug Mutual and started in the direction of the Hook to ascertain the exact situation of the party, one of whom was Miss Edna Berton, his sixteen-year-old stepdaughter. By the time he had got to the Hook the yacht was about to start on the return voyage to New York. She had been pulled out of the mud by a tug on Sunday night, but had stayed at anchor all Sunday night and Monday because a stiff wind was blowing.

There was a lively exchange of greetings between the lone passenger of the Mutual and the party on the Mayflower. Mr. Mally jokingly remarked that he was under the impression that some mighty green skippers were at large in the vicinity of New York. Mr. Mally then offered to take everybody on board the Mutual, but only his stepdaughter was willing to desert the Mayflower. A few minutes later she had been transferred to the tug, which immediately started back to the city.

The party on the Mayflower, in addition to Miss Berton, consisted of her aunt, Mrs. Eva M. Barker, the owner of the yacht; Mrs. T. C. Campbell, widow of Cole Campbell of Clifton, N. J.; her sons, Colin and George, and a crew of three men.

"I am awfully sorry they got so worried at home," said Miss Edna, "but really we did have a bully good time, even if we did get shipwrecked with only a lunch basket of sandwiches and sweet things to eat on board. You know, all was simply lovely until we got into the Shrewsbury River, and then all of a sudden we poked our nose into some soft mud that ought to be somewhere else, and there we stuck. Previous to grounding Mr. Campbell, I mean Mr. Colin Campbell, who said he knew all about the Shrewsbury, had taken the helm. You know the result.

"For an hour or two we struggled in the mud, trying to get back to deep water, but it was no use. Then along came a tug and pulled us off. Then we sailed into the Horseshoe and anchored. Yesterday morning an awful wind was blowing and we simply had to remain at anchor and wait for the breeze to cool down before starting back.

"In the meantime some of our men folks went ashore in the naphtha launch and bought a grocery store, the result being that we had all the food we wanted."

JOHN W. WOOTEN INDICTED.

Former Federal Bank Counsel Accused of Grand Larceny.

John W. Wooten, of 58 West Seventy-fifth Street, former counsel for the Globe Security Company and the defunct Federal Bank, was indicted by the Grand Jury yesterday afternoon on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree. Wooten was arrested at 132 Nassau Street by County Detective Reardon. He was taken to the District Attorney's office, and as all the other Judges had gone was arraigned before Recorder Goff in Chambers. He was held in $1,000 bail. Having no bondsman he was compelled to go to the Tombs for the night. The indictment was based on the allegation of Benjamin F. Caston of 57 Warren Street, who charges that Wooten has misappropriated the proceeds of a check for $1,000 made out to David Rothschild, former President of the Federal Bank, and who is now in Sing Sing Prison. Wooten was taken to the Fifth Street Police Station Monday night, where he was later bailed out by Frank Platt.

TWO CLAIMED LOST BABY.

Mrs. Donohue Sure It Is That of Missing Son.

Two bereaved parents, Mrs. Edith Donohue of 735 Eleventh Avenue and William Chalmers, a piano mover, of 597 West Fifty-second Street, yesterday claimed the body of a boy, eight or ten years old, which had risen to the surface of the North River at the foot of West Fifty-second Street. Their controversy attracted a crowd, and it was necessary to call out the reserves of the West Forty-seventh Street Station to keep the curious in check.

Mrs. Donohue's boy, Joseph, disappeared about six weeks ago, and was believed to have been locked in a freight car and carried West on the New York Central Railroad. Mr. Chalmers's seven-year-old son on the Monday of Holy Week asked his mother for a penny to buy a "chicken in a basket" in a candy store. He got his penny and went to the street. Twenty minutes later John Macauley of 732 Tenth Avenue, William's playmate, brought back the lad's cap and told his mother that William had fallen into the water off the West Fifty-second Street pier and drowned.

After Chalmers had called his wife to look at the body yesterday he yielded his claim, as the mother after a glance decided it was not their boy.

Despite the pleadings of Mrs. Donohue, the body was taken to the Morgue, where the bereaved woman was told to go and make her identification. The Coroners' office delayed acting in the case for four hours.

GIVE SKIN FOR CHILDREN.

Ginsbergs Were Among Victims of Allen Street Fire.

To save the lives of their two children, who were severely burned in the fatal Allen Street fire, Abraham Ginsberg and his wife have given up large portions of their own skin. The girls, Elsie, twelve years old, and Annie, four years old, are in the Beth Israel Hospital, Cherry and Jefferson Streets, with the father and mother. The grafting operation was performed by Dr. Benjamin E. Sheitlis, and he expects that the two girls will recover.

The physicians decided about a week ago that Elsie and Annie could not get well unless some one gave skin to replace that which had been burned. The father immediately submitted himself to the operation.

Mrs. Ginsberg, who is still far from well, insisted that she, too, be allowed to contribute cuticle, and Morris, the sixteen-year-old son, wished to undergo the operation instead of the mother.

"Ginsberg was the most patient, uncomplaining patient I ever had," said Dr. Sheitlis yesterday. "He is devoted to his children and will do anything for them."

Ginsberg's eldest daughter, Rosie, perished in the fire. She was found dead, with nine others, under the roof. They were suffocated in their rush to escape.

WOULD SELL OLD EXCHANGE.

Members of Produce Board Suggest Erection of New Building.

Members of the Produce Exchange yesterday circulated on the floor of the Exchange for the signatures of other members a proposal that the Produce Exchange building be sold, and that the Exchange construct a high building on the site of the Produce Exchange Annex, with an exchange floor in it.

It was said by other members that there is little likelihood of the suggestion being adopted. The Exchange has contracts with the Produce Exchange Safety Deposit Company running twenty-five years, and this probably would prevent the sale of the big building.

The Produce Exchange Building cost more than $3,000,000. It is now valued at more than $5,000,000. There are some mortgages on it.

The floor of the exchange is much larger than is needed for the business now done. Chicago has the lead as a wheat and grain market, and for the last dozen years the market and membership in active trading have dwindled.

FIRE LADDER FOR KIM.

Little Maltese Friend of All the Boarders in Danger at Fire.

Kim, a popular Maltese cat, nearly lost one of his lives yesterday afternoon in a fire in the four-story flat house, at 100 West Fortieth Street, which caused $2,500 damage and sent its occupants, mostly theatrical people, in a panicky flight to the street.

Mrs. Bertha Hansom, who owns him, was so excited that she fled without looking for the cat. When she remembered him she told the firemen. Looking up, they saw Kim standing uneasily on a third-floor window sill.

Truck No. 24's extension ladder was put up to the window, and Fireman John Weldon went up. Kim was in such a hurry to be rescued, as the smoke was very thick behind him, that he jumped down two or three of the uppermost rungs and into Weldon's arms before the fireman reached him.

The fire started in the basement and spread through the dumbwaiter shaft to the apartments of Mrs. Bertha Ginsberg, on the top floor, where most of the damage was done.

JOYOUS FOUNDLING, THIS.

Elizabeth Rose, who lives at 467 Columbus Avenue, was going down the stairs yesterday afternoon when she discovered a baby lying at the foot of the stairs in the hallway. The infant boy was laughing away at the full capacity of his lungs. Patrolman Murphy of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, who was called in consultation, said that he kept on laughing at the police station, and was still at it when he started for Bellevue Hospital.

The parents of the child evidently are well-to-do. The little boy is about four months old, with big blue eyes. He wore a white linen cap with little blue ribbons, a long white dress, and white jacket, all of good material.

DOESN'T BELIEVE IN JURIES.

Unless Case Cannot Be Tried by Judge, Says Marean.

Justice Marean of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, in a decision handed down yesterday, had something more to say about juries. In the suit of James MacQueen, as receiver of the Southeast Building Company, against the company and several of its creditors to sequestrate the property, the receiver seeks to hold the Directors for their official acts, alleging that when they knew the corporation to be insolvent they conveyed all of its assets to one of the Directors. An application was made yesterday by the receiver for a jury trial, and Justice Marean said:

"I don't believe in jury trials myself. Where great contradiction exists, perhaps it is as well to have a jury, but where there is no question as to what happened there is not much to raise a doubt in the mind of a Judge."

"No case should go to a jury that can be tried by a Judge," added Justice Marean. After some further debate, he denied the motion.

Pleads Guilty to Murder.

James Boyne, the steward of the Avon Beach Democratic Club, who on April 3 murdered Mary Wilson at the St. Lawrence Hotel, in East Thirteenth Street, pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree before Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday. Sentence was postponed until Wednesday.

ARCHITECTURAL LEAGUE'S REGULAR TICKET WINS

Opposition Candidates Defeated by 108 Votes to 27.

CONTEST WAS NOT EXPECTED

Appearance of Rival Aspirants for Office a Surprise to Most of the Members Present.

The Architectural League is intact. The insurrectionists were defeated at last night's annual election by a vote of 108 to 27. The anti-exhibition platform was buried, and the "regular" ticket won in a walk.

This ticket was nominated at a dinner held about three weeks ago. The nominees were:

For President—Richard Howland Hunt; for First Vice President—Karl Bitter; for Second Vice President—Joseph Lauber.

For Members of the Executive Committee:

Class of 1907—William Martin Aiken.

Class of 1908—C. Monroe Hewlett.

For Delegate and Alternate to the Fine Arts Federation (for two years)—Delegate, Arnold W. Brunner; alternate, Frank E. Wallis.

The conservatives had believed that no rival ticket would be named. To the surprise of the majority of those present William Hull headed an opposition movement, nominating Julius Harder for President, and W. W. Kent, Charles W. Levitt, Jr., F. W. Ruckstuhl, John J. Boyle, and George Keister for members of the Executive Committee. The same Vice Presidential nominations were made on both tickets, but the indorsement of the opposition was yesterday declined when Messrs. Bitter and Lauber said that they were not "Harder men."

"It must be apparent to any one who has closely followed the recent history of the league that a distinct effort is being made to minimize its influence for public and professional good and to confine its activity to but one of its functions—namely, its exhibitions. This is significantly indicated in the following statement contained in the last published report of the Executive Committee on Page 30 of the Year Book of 1904-5:

"'The annual exhibition is the chief end and existence of the Architectural League; or, in other words, it is the principal means of accomplishing the work of the organization.'

"As the league is not only the strongest organization of its kind in the United States, but the only one that includes in its active membership architects, sculptors, and painters, it is therefore the only organization that can speak authoritatively on public questions affecting the interests of all three professions. It is the only organization that from its active membership can appoint a committee comprised of the strongest men of these professions in the fine arts. It therefore seems to me to be a most regrettable circumstance that the past power and influence of the league should be thus curtailed.

"The league exhibition is ranked by many as unique and the most influential of the year. This is due to the fact that under the auspices of an Exhibition Committee composed of its members the league has been enabled to collect in the past a comprehensive and representative exhibition in architecture and the allied fine arts.

"The recent innovation of a jury makes this an impossibility. At the annual meeting an amendment of the constitution was offered which would have practically the Executive Committee in their absence as to the jury system. This amendment was decisively defeated, and the sentiment strongly expressed against this innovation. Notwithstanding this unfavorable action the Executive Committee again appointed a jury, the composition of which [illegible] given no representation of the league. On this committee of seven [illegible]

NEW YORK MASONS IN 124TH SESSION

State Grand Lodge Meets at Masonic Temple.

TO BUILD A SANATORIUM

Monument to be Erected to Memory of P. G. M. Daniel D. Tompkins—Foreign Relations Harmonious.

The one hundred and twenty-fourth annual communication of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York opened yesterday in the Masonic Temple, and will end to-morrow with the election of grand officers. Grand Master Frank H. Johnson in his address called attention to the prosperity which has attended the fraternity during the year and to the harmony which had pervaded the entire jurisdiction. He reported a considerable gain in membership, a reduction in the number of lodges under dispensation, and the establishment of a Masonic sanatorium for consumptives.

On foreign relations the Grand Master said:

"The utmost harmony exists between the Grand Lodge of New York and all the Grand Lodges of the world recognized as sovereign grand bodies of ancient craft Masonry. Our relation with these has been of the most pleasurable character. Exceeding courtesy and fraternal regard have marked all our intercourse, and every transaction of whatever nature has been conducted with perfect kindness and affability and in the true spirit of our common brotherhood."

He reported five dispensations issued for the establishment of new lodges, including lodges at Old Forge, Ravena, Brocton, and in the Borough of Brooklyn.

ALEXANDER RESIGNS AS A HYDE TRUSTEE

Says Bringing of Charges Against Him Justifies Act.

MILLS QUITS INVESTIGATORS

Equitable Officers Ordered to Court in Tull Suit—More State Insurance Commissioners Here.

Following intimations that suit would shortly be begun for his summary removal as a Trustee of the Equitable Life stock belonging to the estate of the late Henry B. Hyde, President James W. Alexander of the society last night resigned his trust. Mr. Alexander sent a letter to James H. Hyde explaining his reasons for the step.

Another important development in the Equitable controversy yesterday was the announcement by Darius O. Mills that he had quit the Frick investigating committee, having taken no part in its proceedings from the first. Mr. Mills has sent a letter to Henry C. Frick regarding the matter. He said last night:

"I resigned because I did not have the time, with my other affairs, to take the part in the Equitable investigation that I would desire to take were I to serve on the committee. There is no other reason, and I have notified Mr. Frick of my decision."

Reports were current yesterday that another member of the committee was going to leave it, but these could not be confirmed, and one member, who declined to be quoted, said that he did not believe that any one else would resign. The committee is now left with five members—Henry C. Frick, E. H. Harriman, Cornelius N. Bliss, M. E. Ingalls, and Brayton Ives. The last three were among the supporters of President Alexander in the meetings of the Equitable Directors, at which mutualization was discussed last Winter.

FRICK COMMITTEE'S WORK.

Several unofficial statements were issued yesterday in connection with the controversy. From Alexander quarters came the assertion that Mr. Alexander had not yet submitted his report in answer to the request of the Frick committee, and that pressure had been brought to bear on him to make his answers as general as possible for the "welfare of the society." It was also declared that the activity of the Frick committee thus far had been confined to negotiating for a peaceful solution of the questions at issue, and that while it had made no suggestions directly to Mr. Alexander the good offices of William Nelson Cromwell, mentioned a few days ago in connection with talk of a receivership action, had been offered looking to some sort of a settlement in which all could coincide.

Mr. Cromwell's recent visit to Washington being contemporaneous with dispatches from there late last week that the Presidency of the society had been offered tentatively to George B. Cortelyou, the Postmaster General, were recalled. Mr. Cortelyou has declined to discuss the matter and Mr. Cromwell's denials thus far have been confined to the report that his firm was interested in the preparation of receivership papers. Yesterday President Alexander had this to say:

"All reports that anybody has been asked to be President of the Equitable are obviously false. I have been elected President by the board and have no intention of resigning, and there is no body of men having the authority to offer the Presidency to any one. Caution should be exercised in accepting unauthorized rumors, many of which are circulated for a purpose."

In connection with this statement by Mr. Alexander, in which he did not deny that it had been suggested to him that he resign, it was said on good authority that such a proposition had been made to him some days ago on certain terms and that he had answered that he would not resign, but if forced out, he would go out reserving the privilege which a man who is forced out has to say whatever he wants to say.

ALEXANDER'S LETTER TO HYDE.

Mr. Alexander's letter is addressed to Mr. Hyde and William H. McIntyre as co-trustees, and is as follows:

"Referring to the agreement of Sept 17, 1895, in which I was named as one of seven Trustees of the majority stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, I hereby resign as one of said Trustees, and request an immediate acceptance of my resignation. The powers and duties imposed upon the Trustees under the agreement are purely nominal. All the Trustees other than myself named in the original agreement have ceased to be Trustees, either under the operation of the agreement or by resignation, and, although I have hitherto been willing to continue in my nominal relation as a Trustee to the subject matter of the agreement, I now feel at liberty to relinquish even this slight relation in view of the wholly unjustifiable charges so widely circulated by you that I have been guilty of a breach of duty as such Trustee in advocating the admission of the policy holders of the Equitable Life Assurance Society to some participation in its management.

"The purpose of the late Mr. Henry B. Hyde in making the agreement referred to was to prevent the controlling interest of the stock of the Equitable from being sold. This is manifest from the terms of the agreement, and until June 6, 1906, when Mr. James H. Hyde becomes thirty years of age and the agreement by its terms expires, this purpose is unalterably accomplished.

"The agreement, while apparently investing the Trustees with certain voting powers, left their exercise entirely subject to the will and consent of Mr. James H. Hyde.

"In the second paragraph of the agreement this provision is contained:

"After the said James Hazen Hyde shall at-

FIRE ON THE POLICE.

Eastman Gang Members Put Up Fight in 14th Street After Hold-Ups.

Two men, said to be members of the "Monk" Eastman gang, terrorized Fourteenth Street last night, and after a fusillade of revolver shots with Capt. McDermott of the Fifth Street Station and four of his men were beaten into submission.

They are Joseph Brown, twenty-three years old, of 28 Second Avenue, and Thomas Murphy, twenty-eight years old, of 294 Henry Street. No one was hurt, but the sound of the shots aroused the neighborhood and brought a crowd into the street.

The two men are alleged to have held up the billiard room at Fourteenth Street and Fourth Avenue, where one man was robbed of $5, another of 50 cents, and another of 40 cents.

James Wilson of 326 East Fourteenth Street said that he was held up at Third Avenue and Fourteenth Street by the men and relieved of $1.40 about 11 o'clock, when there were many persons in the streets. All the robberies, the victims say, were made at the point of a pistol.

Capt. McDermott, with Detectives Wasserman, Butler, and Moran, and Detective Reardon of the District Attorney's office, left the Fifth Street Station on the run when the news of the hold-up reached them. They rounded up the two men at Fourteenth Street and Third Avenue and chased them to Second Avenue. There the pair turned up the avenue to Fifteenth Street, with Butler and Moran close after them.

Turning west into Fifteenth Street, Brown, the detectives say, turned around and fired two shots at his pursuers. Butler returned the fire, calling to the men to halt. They kept on running toward Third Avenue, however, and Murphy stepped out into the street and fired three times at Butler, who again shot.

The detectives closed with the men at Third Avenue just as Capt. McDermott and the other detectives got up with them. The pair fought viciously, the policemen clubbed them into submission and took them to the station house.

The police say that Brown was "Monk Eastman's" lieutenant, and that he had just returned from doing six months' imprisonment. They say that he is under $1,000 bail for an alleged assault on a policeman of the Leonard Street Station. Both are charged with felonious assault and with carrying concealed weapons.

FOUR OVERCOME BY GAS.

Priest Administers Last Rites to Couple in Ambulance.

Four persons were overcome by gas in the tenement house at 308 East Fortieth Street late last night, and it is said that one will die. He is John Cleary, a laborer, fifty years of age.

The Rev. Father Flynn of the Church of St. Gabriel in East Thirty-seventh Street got into the Bellevue Hospital ambulance in which Cleary and his wife, Bridget, were being taken to the hospital, and administered the last rites of the Church.

James, three years of age, and Bessie, one year old, children of James Lyons, were also overcome, but were revived at their home. It is supposed that the gas leaked from an insecure pipe in the hallway of the house.

James J. Devane, mate of the Charities steamboat Massasoit, with John Cavanaugh, were going to Devane's rooms on the fourth floor when they smelled the escaping gas. They broke into the rooms occupied by the Clearys and found the couple unconscious. The Lyons family, across the hallway from the Clearys, aroused by the sound of the forcing of the doors, investigated their own flat, and found their children overcome in the front room.

I'LL NOT RESIGN—HOOKER.

Justice Breaks Silence for First Time Since Charges Were Made.

Special to The New York Times.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., May 3.—Judge Hooker broke silence to-day for the first time since the first publication of the charges against him in connection with the Dunkirk and Fredonia Post Office scandals. He denied indignantly the report that he was to resign. He said:

"No, Sir, it is not true. I will not resign. There is not a word of truth in the report, and not a shred of foundation for such a report."

There was no hesitation about this response. He made evident his intention to fight the case to a finish.

ALBANY, May 3.—Gov. Higgins said to-night that he believed an extra session of the Legislature, perhaps in June or "a little later," would be necessary for disposal of the case of Supreme Court Justice Hooker. He did not believe the Hooker matter would be considered at the special session on gas which he might feel obliged to call immediately.

WATER SUPPLY BILLS PASSED.

Agnew Measure Ready to Sign—Mayor's Plan Goes to Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—Both the Agnew State Water Commission bill and Mayor McClellan's water bill were passed by the Senate to-day. The vote on the Agnew bill was 28 to 8 and on the Mayor's bill 39 to 3. The former goes to the Governor, but the Mayor's bill, having been amended, goes back to the Assembly.

Senator Brackett attacked the Agnew bill, saying:

"There is no use of mincing words; it is a vulgar grab for patronage. That is all there is of it. It is an old legislative game that when you give something to a city to which it is entitled you compel it to accede some patronage in return."

When Mayor McClellan's bill was taken up, Senator Elsberg declared it was indefensible to strike out the provision which permitted the city to generate electricity from the water sources, adding:

"If I could do so without defeating the bill, I would move to have the measure restored to its original form."

CHICAGO STREETS SCENE OF MANY STRIKE RIOTS

City Almost at the Mercy of Lawless Element.

DUNNE WANTS NO TROOPS

Mayor Won't Call on Governor Till All Other Resources Are Exhausted.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Chicago appears to be at the mercy of the teamsters' strike. Police have to escort the vans of the leading merchants through the streets; riots and assaults may be seen all day and night anywhere in the business districts; shoppers are held up by pickets for carrying their own purchases; women who try to take home bundles in cabs are dragged out of the vehicles; hundreds of ignorant negroes are imported as strike breakers and turned loose in the city; 2,000 additional special policemen are sworn in, and there are calls for the militia and regular troops.

The situation is approaching anarchy. The police up to the present time have behaved with excellent discipline, but they are outnumbered 100 to 1 by the rowdy and idle element. Several officers have been wounded.

A furious riot which resulted in probably fatal injuries to a non-union driver and bruises to two policemen took place to-night at West Harrison and Desplaines Streets. A delivery wagon of a large department store was driven by Sidney Chambers, a negro, and escorted by Police Officers John Sharkey and James Kelly. A drunken man picked up a stone and followed the wagon, cursing the driver. He was soon joined by others, and in a few minutes a crowd was around the wagon, hurling bricks, stones, and bottles.

It was driven south in Canal Street until Polk Street was reached, and there a union teamster drove a truck across the way and blocked further progress. The wagon was driven into an alley, and Chambers, the driver, jumped and ran for his life.

Chambers dashed into a saloon in Polk Street, followed by a howling mob. He was refused shelter in the saloon. He then ran to a small shed on the bank of the river, where he attempted to hide. He was soon discovered, and beaten almost insensible. He was dragged to the roof of the shed, and the mob attempted to throw him into the Chicago River. They were unable, however, to pitch him far enough, and he fell on a coal pile on the river's edge. The mob surged after him, and again began to beat him. His nose was broken, his head was cut in many places.

Some of the men employed by the Employers' Teaming Company are armed with rifles, and one of them fired at a crowd to-day, but the bullet hit no one. The express companies and the merchants generally are moving their goods, but the rioting continues, and two men were sent to Gov. Deneen to sound him on calling out the militia. The State troops are said to be under emergency orders.

The Mayor has requested Sheriff Barrett to swear in 2,000 additional deputies, and every available man in the police force has been ordered to report for strike duty. The Mayor proposes to call upon at least 1,000 citizens to act as special policemen.

One of the most flagrant attacks was near noon, when twenty United States Express guards were fired on from an alley. No one was killed, but the assailants got away.

When the committee of the Employers' Association went to Springfield to-day to confer with Gov. Deneen and to request him to give orders to the State troops, the labor unions also sent a delegation to the Capitol to protest.

Mayor Dunne was emphatic in his declaration to-night that he would not acquiesce in any call for outside assistance in preserving order, and intimated that he would strongly oppose any attempt to secure armed protection.

"We have by no means reached the limit of reserves," the Mayor declared to-night. "If I should reach the time that I find we could not convey wagons and that all of our reserves have reached their limit, then only will I call for outside help. I do not want to humiliate our city in the eyes of the world."

The first rifle shot fired during the strike went whizzing through a crowded thoroughfare to-day. The shot was fired by a guard on a wagon of the United States Express Company while it was passing through a crowd of strike sympathizers at State and Randolph Streets. In driving past the corner the driver of the wagon reined his horses suddenly. A guard within the wagon poked his head instantly from the vehicle, and, seeing a street car conductor stooping as though to throw a missile, pulled the rifle trigger. No person was hit, and it was said later that the conductor who narrowly escaped death was intent solely on his legitimate work of "throwing a switch."

One hundred and fifty wagons of the seven express companies went to and fro across the city to-day, and in many cases completely unguarded, and at no time under the supervision of more than one or two policemen. Every wagon carried a guard armed with rifles or double-barreled shotguns.

The strikers and their friends were indiscriminate in assaulting people. There were a number of instances where mobs boarded street cars and wantonly attacked passengers, giving as a reason later that they were strike breakers, when, in fact, they had nothing to do with the strike. W. Jamison and Edward Boswell, the latter a negro medical student, were two sufferers of this class. The mob that boarded a State Street car, in which Jamison and Boswell were riding, dragged the two men off and beat them unmercifully. Walter Norton, a negro, while passing Van Buren and Market Streets, was proclaimed to be a strike breaker and beaten almost to death. Up to 7 o'clock to-night a score of men had been taken to hospitals with all sorts of injuries.

Fully forty were injured in the various fights of the day. In one fight at Har-

Schwab and Flint Said to Have Sold Argentine and Chilean Ships.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 3.—Rumors have been current for several days that Charles M. Schwab and Charles R. Flint of New York have effected the sale of the Argentine and Chilean Navies to Russia.

The Admiralty denies the rumors, but this evening they are gathering force. It is even declared that several transports are leaving Kronstadt with sailors to man the purchased vessels.

I learn that fifteen special trucks, capable of conveying 120-ton submarines, have been constructed at the Putiloff works for the transport of submarines of the Boubnoff and Holland types to Vladivostok. The Admiralty is also sending ten sixty-foot naphtha launches there.

Nothing is known at the Admiralty of alleged orders for ships to be built in America. No vessel has as yet been ordered abroad.

PARIS, May 4.—According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Petit Parisienne, several transports will leave Cronstadt on May 6 for South America, conveying crews and military stores for the equipment of warships purchased by Russia from Chile and Argentina.

BISHOP CODMAN INDICTED.

Protestant Episcopal Prelate Charged with Criminal Libel.

Special to The New York Times.

WISCASSETT, Me., May 3.—The Grand Jury in Lincoln County to-day returned an indictment for criminal libel against the Right Rev. Robert Codman, Bishop of the Diocese of Maine of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

W. Howard Gardner, a well-known business man of Camden, Me., was the complainant. He alleges that Bishop Codman termed him "an excommunicated member of the Church" in a letter which he wrote to the Rev. Mr. Plant, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Dresden, Me. Mr. Gardner says he admits he is no longer a member of the Church, but he was never excommunicated, and the Bishop had no right to speak of him in those terms.

When seen at his residence in Portland to-day the Bishop would make no statement except that he thought the charge was too petty to be brought into court.

MAY BE MRS. GELSHENEN.

Arriving Passenger, However, Says She Is Her Sister.

A woman who was said to be Mrs. Catherine Gelshenen, who sailed for Europe about four months ago somewhat earlier than was expected by District Attorney Jerome, who desired her to testify in the Morse-Dodge matrimonial suit, arrived yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. On the passenger list appears Herr Galshenen und familie," but a private list shows the party to include a Miss Gelshenen, Mrs. Gelshenen's son, eighteen years old; the Misses A. Lawson, M. Dunne, and Miss Corinne.

"I am not Mrs. Gelshenen," said the arriving passenger, "I am her sister. I have nothing to say for her. She does not desire any notoriety. She has been subjected to too much already."

"Mrs. Gelshenen was a passenger on this trip?"

"I don't care to go into her private affairs."

"Has she come back to testify before the Grand Jury in the Dodge-Morse case?"

"I don't see why she should be dragged into that episode."

The entire party went to the Hotel Netherland, although Mrs. W. H. Gelshenen's residence is at 1,006 Fifth Avenue. District Attorney Jerome was not in town yesterday. James M. Beck, Mrs. Gelshenen's lawyer, refused to discuss the matter.

SPECIAL TRAIN HIT HANDCAR.

President Clarke Journeyed Mile a Minute to Buffalo.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 3.—While running at the rate of a mile a minute a special train drawn by Lake Shore Engine No. 682 struck a handcar about twenty-eight miles from Painesville, Ohio, this forenoon.

According to an official report received at the Buffalo office of the Superintendent of the Lake Shore no one was injured in the wreck. The train had been chartered by E. A. S. Clarke, President of the Lackawanna Steel Company, so that he could get to Buffalo in time to catch the Empire State Express, which leaves the New York Central station at 1 P. M.

Mr. Clarke made the journey on time, reaching Buffalo about twenty minutes before the time for the departure of the train. The train was chartered at Cleveland by Mr. Clarke because he wanted to reach New York to attend an important meeting.

The handcar was smashed to atoms and the engine was slightly disfigured, but otherwise no damage was done.

PHYSICIAN HEALS HIMSELF.

Ambulance Horse Bolts After Collision and Dr. Rorke Is Hurt.

Dr. James Rorke of the St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica, was his own patient last night after an accident which resulted in injury to himself, damage to the ambulance in which he was riding, and the running away of the ambulance horse, which had become terrified by the vehicle's collision with a trolley car.

Dr. Rorke was responding to a call at Hempstead Crossing in Queens when the accident occurred. The ambulance swung out of Bay Street into Fulton Street, and while crossing the car tracks was struck in the rear by a fast moving trolley car.

Dr. Rorke was pitched ahead into the ambulance. Before he could recover the horse became unmanageable and bolted down Fulton Street. After it had gone several blocks two men ran out and, getting hold of the lines, helped the driver to stop the runaway.

Dr. Rorke sustained severe bruises of

NIAGARA BILL PASSED WITH DRESCHER'S VOTE

Brooklyn Senator Yields to Over-Night Persuasion.

POWER SCHEME UNDEFENDED

Rumors of Combination to Put It Through Assembly — Governor Won't Sign, Says Marks.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—As the result of overnight persuasion Senator Drescher of Brooklyn to-day changed his vote on the Cassidy-L'Hommedieu Niagara Power bill and the measure was passed, 26 to 20. When the bill was up yesterday it failed of passage by one vote.

Senator Malby, one of its chief supporters, had left the chamber when the bill was reached, and Senator Cassidy asked that it be laid aside until his return. A messenger was sent out, and when Malby came into the Senate chamber again Cassidy called up the bill. Senator White demanded the regular order. The Cassidy bill, having been passed on the calendar, he contended, could not be taken up until all the third-reading calendar had been disposed of. Lieut. Gov. Bruce sustained the point, and the bill was not reached until late in the afternoon.

While the Sergeant at Arms was hunting for the absentees the opponents of the bill made two attempts to suspend the call, but were defeated. As soon as the twenty-six Senators pledged to support the bill were in the chamber Senator L'Hommedieu moved to suspend the call. Senator Grady was absent, but his vote was not needed.

Following is the vote:

Ayes—Ambler, Brown, Burr, Cassidy, Coggeshall, Cullen, Dooling, Drescher, Fancher, Fechter, Fitzgerald, Foley, Frawley, Gardiner, Goodsell, Hasenflug, Hawkins, Keenan, Kehoe, L'Hommedieu, Malby, Martin, McCarren, Prime, Riordan, and Wilcox—26.

Nays—Allds, Armstrong, Brackett, Carpenter, Cobb, Cooper, Cordts, Davis, Elsberg, Gates, Hinman, Lewis, Marks, Page, Raines, Saxe, Stevens, Tully, Warnick, and White—20.

Although the vote was announced by the clerk as 26 to 20, Senator Drescher's response to his name was so low that most of the Senators thought he had not voted.

"I did not hear the Senator from the Fourth vote," said Senator White. "I would like to know how he voted."

"How does the Senator from the Fourth wished to be recorded?" asked the chair, as all eyes were turned on Drescher.

"I voted in favor of the bill," he responded. He could not have been heard ten feet away had it not been for the stillness in the chamber.

The only attack made on the bill was by Senator Marks, (Dem.,) who declared:

"This bill is the greatest piece of highway robbery ever effected by a Legislature for the benefit of a corporation. The Governor never will sign it."

The measure now goes to the Assembly. It has been current gossip for a week that a combination which could not be broken had been formed to put it through the Assembly. Some of the leading Republican members of that body are in the combination. Despite the denial made by Gov. Higgins that he never has made a promise to sign the Niagara bill, there are influential members of the Assembly who have been using the argument to advance the measure that the Governor would approve it. The whisper, "there are millions in it," also has been frequently heard.

The Cassidy-L'Hommedieu bill was originally introduced as a general measure to give electrical companies incorporated under general laws throughout the State the power to condemn land for rights of way. When Mr. Leggett's Niagara, Lockport, and Ontario measure was withdrawn under fire the Cassidy bill was dug up from committee and amended so as to make it satisfactory to the Lockport company by including all corporations operating under special charter as well as general law. In its present form, it is alleged, the bill would validate franchises of the Lockport company allowing it to drain Niagara Falls dry if it desired to and to sell its power all over the State.

Gov. Higgins, when asked this evening if Senator Fancher, who represents his home district, had represented him in voting for the Cassidy Power bill, said:

"Senator Fancher is not representing me; he is representing the Fiftieth District."

MASKED MEN ROB BANK.

Cover Officials with Revolvers—Are Surrounded in Swamp.

WOODBURN, Oregon, May 3.—The Bank of Woodburn was robbed of $2,000 this afternoon by two masked robbers, who covered the cashier, Tracy Poorman, and the bookkeeper, Miss Gertrude Eddy, with revolvers. One robber stood guard while the other rifled the cash drawer.

Soon after the robbery most of the male population of Woodburn was armed, and within an hour the two robbers were located in a swamp.

The swamp has been surrounded by large numbers of armed men, and it is believed the robbers will be captured.

PANIC AT VIENNA OPERA.

Catastrophe Averted by Director Mahler's Presence of Mind.

VIENNA, May 3.—Near the end of the first act of "The Magic Flute" at the Imperial Opera to-night the electric wires behind the stage became short circuited. A panic resulted, but serious results were averted by Opera Director Mahler.

Some women in the audience perceived flames and cried "Fire!" whereupon the audience crowded toward the door. The actors' efforts to calm the audience were in vain, whereupon Herr Mahler proceeded to the piano and played it vigorously. The people were thus finally quieted, and the performance was concluded before a half-filled house.

There were many foreigners, including Americans, among the brilliant audience, which loudly cheered Herr Mahler for his action.

BALTIMORE, May 3.—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company announced to-day the award of contracts for 10,000 freight cars to cost in the aggregate about $12,000,000.

This is the largest single order for cars ever placed by any railroad in the country. Deliveries are to be made between September next and Jan. 31, 1906.

Supposed Plan to Steal the Imperial Funds at Moscow.

The sinking was caused by a trench eight feet deep.

STILLMAN'S GIFT TO FRANCE.

$100,000 for Prizes at the Fine Arts School in Paris.

PARIS, May 3.—M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador at Washington, has advised the Foreign Office that James Stillman, the New York banker, has given $100,000 to establish prizes for the School of Fine Arts here.

The gift, which was unsolicited and unexpected, is in recognition of the facilities France has given to American art students.

PRESIDENT STILL SHUT IN.

Storm Unbroken and Campers Do Not Attempt to Hunt.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., May 3.—For three days President Roosevelt's hunting party has been storm-bound. Rain or snow has fallen continuously and to-night there was no sign of a break.

The roads are muddy and the trails dangerous for horsemen. The hunters intended to remove to East Divide Creek on Monday, but as the party will break up on Saturday the camp probably will be moved to the head of Garfield Creek as soon as horsemen can get through. Mountain streams are torrents and most of them cannot be crossed.

The President is very anxious to get a grizzly. Ten brown bears have fallen to the party, some of good size. President Roosevelt is expected in Glenwood Springs Saturday night instead of Sunday morning.

THROWN FROM CAR, WILL DIE.

Aged Man Found with Fractured Skull at Sheepshead Bay.

Edward Gannon, seventy-three years old, of 191 Steuben Street, Brooklyn, was found lying in the road in Coney Island Avenue near Avenue U, Sheepshead Bay, at 9 o'clock last evening, by a real estate agent named Wilson.

He was evidently badly injured and Dr. Dooling, who was summoned with an ambulance from the Coney Island Reception Hospital, found that his skull was fractured and said that he would die.

Later the police found witnesses who said they saw the old man thrown from a passing car and left to lie where he had fallen.

WILL HOLD COURT AT TRACK.

Justice to Hear Cases That Arise at Belmont Park.

Special to The New York Times.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I., May 3.—Justice Archer B. Wallace will be at Belmont Park daily to hold court in case arrests are made for disorderly conduct, intoxication, pocketpicking, &c. A room has been set aside for his use. This is following a precedent made by the Rockaway Hunt Club at Cedarhurst when steeplechase races were run there years ago.

At the Cedarhurst track were no cells to temporarily confine suspected persons, but there was a hole under the club house about fifteen feet in diameter and eight feet deep dug originally for a cellar and into this prisoners were dropped until the Justice could attend them. Then a ladder was lowered and they were brought up.

Belmont Park is in Hempstead township, and the holding of court on the grounds will expedite the disposition of many minor cases.

MOVED EVERYTHING BUT HER.

So Says Little Ellen, Whose Papa and Mamma Forgot Her.

"They moved the dog an' the goat an' papa's bed an' mamma's cupboard an' everything this mornin', but they didn't move me," wept a little girl, who was picked up early last night by a policeman on Third Avenue, near Fifty-fourth Street.

"I guess they forgot me," continued the little girl.

"I is Ellen Cahill, an' me father lived at Sixtieth Street, but he an' mamma moved this morning. I saw a wagonload of all kinds of our stuff going away, with Billie the goat, an' Nellie the cat an' Dewey the dog on top, but I thought they was comin' back."

Answering to questions of the police at the East Fifty-first Street Station, she gave home addresses extending from High Bridge to Bensonhurst. A policeman went out to find her home for her. At a late hour he hadn't returned.

DISAGREEMENT IN PATTERSON CASE

Jury is Discharged After Deliberating Thirteen Hours.

8 TO 4 FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Crowds in Streets Jostled Jurymen on Way to Dinner and Cried "Free Nan Patterson!"

The jury which has been trying Nan Patterson, the "Florodora" girl accused of the murder of Caesar Young, a bookmaker, on June 4 last, reported a final disagreement at 2:30 o'clock this morning. The jury was then discharged.

Nan Patterson was brought into court at 1:40 o'clock this morning.

The jury then reported that they were unable to agree, but after a long talk between the Recorder and the foreman, in which the Recorder laid stress upon the great expense to which the county had been in the three trials, the jury was sent back again, and Nan Patterson, who had been hastily summoned and was now almost in a fainting condition, was led back to her cell.

When the jury came in at 1:30 this morning after deliberating thirteen hours the court officers called "Hats off!"

Everybody was on tiptoe. Assistant District Attorney Rand came in with his associate, Mr. Garvan, and Attorney O'Reilly took his seat beside the vacant chair which was awaiting Nan Patterson.

The Recorder asked the foreman if the jury had been able to agree.

"We have not," he replied. "I am convinced that there is no hope of an agreement."

When the Recorder ascended the bench the defendant had not yet arrived and he called upon the court officer to explain her absence.

"She is ill," the man said.

"Is the Sheriff in court?" asked the Recorder.

"He is not. I went myself for Nan Patterson and was then informed that she was ill," spoke up another court officer.

The Recorder then ordered a court officer to go to the Tombs and bring the defendant into court if she was able to come. In a little while the Deputy Warden returned and said that the Tombs matron was dressing the prisoner.

At last Nan Patterson came in, after fully ten minutes. She was on the verge of collapse, and could hardly drag one foot after the other. An attendant on each side fairly lifted her into her place.

DEMONSTRATION FORBIDDEN.

Recorder Goff then whispered something in the ear of Clerk Brophy, who then announced that if there was any demonstration at any announcement that might be made the disturber would be immediately arraigned on a charge of contempt of court.

Recorder Goff then read a communication from the jury, but had hardly uttered a dozen words when the door opened and a man came in. The Recorder stopped, ordered the man ejected, and directed that the door be not again opened. The missive from the jury said:

"After careful consideration of all the evidence in the case we have reached the point where we believe there is no likelihood that we shall agree."

The Recorder then asked the foreman if he thought there was any possibility that they could be able to reach a verdict after further deliberation.

"I hardly think so," answered the foreman.

"Is there any point of law," the Recorder asked, "on which you require further enlightenment?"

"So far as I am concerned," the foreman replied, "my mind is clear. I cannot speak for the others." The Recorder then asked if there was any point in the evidence upon which they needed information, and received the same reply.

JURY QUICKLY RETURNED.

The jury retired and in about fifteen minutes sent word to Recorder Goff that it desired to report again. Again Nan Patterson was sent for and brought into the courtroom. She was still in a weakened condition and had to be supported to a chair.

The Recorder seemed displeased at the result and asked that the question be put to each juror separately. Each juror gave the same reply, "There is no hope of an agreement."

"Have you anything to say?" the Recorder asked Mr. Rand.

"Nothing."

The same question was put to counsel for the defendant, and then the jury was discharged.

As the jury started out Nan Patterson fell from her chair in a faint. Her counsel and the guards picked her up and bore her back to the Tombs, to which the Recorder had remanded her.

As soon as the news reached the waiting crowd there were cheers, and when the jury got outside it was all but mobbed.

None of the jury would say anything as to how it stood.

"We pledged ourselves before going into the courtroom to say nothing of our ballots," said the foreman.

When the jury returned from dinner it was known that it stood seven to five for manslaughter in the first degree. After this, it is said, the majority won over one of the four, making the final standing eight to four.

Counsel for Nan Patterson were confident that there would not be another trial. It was said that they had been assured that their client would be released on her own recognizance, and later the indictment against her would be quashed.

Nan Patterson was still unconscious when borne back to the Tombs by the guards. A doctor was hastily summoned an additional police escort was provided for the return trip, but the cries were repeated.

On the arrival of the Recorder he found the approaches to the building blocked by a dense crowd, through which he had some difficulty in forcing his way until he was seen by some of the policemen on duty there. The number of people gathered around the building at that time still numbered fully 1,000, most of them being jammed together on Franklin and Lafayette Streets, where a view could be had of the Bridge of Sighs.

CROWD PREPARED TO WAIT.

From the attitude of the crowd, it was evident that it had come there to stay as long as definite news was not had that no agreement would be reached during the night.

Sergt. Walsh of the Elizabeth Street station and a large squad of police had their hands full in keeping order and preventing the mob from wholly blocking up Lafayette and Centre Streets. Even with their best efforts, the latter thoroughfare was so congested that the street cars had to move very slowly past the Criminal Courts Building.

Nobody was allowed to enter the building but those directly connected with the case; that is, the court attendants, the lawyers, and the newspaper reporters. An exception was made for J. Randolph Patterson, the father of the accused girl, who occupied a seat in the courtroom and declared that he would stay through the night, or till his daughter was convicted or acquitted.

Assistant District Attorney Rand was not present, the office of Mr. Jerome being represented by Assistant District Attorney Garvan alone. Mr. Levy had likewise gone home, leaving Daniel O'Reilly on guard for the defense.

The Recorder said when he entered the building that he had come only to ascertain how matters stood and to find out whether there was any chance of an agreement. It was understood at the time that he would stay for an hour at least before deciding whether to lock up the jury for the night or discharge it without the return of a verdict.

It was a matter of much speculation as to what would happen if the jury was excused finally without having agreed.

While a number of persons seemed to take it for granted that such an outcome would result in the liberation of Nan Patterson, it was learned from members of the District Attorney's staff that no such certainty existed.

There was one case on record, it was pointed out by a man in a position enabling him to speak with authority, in which a woman charged with murder had been tried fifteen times before a jury agreed on a verdict.

And quite recently a negro woman was tried three times for murder before at last a conviction of manslaughter in the first degree was secured from a jury. This man said that, for all he knew, Nan Patterson might have to face the ordeal of a third—or, if the first mistrial before a complete jury had been secured, be counted, a fourth—trial.

CROWD LESS AT OPENING.

There was less crowding in the courtroom when Recorder Goff ascended the bench at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning than there had been on any previous day of the trial. Strict orders had been given to admit only those having business in the court, and the orders were strictly carried out.

The defendant entered the courtroom at 10:35. She was dressed all in black and was extremely pale. She seemed downcast and had little to say to her attorneys. She eagerly scanned the faces of the jurors as the Recorder began his charge.

In the beginning the jurors were cautioned to disregard the unusual public interest in the case and to weigh the facts before them calmly and deliberately. They were told that there was really nothing extraordinary about the case. The testimony showed that a man named Young, race-track habitué and bookmaker, had maintained the defendant, Nan Patterson. The relations of the two were not to be considered when it came to establishing the manner of his death. The usual instructions regarding the presumption of innocence were given. The Recorder made it plain that the burden of proof was upon the prosecution.

As to law, the Recorder said, the jury must accept his instructions. The jurors were the sole judges as to facts. The arguments of counsel for both sides, when unsupported by evidence, should be disregarded. The Recorder described the degrees of manslaughter. Abraham Levy, leading counsel for the defense, attempted to interrupt with the statement that his client was either guilty of murder in the first degree or not guilty at all, but Recorder Goff said that the jury was not bound to accept the statement of counsel as to the nature of the crime. It was the Judge of whether or not murder had been done, and of the degree, if murder there was. The prosecution, he said, claimed that the killing had been premeditated. That constituted murder in the first degree. If there had been intent to kill without premeditation that was murder in the second degree.

CASE A CIRCUMSTANTIAL ONE.

"The real question at issue," continued the Recorder, "is whether 'Caesar' Young killed himself or whether the defendant fired the fatal shot. There must be no speculation. No eye witness was called. The case rests on what is known as circumstantial evidence. If the evidence is susceptible of two constructions then the defendant must have the most favorable construction. Much has been said as to the matter of motive. The prosecution claims that the defendant shot Young because he had cast her off. It is not necessary to prove motive to convict of murder, but if a motive is shown it strengthens the circumstances."

The Recorder reviewed the circumstances of the acquaintance of Young and the defendant. He described the defendant's behavior after the shooting. The evidence was reviewed briefly, and in a manner which both Mr. Rand and Mr. Levy pronounced impartial. The request on the part of the defense to charge on several specific points was denied, notably the request that the fact that the State did not place J. Morgan Smith on the stand might be taken as proof that he was not the purchaser of the pistol with which Young was slain. In conclusion the Recorder warned the jurors to be swayed neither by sympathy nor by prejudice in reaching a verdict.

At 1:02 P. M. the charge was ended. The jury immediately retired, and the prisoner was taken back to her cell in the Tombs. The news that the case had been placed in the hands of the jury flashed around the neighborhood with wonderful rapidity, and the great throngs about the court building grew every moment.

Centre Street was blocked until a battalion of mounted policemen and a detail of reserves drove back the people. On the Lafayette Street side of the Criminal Courts Building there was such a jam that the police were powerless, and vehicles were unable to pass. On Franklin Street at least 5,000 people were gathered. They extended almost to Broadway. Every truck that attempted to get through was stopped, and as soon as it came to a halt the bolder spirits in the crowd swarmed upon it, and used it as a vantage ground.

COURT ROOM WAS CLEARED.

A short time after the jury retired instructions were given to clear the court room. Counsel for both sides came under the scope of the order. About 2 o'clock the reporters were readmitted, and this gave rise to the rumor that a verdict had been reached. Indeed, there was no movement about the court room that did not give rise to half a dozen stories.

About 2 o'clock the jurors went out to lunch. They walked to a restaurant on Park Row under the escort of a squad of police. As soon as they reached the street they were recognized, and ran the gantlet of thousands of curious glances and volunteered opinions.

On their way back, after a hearty meal, they were waylaid by camera operators, and laughed good naturedly as they were snapshotted numberless times.

On returning to the Tombs Nan Patterson lay down to rest. Daniel O'Reilly of her counsel called to talk with her, and at the close of his visit said the defendant was composed and able to bear any verdict.

The report reached Nan Patterson that the first ballot taken by the jury had been in favor of acquittal. This cheered her greatly. Her father called to see her, but was advised by Warden Flynn to stay away, as her sister, Julia Smith, was with her. He took the Warden's advice.

It was 3:45 o'clock when the jury returned to its room, and from then until about 6 o'clock there was a weary wait, broken only by one groundless report after another as to a verdict. There were all manner of estimates. At 6 o'clock messengers were sent for the Assistant District Attorney who conducted the case and for Mr. Levy. When they entered the courtroom a great crowd swarmed at their heels, as it was believed some definite decision had been reached.

JURY ASKED FOR EXHIBITS.

Clerk Brophy read a note from the foreman of the jury, in which several of the exhibits were requested. The exhibits asked for included the revolver with which the shooting was done, the clothes which Young wore on the morning of the tragedy, and a figure which had been used to illustrate the course of the bullet. The exhibits were sent to the jury room.

A little after 8 o'clock word reached the courtroom that the Recorder had gone to dinner in the company of Mr. and Mrs. Mellin. About ten minutes later the jury went out to dinner.

The crowd about the court building remained and seemed determined to wait all night, if there was any prospect of the jury coming to a decision.

Nan Patterson and her sister Julia were brought over from the prison about ten minutes before the jury went out for dinner and got seats in the "pen," where they remained for some time. The defendant seemed in better spirits than she had been earlier in the day. Lawyer O'Reilly said that she was more confident of acquittal than she had been at any time since Assistant District Attorney Rand began his summing up.

BURDENS END LONG STRIFE.

Brothers James A. and I. Townsend Now Completely Reconciled.

After an estrangement of nearly twenty years, I. Townsend Burden and James A. Burden have settled their difficulties and are friends again. The dispute between the brothers, which lasted so long, was about the big Troy iron property left by the father, Henry Burden, who invented the hook-headed spike, now used on all railroads, and the horseshoe machine.

When the father died and left all his property to his two sons they formed a corporation with $2,000,000 capital. The necessary third member was John P. Arts, and he received two shares from I. Townsend Burden's half of the total 2,000. This gave James A. Burden a controlling interest. Disagreements and lawsuits followed.

The friendly settlement is largely due to the efforts of Robert L. Cutting, I. Townsend Burden's lawyer. Mr. Cutting said yesterday that he had agreed not to make public the terms of settlement, but that the two families were now entirely reconciled. At the time the compromise was made there was pending a suit concerning the control of the $10,000,000 plant.

The Burdens are prominent in both New York and Newport society. At the home of I. Townsend Burden, 5 East Twenty-sixth Street, a number of brilliant entertainments have been given. James A. Burden's home is at 908 Fifth Avenue. His family is connected with the Vanderbilts through the marriage of James A. Burden, Jr., to Miss Adele Sloane.

FEARED BRIDGE WAS UNSAFE.

Bearded Brooklynite's Suspicion Brought Best—Nothing Wrong.

A man with a long beard who lives in Brooklyn was crossing the Brooklyn Bridge late yesterday afternoon when he saw what he believed to be a break in one of the main cables. He made a report of the matter, and a messenger was sent in a hurry after Bridge Commissioner Best, who was told that the Brooklyn Bridge was about to drop into the river.

Commissioner Best telephoned to Chief Engineer Nicolls, who has supervision over all the city's bridges, and in less time than it takes to tell it the Bridge Commissioner, the Chief Engineer, and several other officials were out on the bridge making an inspection. They were unable to find any break in the cable, and were about to give up the search, when Engineer Archibald McLean, who has charge of the Brooklyn Bridge, put in an appearance.

He made an inspection and found that the painters who had been at work said as they do every Spring, that is, they unwound some of the thin wire strands of the cable to insert white lead about the cables before painting them. When this discovery was made Commissioner Best and the army of engineers marched back along the roadway to Manhattan, and the bridge policemen out on the roadway released their breath.

NO FRICTION, SAYS HAFFEN.

Asserts Relations with Murphy Are Cordial as Ever.

Borough President Haffen of the Bronx denied last night at the annual meeting of the Jefferson Club of the Thirty-fifth Assembly District, that there is friction or disagreement of any kind between him and Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, because of the appointment of C. G. F. Wahle to the City Magistrate's bench.

The denial was in the form of a short address delivered at the new headquarters of the club, at One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Street and Courtlandt Avenue. Borough President Haffen said:

"I desire to say publicly and emphatically that my relations with Mr. Murphy are, as they have always been since he assumed the leadership of Tammany Hall, of the most cordial character."

EQUITABLE SUIT IN HARTFORD.

Based on an Error Made by Society's Advertising Department.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 3.—Actions have been brought by the State of Connecticut through Attorney General King against the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States and the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, alleging that advertisements of the companies published early in the present year in a Hartford newspaper do not correspond with the last verified statement made by the companies to the Insurance Department of this State.

The penalty of $500 provided by the statutes is sued for in each action. Service in the suit was made by leaving a copy of the complaint with Theron Upson, Insurance Commissioner.

Mr. Edwards of the Equitable advertising department, when asked about the suit instituted by the Insurance Commissioner of Connecticut, said:

"Usually the Equitable publishes its annual statement early in February, and this is published in all the principal papers in the United States. On Dec. 31, however, the society's business was so satisfactory that it was determined to publish what we called a preliminary statement. This advertisement was sent out throughout the country, but, unfortunately, I overlooked the fact that the insurance law of Connecticut demanded that any financial statement published by any life assurance company should conform to the last one published by that company in the State. I suppose that the error is up to me in not knowing all the laws of all the States, but in so far as the society's trying to mislead by this preliminary statement, I would say that in the regular annual statement published later the assets showed close upon $4,000,000 more than in the preliminary statement, the income over $1,000,000 more, and the [illegible] nearly $2,000,000 more."

ROOSEVELT WANTS JUST RATES, ASSERTS MORTON

Says the President Means to be Fair to Roads.

RAILWAY CONGRESS BEGINS

Appliance Exhibit Ceremonies—Westinghouse Says Electricity Will Supplant Steam.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—At the dinner given at the Raleigh to-night in honor of the delegates to the International Railway Congress Secretary Paul Morton made some interesting remarks about President Roosevelt and his attitude toward the railroads.

After describing President Roosevelt as one of the "most remarkable men of all the remarkable men who have occupied the White House," Secretary Morton said: "It will not be amiss on this occasion for me to say something of the attitude of the President on the railroad question. He wants nothing but what is right, and he is anxious that no injustice shall be done to the railroads, as he is that justice shall be done to the public. Unfortunately there have been abuses in the transportation business. Fortunately, they are growing less every year. It is very gratifying to those who know that to-day there is less discrimination, fewer rebates, and more equality in freight rates than ever before in the history of the country. But, through one device or another, there still remain here and there preferential rates which favor certain large shippers and which bear down unjustly on others. This is the condition of affairs that the President is doing his best to remove.

"The private side track arrangements by which unfair inside rates have been enjoyed by some of the big industries of the country, the earning of more than a fair return on private car investments, the payment of commissions of various sorts or rebates or preferential rates in any form ought to be entirely discontinued.

"I am sure there is not a railroad man here who does not heartily approve of this declaration. My own opinion is that if all vicious discriminations can be abolished the question of rates will adjust itself. I consider it a great piece of good fortune for every man, woman, and child in this country that, in the settlement of this matter, the rights of property as well as the rights of the people are not to be overlooked by the President. All he wants in railroad legislation is that which is fair and that which will endure."

The American railway appliance exhibition was formally opened at noon today in the presence of nearly a thousand delegates to the International Railway Congress. Speeches were made by Secretary Taft, Secretary Morton, President George A. Post of the exhibit, District Commissioner MacFarland, T. L. Lawrence, Deputy Chairman of the London Northwest Railway, and Stuyvesant Fish, President of the American section of the congress.

The foreign delegates spent the morning sightseeing. The exhibit occupied the Government reservation at the foot of the Washington Monument, and consists of nearly 400 separate exhibits, housed in nearly a hundred pavilions.

President Post in calling the congress to order described the exhibit and its purposes. George Westinghouse was made Chairman of the exercises. In his acceptance he predicted a new era in railroading by the substitution of electricity for steam. Secretary Morton was the next speaker. He said in part:

"The railroad freight rates in the United States are low. No other country has any such cheap carriage of goods. There are very few complaints of rates in this country because they are too high. Complaints of extortionate rates are the exception, not the rule. Rates are lower in the United States than anywhere else in the world. The wages paid by American railroads to their employes approximate at least 50 per cent. more than the wages paid to railroad men in other lands."

Secretary Taft spoke in a humorous vein. "There are a number of railway appliances I do not see in this exhibit," said he. "They are the courts, the injunctions, and the receivers. But I have no doubt, as I look down on this well-fed audience, there are gentlemen here who would be willing to accept positions as receivers."

HILL TALKS OF RATES.

Tells Senators Discrimination Is Necessary—Will Meet Canal Tariffs.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—James J. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway Company, appeared before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce to-day. He cited instances where rate discriminations were necessary, and declared that if the roads received fair treatment rates would be reduced one-half a cent a ton per mile in twenty years. He said, too, that the Canadian system of rebates would be corrected by lines in the United States if the railroads are allowed to meet the evil in their own way. He warned the committee of the danger of crippling the business of the country by interfering with rates.

Discriminations were necessary, declared Mr. Hill. When his road was built he went to Washington State and found that its greatest product was lumber. There was a rate of 90 cents per hundred on lumber to the Eastern market. Lumber dealers said they could ship at 65 cents. He knew they could not do it, and he made a rate of 40 cents and was shipping large quantities of lumber. This was a discrimination against lumber on the Eastern end of the road, but in ten years there would be no lumber produced in that section. It was because the cars going out with merchandise brought loads back that these low rates could be made.

Mr. Hill warned the committee to be careful and not cripple the business of the country, "not for ourselves," he added, "because before you got down to us there would be a great many corpses about the country."

Mr. Hill said that while Congress was legislating for the safety appliances for employes it might provide greater safety for the public. He attributed 90 per cent. of the accidents to non-observance of rules.

Mr. Hill said the ability of the railroads to raise money for increasing their equipment and for building additional lines would be destroyed by taking away from them the power to make rates. He criticised the terminal charges enforced below the Harlem River in New York, saying they were greater than the rate from Buffalo to Harlem. He suggested that the Inter-State Commerce Commission might investigate these terminal charges.

There was an interesting discussion between Mr. Hill and Mr. Elkins about the competition of Canadian roads.

"We are willing to work that out among ourselves," said Mr. Hill. "Before we are through with them they will cease cutting rates." He said that some years ago the Transcontinental Association paid the Canadian Pacific Road $500,000 a year to get out of certain business on which the road was cutting rates from New York to San Francisco.

Mr. Hill said that for Atlantic and Gulf ports and for 150 miles inland the Panama Canal would be of some advantage. "But," he added, "for all interior points we will meet any rate made by the canal route."

FIND LEO FLEISCHMANN WEARING NAVAL UNIFORM

Long Search for Missing New York Boy Ends.

$1,000 REWARD WAS OFFERED

Lad Disappeared Last September—Was Confined for Desertion from Receiving Ship When Found.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., May 3.—Leo Fleischmann, the seventeen-year-old boy who has been missing from his home, in New York, for nearly a year and for whom there has been a standing reward of $1,000, was found this afternoon aboard the United States receiving ship Franklin by Detective Connors of the local Police Department. Fleischmann, who at first denied his identity, finally admitted that he was the boy for whom the police of nearly every city in the country had been searching.

Inspector O'Brien of the New York Detective Bureau was notified of the finding of Fleischmann, and the father of the boy is expected to arrive here to-morrow night.

Some of the shipmates of Fleischmann a few days ago saw an account of the disappearance of the boy and also a description and noted the resemblance it bore to the bluejacket on the Franklin. Word was sent to New York and a letter was received to-day by Chief Boush asking that the identification be made.

Detective Connors, with several pictures of the boy in his possession, went aboard the Franklin, and Fleischmann was brought out of the brig, where he was confined, awaiting trial for desertion. Fleischmann was stripped and examined, and marks tallying with the description were found on his body.

Fleischmann, after leaving home, went to Philadelphia, where he worked in a restaurant for two months. Afterward he enlisted in the navy, and was sent here for training. He jumped ship and went to Richmond, where he was arrested and returned to the Franklin.

The boy enlisted under the name of Farrell, and stated that he was 22 years old.

Leo Fleischmann, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Fleischmann of the Hotel Roland, disappeared on Sept. 6 last. He was a student at the City College. At the time of his disappearance he was taking instruction in algebra from a tutor, and while on his way to the tutor's house disappeared as completely as though the world had swallowed him up.

A reward of $200 was at first offered for information concerning his whereabouts and was afterward raised to $1,000. Much more than that sum has been spent by his parents since the reward was offered in the search for him.

On several occasions persons having read of the disappearance of the boy imagined they had found him. In every instance, however, these hopes were dashed when a correct description of the youth found was forwarded to the parents.

The most distressing occasion of this kind occurred on April 4. On that day the parents received word from an official of the Santa Fé Railroad, who lives in the West, and who, having read the advertisement, accidentally heard the name "Leo Fleischmann" spoken in a sanitarium at Lamanda Park, near Los Angeles. Before the parents were ready to start on the journey to get the boy they sent on a full description of him, which was followed by a dispatch from the Chief of Police at Los Angeles explaining that the Leo Fleischmann there was only twelve years old and was not from New York.

SUICIDE WITH SHOESTRING.

Miss Van Ranst, Her Money Gone, Strangles Herself in Flat.

Miss Mamie Van Ranst, a daughter of C. W. Van Ranst, a publisher, who died last August at his home in West Eighty-fourth Street, was found dead yesterday in her apartment at 143 St. Nicholas Avenue, having committed suicide by strangling herself. The woman was forty-four years old and had never married.

It is thought that she committed suicide several days ago, as she had not been seen since last Saturday. In the apartment with the dead woman was her pet bulldog, who was almost dead from hunger. In a letter she said she had decided to commit suicide because what money her father left her had given out.

Mary E. Holmes, a negro woman, who took care of the apartment, went there on Saturday, but was unable to get in. Miss Van Ranst was seen earlier in the day by the janitor and his wife. Yesterday afternoon the negro woman went again to the apartment, and when there was no response to the ringing of the bell she called the janitor, Thomas Lynch, who had a pass key. In the parlor they found the woman dead on the floor. Around her neck was a shoe string.

In a letter addressed to the negro woman Miss Van Ranst requested that she take charge of her affairs and take what money was left in the bank for the funeral expenses. What remained and the furniture, she directed, should go to the Holmes woman.

WOMAN ROBS HIM OF $750.

Gets Englishman's Railroad Ticket to San Francisco, Too.

Edward Faxton, a ruddy-faced Englishman, was robbed of $750 in money, a ticket to San Francisco, and some other belongings by a woman last night.

Faxton is the representative of three business houses in London, and is on his way to San Francisco. He is staying at the Imperial Hotel. In leaving the hotel last evening he met the woman in Broadway. Soon afterward Faxton reported his loss at the Tenderloin Police Station. Detective McQuire was detailed to the case, but did not succeed in finding the woman.

Purse for the Rev. Thomas McMillan.

More than 500 Sunday School scholars of St. Paul's Church gathered in Columbus Hall in West Sixtieth Street last night, and celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ordination of the Rev. Thomas McMillan of the Paulist Fathers. Scholars under the direction of Miss Mae A. Malone gave several Gaelic dances, and a quartet sang Irish songs. The Piano of To-Day

"Nothing Succeeds Like Success"

THE instantaneous acceptance of the Pianola Piano by the public is shown conclusively by the important factory additions which the great demand has made necessary.

When the Aeolian Company introduced the Pianola Piano about twelve months ago, it had three factories in New York city and three more in other States (Meriden, Conn., Worcester, Mass., and Aeolian, N. J.). To keep pace with the demand, the following extensive additions to already existing manufacturing facilities have been necessitated:

Five entire floors of large loft buildings in the rear of the Weber Piano factory at 17th St. and 7th Ave. have been acquired and converted into a high-grade piano factory.

A two-story addition has been made to the Wheelock Piano factory at 147th St. Also on an adjoining piece of land, with twice the number of square feet of the original plot, another modern factory building of six stories is in course of completion.

At Worcester, Mass., in addition to the Aeolian Company's established plant there, the factory building formerly used by the Shredded Wheat Company has been secured and is being used exclusively for the production of piano cases and the heavier portions of a piano.

Four months ago the entire piano manufacturing plant of George Steck & Co., 518 to 524 West 48th Street, New York, was purchased outright and immediately developed to its full capacity.

The Pianola Piano as it appears when ready to play by means of a perforated music roll.

THE significance of all these extensions of factory facilities is that the Pianola Piano fills a distinct need on the part of the music-loving public such as no piano has ever done before. From the very first it has been apparent to experts in the trade that the Pianola Piano, in presenting two methods of playing instead of one, as with all previous pianos, was destined to have a phenomenal success.

In view of the public's emphatic ratification of this opinion, the Pianola Piano passes from the category of "The Piano of the Future" to "The Piano of To-day." Nothing could be more apparent than that the Pianola Piano is the one piano which every one who can afford it will prefer to own.

The Pianola Piano does not differ from the ordinary upright piano in any outward aspect. Both Piano and Pianola are fully as effective as the separate instruments, while being more convenient and economical of space. Prices of the Pianola Piano $500 to $1,000. Descriptive literature and music catalogues, showing repertory, sent to any address on request.

tain the age of twenty-one years he shall be empowered to vote upon the said shares and shall receive and hold the said proxies and powers of attorney, and the powers conferred upon the Trustees under this paragraph shall be operative only in case of the refusal by the said James Hazen Hyde to act or in case of his inability or absence from the United States.

"There is a further provision in the fifth paragraph of the agreement emphasizing Mr. James H. Hyde's control of the trust. The provision I refer to is as follows:

"After the said James Hazen Hyde shall attain the age of twenty-one years no vote shall be cast upon the said shares at any election of the Equitable Assurance Society except for a person approved by the said James Hazen Hyde.

"When the suggestion was first made in the public press that I had been guilty of some breach of duty under this agreement I considered the charge too preposterous for reply. I at once referred the subject of the agreement and my duties under it to counsel, who advised me that not only was my course in connection with the mutualization of the Equitable incapable of being construed as a breach of any duty under the agreement, but that it was impossible to conceive of any violation of duty to the beneficiary of the trust by reason of the peculiar character of the agreement. The constant repetition, however, of the charge that I have committed some breach of duty as a Trustee, connived at by you notwithstanding your knowledge of the terms of the agreement, makes it permissible, not to say necessary, that I should state the provisions of the agreement. The so-called trust stock is in your possession; every function with relation to it purporting to be conferred upon the Trustees under the agreement is, in reality, exercised either directly by Mr. James H. Hyde or subject to his approval, and I may add that no step has thus far been taken that can be claimed to have any effect whatever upon the value of the trust stock which you both have not concurred in by your recorded votes."

COMMISSIONERS SEE HYDE.

R. C. Folk, the State Insurance Commissioner of Tennessee, and H. R. Prewitt of Kentucky, members of the Executive Committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, called on Mr. Hyde at his offices yesterday morning, and also had a talk with President Alexander. They found Second Vice President Gage E. Tarbell out. Mr. Prewitt said last night of the visit to Mr. Hyde:

"We had a very pleasant talk with Mr. Hyde, and he, like President Alexander, offered us every facility at his disposal for such examination as we might like to make. We certainly have never had dealings with insurance officials who have treated us with greater courtesy. As to what the Executive Committee may decide to do to-morrow I cannot say. Of course, the interests of our constituents concern the disposition of the policy holders' money rather than the welfare of the stock, but we appreciate that the solvency of the Equitable is not in question, and the issue is rather whether practices in vogue here make insurance a more expensive necessity than it ought to be."

President H. L. Cutting of the National Convention, the Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts, and J. C. Lennehan, Insurance Commissioner of New Hampshire, arrived here last night and registered at the Manhattan Hotel. Commissioner Z. N. Host of Wisconsin is due here this morning and the meeting of the Executive Committee will probably be held at noon. State Superintendent Hendricks arrived last night to meet with the other Commissioners. He would not talk of Equitable affairs.

OFFICERS ORDERED TO COURT.

In Part II. of the Supreme Court yesterday, Justice Bischoff signed an order directing James H. Hyde, James W. Alexander, and Gage E. Tarbell to appear in the Supreme Court on May 11 for examination in connection with the suit brought by Herbert E. Tull, a Philadelphia policy holder, to compel an accounting from the society of its surplus. The order directs Messrs. Hyde, Alexander, and Tarbell to appear for the purpose of being examined and making a deposition as to the facts and circumstances under which the proposed amended charter of the society was adopted at the meeting of Directors on March 21, and particularly regard to the number of proxies held by the Directors voting at that meeting. Further, the order directs an inquiry as to the size of Mr. Hyde's holdings of stock and as to the detailed proceedings of the Directors' meeting. Mr. Hyde and Mr. Alexander are directed to produce such books and papers of the Equitable as are necessary to enable them to answer these questions.

The order was sought by counsel for Mr. Tull on an affidavit alleging that many of the Directors voting for the amended charter were dummies in that they did not actually own the stock they voted. Among those mentioned in this connection are James J. Hill and D. O. Mills, the two Directors who have resigned from the Frick investigating committee, it was said yesterday that counsel for Mr. Hyde would apply in a day or two for an order vacating the one issued by Justice Bischoff.

These $17 Suits are Worth $20 & $22

The price of woolens in the open market to-day makes these $17 suits worth $20 & $22. Woolens have steadily ascended in prices. But we, unlike most clothiers, contracted for thousands of yards of woolens at the old prices. Therefore these suits are only $17, whereas others must ask $20 & $22.

Involved are single and double breasted sacks in the popular smooth finished gray worsteds, in light and dark tones, characterized by exclusive patterns. Also blue and black Thibets and serges, cheviots, tweeds and cassimeres.

OSWEGO OFFICIALS OUSTED.

Climax of Fight Between the Mayor and Commissioners.

Special to The New York Times.

OSWEGO, N. Y., May 3.—Mayor Mansfield, after a public hearing at the City Hall to-night, removed from office Commissioners O'Neill, Brannigan, and Carroll of the Department of Public Works on charges of conspiracy, neglect of duty, and incompetency.

The charges grew out of the attempt of the Commissioners to remove Superintendent of Streets John O'Brien and other employees of the Department of Public Works, contrary to the civil service law and against the will of the Mayor, in spite of an opinion cited by the City Attorney.

There's a good, plausible reason why Simpson Crawford Co. can sell the highest quality imported laces at prices so much below those asked by other stores. We have an arrangement which brings to our Paris house and thence to New York all the sample and trial strips of the largest Saxony manufacturers, and of course they allow us the rarest concessions for relieving them of the residue of their season's business. The samples always create a sensation, because it is well understood that varieties are greater than are offered by any other sale held in New York, that qualities are the finest and that only the very latest, fashionable laces are included. Summer laces for all purposes are here at ⅓ and ½ regular prices.

The peg top Young men of good dress are raving over just now.

The regular cut For men of quiet taste and for elderly men.

For all, anybody will ever know, the pair you select are made-to-measure trousers, bought from a high-class merchant tailor at $7 or $8. The patterns, workmanship and quality are in the same class, and they fit perfectly. We handle this line regularly, and it has been our experience that only in rare instances is it necessary to make even the slightest alteration, never amounting to more than the change you'd require in made-to-order trousers after the last fitting process.

Handsome worsteds, swell stripes in two and three toned effects—natty cheviots and the new striped flannels are the materials that distinguish these trousers from the ordinary ready-for-service kind.

Note particularly the tailoring, the trimmings, the cut and fit, and if you don't say they're the best $5 and $6 trousers you ever saw we'll give you your choice of all the trousers in our immense stock, worth up to $10, at $5. We have them in all sizes—30 to 44 waist measure. Our Clothing Salesroom is well supplied with clerks—you won't have to wait.

Swiss ribbed vests in a special sale—3 for $1.00.

WITH a little more trimming they'd be classed with regular $1 vests—that is to say, the quality is identical. Now if you are not so particular and desire just a plain, wearable vest with one row of crochet and a dainty baby ribbon running through it, you certainly will attend this sale to-day and pick out a Summer supply of vests at the rate of 3 for $1. Singly the price is 35c.—but then you're sure to want quite a number. Main Floor.

There's pink, blue and white—you may have a variety of colors or have them all the same, as you choose.

They're the coolest vests you ever saw—soft and elastic, yet a very firm quality. It all rests with your coming.

Taffeta petticoats at $5, exceedingly good quality

YOU will probably say you never saw petticoats of such good quality at $5 and it is not strange if you haven't seen them, for although we've offered some very good values at $5 we do not remember any that were quite the equal of these. Main Floor—Bargain Square.

They are made with a graduated accordion plaited flounce finished with two silk ruffles and all silk under ruffle—for to-day's sale, $5.

Sale of shirt waists, $1.00. An exceptional value

SHIRT WAISTS at $1 are common, but $2 shirt waists at $1 are extraordinary, and these are $2 shirt waists—not imaginary values, but waists that actually sell for $2 in some stores, showing they are good values at that. Second Floor.

Attractive lace waists at from $4.50 upward.

The description will vouch for these rare bargains—several excellent styles are included at the price—Persian lawn waists, made with fancy front of all-over English embroidery and fine tucks; new sleeves, trimmed collar and cuffs. Did you ever hear of such a waist selling for $1.00? $1.00

$3.95 for $6.00 crepe de chine waists or chiffon taffeta silk waists, beautifully designed with tiny tucks, lace insertions and rows of shirring—trimmed sleeves and collar.

Attacks on Police Continual—Two Sergeants Killed.

Strike on the East Siberian Railroad Feared—Zemstvoists Defy Order Against Their Congress.

ST. PETERSBURG, Thursday, May 4.—Reports from Warsaw, Lodz, Sosonowiec, Kalisz, and other towns of Poland indicate that the strike has become almost general. Newspapers are not appearing.

Agitators are constantly attacking policemen whenever they are found singly, and it is perilous for the police to go about except in groups.

Reports of disturbances in various places of European Russia Easter Monday are now coming in.

At Militopol a mob for several hours held high carnival, and burned a portion of the town.

At Nijni-Novgorod a regular battle occurred between soldiers and a crowd. The soldiers fired, killing one person and wounding many.

In the course of the Easter celebration at Simferopol a crowd of hoodlums gathered and began to beat Jews. The police suppressed the disorder.

A strike on the East Siberian Railroad is feared. A battalion of soldiers of the Railway Corps is camped at Chita to take the place of strikers in case of a walkout.

Representatives of the various provincial zemstvos are gathering at Moscow to participate in the general zemstvo congress called for May 5 and announce their intention of holding the meeting in spite of police orders to the contrary.

WARSAW, May 3.—An unknown man shot and killed a police Sergeant on Hoza Street this morning. The murderer escaped.

A large crowd of students and others assembled in the afternoon and attempted to start a demonstration, but they were dispersed by Cossacks, who used their whips freely.

Thirty bodies of victims of Monday's shooting were removed in five vans at 2 o'clock this morning from the police station to which they were taken on Monday to the Brudno Cemetery. Police and soldiers closed the streets around the station during the removal and arrested several loiterers.

The strike at the Warsaw factories continues. The printers struck to-day, and the afternoon newspapers did not appear.

LODZ, May 3.—Four men this morning shot and killed a Police Sergeant and severely wounded a detective who tried to arrest them.

Serious riots occurred in the streets in the course of the night. The military fired on a crowd, killing four persons and wounding several others.

LONDON, Thursday, May 4.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg to a news agency here says a dozen men have been arrested in a joiner's work shop. They are suspected of being bomb makers.

Several infernal machines were found in the shop.

Russian War Correspondents Contradict Official Statements.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 3.—Although the General Staff to-day issues the stereotyped announcement, "The armies in Manchuria report no change in the situation," Russian correspondents unanimously telegraph that hostilities are imminent.

The well-informed critic of the Russ asserts that Marshal Oyama has every reason forthwith to invest Vladivostok, since, even if the Russian fleet arrives there unscathed, it will require considerable overhauling and repairs, which would be seriously hampered by the presence of a beleaguering army.

He believes that Oyama disposes of 825,000 men, of whom 100,000 are marching through Korea on Vladivostok, 150,000 are guarding lines of communication, and 575,000 are confronting Gen. Linevitch.

CONFIDENT TOGO WILL LOSE.

Capt. von Essen Tells Why He Expects a Russian Sea Victory.

ST. PETERSBURG, Thursday, May 4.—Capt. von Essen, a hero of Port Arthur and one of the ablest of Russian naval officers, discussing yesterday the coming naval battle in the Far East, took a rosy view of Rojestvensky's prospects and asserted that he had a great advantage in many respects over the original Port Arthur squadron. He said:

"Take the matter of telescopic sights, for instance, which are almost indispensable in engagements at the extreme ranges now usual. The Port Arthur fleet was without them, and was unable to obtain the sights on account of the cutting of communications, while Rojestvensky's big guns are all equipped.

"Furthermore, we know that Togo's ships were severely pounded in the battle of Aug. 10. The ordnance of the Japanese ships suffered especially, and, though some of the twelve-inch guns may have been replaced, it is impossible that all can have been renewed. The battle will be decided by the twelve-inch guns."

"But may not Togo elect to conduct a harassing warfare with his torpedo boats in the hope of sinking one of the Russian ships?" was asked.

"One of the lessons of the present war, replied the Captain, "is the ability of warships to defend themselves against torpedo attacks during naval engagements. After the opening surprises the Japanese torpedo flotilla accomplished practically nothing until the last act of the naval drama, the torpedoing of the Sevastopol before the surrender of Port Arthur, and then it took five nights of continuous attacks under the most favorable weather conditions to get one of the hundreds of torpedoes home against a stationary ship."

Capt. von Essen commented on the high state of efficiency to which Admiral Rojestvensky has brought his squadron, and said that the results of target practice with the big guns corroborated the opinion of British critics that the marksmanship

SALVING RUSSIAN WARSHIPS.

It Is Believed Several Will Be Added to the Japanese Navy.

TOKIO, May 3.—The work of salving the sunken Russian warships at Port Arthur and Che-mul-Pho is progressing satisfactorily to the Japanese.

Details are withheld, but it is believed to be certain that the Japanese Navy will secure several battleships and cruisers.

NEUTRALITY ISSUE NOT ENDED.

Japan Keeps On Asking France Questions About Rojestvensky.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 3.—According to a prominent naval authority, Admiral Nebogatoff is now coaling northeast of Sinapore, and will join Admiral Rojestvensky on May 10.

The Foreign Office declares that no further communication has been received from the French Government regarding neutrality.

The Admiralty authorizes a denial of reports of the presence of foreign mercenaries in the Baltic Fleet, declaring that no foreigner is on board any of the vessels.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 3.—Notwithstanding denials, it now appears that the Japanese officials are carefully observing the continued presence of vessels of Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron off the Indo-Chinese coast, and are seeking information from the French authorities concerning the nature and duration of their stay.

Members of the Japanese Legation have addressed several inquiries to the Foreign Office, asking particularly whether the ships were in French waters. The replies given were that all the vessels of the Russian squadron have left French waters.

These inquiries appear to indicate the purpose of the Japanese to submit further representations or lay grounds for subsequent action.

A dispatch to the Temps from St. Petersburg says that dispatches received there through Russian channels confirm the previous reports that the Russian cruisers which were at Vladivostok have left that port.

TOKIO, May 3.—It is rumored that the destination of Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet is Petropavlovsky, on the peninsula of Kamchatka, instead of Vladivostok.

It is said that the Russians have been collecting coal and stores at Petropavlovsk, but it is regarded as improbable that the Russians intend to use that port to any great extent because its defense from the land side is considered impossible.

LONDON, Thursday, May 4.—The Daily Mail's Hongkong correspondent says that numerous steamers are constantly plying between Saigon and the Russian warships with full cargoes of provisions and cattle.

He adds that it is reported that American and German newspaper correspondents at Shanghai have chartered the steamer Wuchang, ostensibly to view the coming naval battle. The vessel is flying the French flag, but it is believed she is really Russian property with a mission to locate Admiral Togo.

ESCORTS SPIRITS OF DEAD.

Solemn Procession Begins the Three-Days' Ceremonies at Tokio.

TOKIO, May 3.—A solemn procession escorting the spirits of the dead soldiers and sailors opened the enshrining ceremonial at the Shokonsha Temple to-day. The impressive Shinto ritual was followed by the throng that filled and surrounded the temple, including thousands of relatives of the dead.

High officers of the army and navy, a large force of troops, and 1,400 sailors from Yokosuka were present at the ceremonies, which will be practically continuous until Friday night.

The Emperor and Empress will not attend the ceremony to-morrow on account of indisposition. Prince Fushimi will represent their Majesties on that occasion.

TELL OF CANCER CURES.

Members of Roentgen Congress Discuss the Effect of the Rays.

BERLIN, May 3.—The treatment of cancer by Röntgen rays rather than by the knife was discussed at to-day's session of the International Congress called to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the discovery of the Röntgen ray.

Prof. Lassar of Berlin, who is regarded as an authority on diseases of the skin, read a paper in which he said he had had only three failures in this cure for cancer in some hundreds of cases he had treated, but only where the growths were not deep seated, because the healing effect of the ray only penetrated to a depth of one-fifth of an inch. The ray seemed ineffective for larger growths.

Prof. Lassar added that he had met with success in the removal of gangrenous cancer growths by Röntgen rays such as would have seemed impossible to bold imaginations a few years ago. He dealt at length with the dangerous properties of the rays and the necessity for extreme care.

Prof. Imelmann of Berlin read a summary of reports on sixty cases of cancer

A Remarkable Movement In SILK DRESSES for WOMEN

TODAY WE announce one of the best pieces of news that New York women have read this season. We have just purchased from one of the foremost manufacturers of the country a collection of about five hundred Silk Dresses and Silk Shirt-Waist Suits. This concern is the only American firm whose product has been sold in London and Paris. Their business is through for the season, and their designers are starting abroad for ideas for Fall. For this reason we have secured their entire stock-on-hand at an average reduction of about a half of regular values.

The styles of the dresses represent the best ideas brought out this season, both here and abroad. The materials include plain taffeta silks, fancy striped and checked silk foulards, the popular Rajah silks, and a few cool and dainty checked silks. The similarity of the dresses to many that we now have in stock has compelled our adding a great many from our own stock, making the assortment still greater.

The most conservative estimate of the values of the dresses ranges from $20 to $35, a few are worth still more. Today they are priced at

$14.50 Each

Certainly a most startling price at which we offer fine, new beautiful suits from the foremost American manufacturer, with the season still at its height. Special selling space on the Second floor.

Imported Shirts That Distinguish Their Wearers

A good many more men than the public realizes buy their shirts in Paris. Season after season more of these men are coming to WANAMAKER'S. And men familiar with what Paris shows, best appreciate the Wanamaker importations. Just yesterday one of these men was passing the store, and saw a windowful of Imported Shirts. He came inside and was amazed to see what a variety of imported shirts was shown—a better assortment than can be found in any one place abroad, because the best products from the various sources are assembled here. The result was, he picked out half a dozen and promised to buy his shirts here in the future instead of in Paris.

The Wanamaker shirt business is increasing rapidly every season, as men realize the unusual character of our stocks. Of course, the assortment of imported shirts is finer this year than it has ever been before, and it is now at its best.

French Plaited Shirts, in plain white, at $3; colored, at $3 and $3.50.

Bohemian Shirts, in plain negligee style, at $2 and $2.50; with plaited bosoms, at $2.50, $3 and $3.50.

In a word, common sense seems to dominate clothes-making this Spring.

The newest and most stylish fabrics are here in splendid assortment, assuring a selection for every man.

FRAUD ORDERS ISSUED AGAINST FOUR FIRMS

Inspectors Say They've Unearthed Another Storey Cotton Scheme.

HAD OFFICES IN THREE CITIES

A. J. Barry, Said to Have Operated as Morton & Co., the Principal Promoter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—A fraud order has been issued by the Post Office Department against Edward T. Hunter & Co. of Philadelphia and Newark, and A. J. Warner & Co. of Washington, the latter having been operating in conjunction with the former. The Post Office Inspectors declare that the scheme of these concerns is identical with that of the Storey Cotton Company, whose affairs are now under investigation in the Pennsylvania courts.

Hunter & Co. is said to be the name assumed by one A. J. Barry. Barry is alleged to have operated some time ago as a broker under the name of Morton & Co. at 50 Broadway, New York. The police, the postal people say, compelled him to close up, whereupon he transferred his operations to Philadelphia. He later removed to Newark and then back again to Philadelphia. The mail of Hunter & Co. was withheld by reason of a fraud order issued by the department.

The inspectors obtained a good description of Barry, and then visited the offices in this city of A. J. Warner & Co., where they identified Barry as Warner. They caused his arrest April 23, and he is now held in $1,000 bail.

A fraud order has also been issued against Frank Gardiner of North Pembroke, N. Y., who seems to be something of a joker. Gardiner advertised that for 25 cents he would send a $2 bill, and would give $25 to any person who could detect it, and who would pronounce positively that it was not genuine. The persons who sent 25 cents received eight receipts for 25 cents each, which Gardiner assured his dupes constituted a $2 bill. The postal authorities have forbidden postmasters to deliver mail to Frank Gardiner of North Pembroke, N. Y.

DUNRAVEN FOR HOME RULE.

He Says Only a Progressive Policy Can Save the Union.

LONDON, May 3.—The Earl of Dunraven has written a remarkable pamphlet entitled "The Crisis in Ireland: An Account of the Present Condition, with Suggestions for Reform," in which he exhaustively reviews the existing situation. He says:

"Ireland is at a crisis in her history. Year by year the country has been sinking deeper and deeper into misfortune, and has now reached a point at which it must be decided whether the dominant tendencies shall continue to the inevitable melancholy end or whether a supreme effort shall be made to lift the country out of the national bankruptcy in man-power, intelligence, and material property which so immediately threaten it."

Lord Dunraven assails with the utmost bitterness the present system of Government in Ireland as a gross anachronism which satisfies no one. He says Ireland cannot be Anglicized, that she understands her own affairs best, and should manage her own affairs. The pamphlet concludes:

"If the union is to be maintained an active, living, democratic, progressive policy must be applied to the causes of decay."

WU OBTAINED REFORM EDICT.

Abolition of Slicing to Death Was Due to His Memorial.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

PEKING, May 3.—A noteworthy decree was recently issued summarizing the criminal procedure and abolishing the cruel punishment of slicing to death and the punishment of a family for the fault of an individual.

Time will show whether the decree will really be carried into effect.

The decree was in response to a memorial from Wu Ting-Fang, formerly Minister at Washington.

GRABBED JEWELRY AND RAN.

Negro Went Into Store When Only Girl and Mother Were There.

Half hidden by trees from passersby is the quaint little jewelry store of James Ryder directly across from the old Town Hall of the old town of Gravesend.

Ruth Ryder, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the proprietor, was alone in the place at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when a large and very black negro entered. He said he wanted to buy a watch and a diamond ring. The girl called her mother, who brought out a tray of

OPTICAL WORKERS' STRIKE.

Employers Say They Will Not Grant Union Demands.

Members of the Optical Workers' Union, which has been in existence a year, have been on strike for a week to enforce the unionizing of about twenty-five "prescription" shop opticians' staffs. There was no question of wages involved. The shops in question employ about 150 men as "grinders," "solderers," "adjusters," and "assemblers," whose pay runs from $10 to $30 a week. About 100 men went out when all but two of the shops refused to comply with a circular demanding recognition of the union. Their places have all been filled, and, with the exceptions noted, the employers say that their shops will not be unionized and that the strike has petered out.

Opticians generally ridiculed the strike yesterday as hardly a factor in their business. Some of the prominent employers said that the work performed at the "prescription" shops, which are so termed because oculists and opticians send orders for eye aids which are made out much as are physicians' prescriptions, was so intricate that a scale of wages could hardly be drawn up. All workmen were, however, very well paid, but the union was not satisfied with this and reasonable hours, and tried to close the shops against all but union men.

OPEN SHOP CLOAKMAKERS.

No Discrimination, Policy of New Employers' Association.

In order to be ready for the coming season, it was announced yesterday, the first cloak and suit manufacturers' association formed since 1894, when there was a general strike and lock out of cloakmakers, involving 18,000 men and women, has been organized on the open-shop basis.

The new organization starts with fifty-eight large firms, with an aggregate capital of $20,000,000, and Edwin Polosky, of A. Friedlander & Co., the organizer, said last evening that he expects in a short time to see the association representing an aggregate capital of $50,000,000. It will be known as the Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Association of New York. He continued:

"The objects of this association include industrial protection, industrial peace, and arbitration, and the doing away of many evils in the trade. We have the open shop now, and we will continue employing workers without discrimination as to whether they belong to a union or not.

ASSEMBLY PASSES GAS BILLS; SENATE WAITS

Twenty-three Republicans Rallied in Test on Programme.

TAMMANY MAY HOLD THE KEY

Chairman Stevens Still Hopes to Gain Needed Three Votes—Higgins's Extra Session Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—All seven of the Stevens gas committee's bills were rushed through the Assembly to-day, aided by emergency messages from the Governor, the Republicans standing firm against all amendments and sending the bills to the Senate two hours after they were taken up.

There was not a hitch. Five of the bills went through unanimously. The seventy-five-cent gas bill was opposed on the roll call only by Grady, Seventh Kings, who objected because it did not apply to Coney Island. He afterward changed his vote to the affirmative. The State Commission bill received 99 affirmative to 44 negative votes.

In the Senate all the bills were substituted for their counterparts on the Senate calendar, to come up to-morrow morning, except the seventy-five-cent gas bill. This Senator McCarren, acting for Grady, made the occasion for a test vote. The line-up follows:

Ayes—Allds, Armstrong, Burr, Carpenter, Cooper, Cordts, Drescher, Elsberg, Fancher, Gates, Goodsell, Hinman, Lewis, Malby, Marks, McEwan, Page, Raines, Saxe, Stevens, Tully, Warnick, White—23.

Senator Marks was the only Democrat who voted with the Republicans in favor of substitution. Declaring the motion to substitute lost, the chair referred the seventy-five-cent gas bill to the Committee on Miscellaneous Corporations.

Late to-night Republican leaders declared that Senators Davis, Cobb, and Brown had been won over to support the gas measures. William C. Warren, State Committeeman of Erie, was summoned here to convert Davis.

Four Democratic Senators, it is admitted, will vote for the bills if Charles F. Murphy so instructs. They are Grady, Foley, Martin, and Marks.

Tammany Hall apparently holds the key to the gas situation. If orders are sent to its Senators to support the measures for cheaper lighting they will be passed. Chairman Stevens, despite the fact that he was able to muster but twenty-three Republican votes on a test in the Senate, is still confident that he will have the requisite twenty-six votes when the final vote comes.

Senator Grady was in the long-distance telephone booth in communication with New York when the vote on the substitution of the seventy-five-cent gas bill was taken. All day long Tammany Senators had been going to him for instructions. He told them he had none. Late to-night he maintained that nothing had been decided as to the minority's attitude.

Gov. Higgins announced definitely to-day his intention to call a special session of the Legislature if all the gas bills were not favorably acted upon. He made the statement that a large delegation of up-State gas and electric Directors and capitalists had called upon him to speak in favor of the State Utilities Commission bill. The Governor said they had told him that in their opinion they would be dealt with more equitably if their interests were supervised throughout the year by a State commission.

"The Consolidated Gas Company, however," said the Governor, "is very much opposed to the State Commission bill."

The fight in the Assembly to-day centred on the Utilities Commission bill. On the 75-cent gas proposition, Wainwright, Second Westchester; Wedemeyer, Richmond; Sullivan, First Queens, and Grady offered amendments with relation to their sections, all of which were defeated.

Minority Leader Palmer began the struggle against the commission bill by offering an amendment providing that one Commissioner should have a practical knowledge of electricity, another a practical knowledge of gas and the other must be a Democrat.

Merritt, for the defense, asserted that the bill would take from the Legislature many perplexing problems. Its powers were not arbitrary, as its action would be subject to review by the courts.

He added:

"We have been accused of too much haste in making our report. Personally I am satisfied with the price fixed and with all of the details of the bills, but I want to say that if this investigation was to go on, I think we could get information which would justify us in making the price lower than we have.

"The investigation showed clearly that through over-capitalization the public was being robbed. By investing their money in the stocks and bonds of other companies the gas magnates of New York have built up a monopoly. And the exorbitant prices which have been paid to bring about monopoly are charged as an asset by the managers of the gas companies, who then turn upon the people of the city and say, 'Pay us a dividend on what we have spent to secure a monopoly.'

"We have been accused of being Bryanites and other horrible things, but if it is the feeling in this house that we have not been drastic enough because we did not include telegraph and telephone companies, all that you have got to do is to recommend that we go on with our hearings, and perhaps we will be able to recommend a few more things for the benefit of the people of New York City. We are willing to meet you on that proposition."

Mr. Palmer said:

"I oppose this commission bill because it is another grand move toward centralization of power and toward paternalism in our State Government."

Dale, Fifteenth, Kings, declared the bill was nothing but a measure to place three Republicans in "soft berths for the looting of the State Treasury through the large salaries that must be paid to them."

When the seventy-five-cent bill came up, McKeown said he had had a ninety-cent amendment ready to offer, but in view of the attitude of the Tammany members to vote for seventy-five-cent gas, he would not offer it.

OPPOSE STATE GAS BOARD.

Civic Organizations Telegraph Protest to Albany.

The following telegram was sent yesterday to M. Linn Bruce, Lieutenant Governor, at Albany:

"Have just received copies of the Gas bill. Upon inspection we find the one creating a State Gas and Electric Lighting Commission vicious in principle, in that it violates the principle of home rule and divides the responsibility for gas and electric lighting service between the Government of New York City and the Government of the State and creates another useless State commission."

The telegram was signed by William H. Gibson for the Board of Trade and Transportation, Julius Henry Cohen for the Citizens' Union, Charles Sprague Smith for the People's Institute, Gregory Weinstein of the East Side Civic Club, J. Aspinall Hodge, Jr., for the Riverside and Morningside Heights Association, Calvin Tomkins, James B. Lehmaier, Charles P. Blaney, and Frederick H. Cox of the Civic Club.

Mr. Cohen, Chairman of the Citizens' Union Legislative Committee, said last night:

"There is grave danger that the Niagara-Cassidy-Leggett-Merritt bill will pass the Assembly in exchange for votes on the gas bill. There is also grave danger that the popular outcry for relief from the Gas Trust will be used to fasten the grip of the monopoly more firmly upon us."

BOSTON WANTS 90-CENT GAS.

Legislative Committee Favors Inquiry on London Sliding Scale.

BOSTON, May 3.—A bill for the capitalization at $15,124,600 of the new Boston Consolidated Gas Companies was reported unanimously to-day in the lower branch of the Legislature by the joint Committee on Public Lighting.

The bill fixes the price of gas in this city after one year at 90 cents a thousand feet, and includes in the company the Massachusetts Pipe Line Company, which controls many miles of gas pipes in Boston.

The committee also reported a resolution for an investigation of the London sliding scale of prices, adjusting the price of gas to consumers and the rate of dividends to stockholders. The action is a compromise on the petition of Mayor Patrick A. Collins for 80-cent gas.

FOR REVISED MORTGAGE TAX.

Senate Passes Bill, 29 to 18—Jerome Wins Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—The perfected mortgage tax measure was passed to-day in the Senate.

Senator Foley made a general attack on the measure and made capital of the fact that the first mortgage tax bill was not workable. The vote was 29 to 18. Senators Page, Elsberg, and Saxe voted against the bill, as did all the Tammany Senators. Senator Lewis made a general defense.

The Senate passed the Belhilf bill requiring the Interborough Company to construct an elevated railroad station at One Hundred and Thirtieth Street and Eighth Avenue on the east side.

An amendment to the New York charter providing that the Police Commissioner shall have the authority to promote the three officers to whom shall be awarded the medals annually for deeds of heroism was passed.

Through the influence of County Chairman W. H. Halpin the amendment to provide for special registration by affidavit of commercial travelers was killed.

The Senate to-day voted 32 to 6 to pay $1 a ton on all sugar beets raised in the State. Most of the Tammany Senators voted for the bounty.

District Attorney Jerome witnessed in the Senate early this evening the passage of his bill with relation to fraudulent failures, for which he has worked all Winter. The bill received 34 votes to 3 against it. Creditors may demand the books of debtors.

McMACKIN OUT, SHERMAN IN.

Child Labor Committee Wins Fight—Homeopath for Health Board.

ALBANY, May 3.—Gov. Higgins sent to the Senate to-day the name of P. Tecumseh Sherman of New York to be State Commissioner of Labor in place of John McMackin of New York, and of Dr. Eugene H. Porter of New York to be State Commissioner of Health to succeed Dr. Daniel Lewis of New York. The terms of the present incumbents expired on March 6.

There has been a long and bitter fight waged against the retiring Labor Commissioner, his principal opponent being the Child Labor Committee, which recently presented formal charges of inefficiency and took other steps to prevent his reappointment.

"Our committee did not suggest Mr. Sherman's name to the Governor," said Secretary J. K. Paulding of the Child Labor Committee yesterday, "but his appointment is greatly pleasing to us. He is a man of high character and with a reputation for uprightness in all his dealings."

Philemon Tecumseh Sherman, the son of Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, has always been known as an independent Republican. He was elected Alderman of New York in 1888 on the Citizens' Union ticket. In 1900 he wrote a book called "The Inside of the Machine."

His appointment was urged by Congressman-elect Herbert Parsons, who is an anti-Odell man.

Dr. Eugene Hoffman Porter, besides being a member of many scientific societies, is President of the Berkshire Springs Company of New York City and a Directors of the Amsterdam Savings Bank.

He was born in Ghent, N. Y., and is forty-nine years old. He attended Cornell University and took the degree of Master of Arts at Rutgers College. He was graduated from the New York Homeopathic Medical College in 1885, and began practice the same year. Three years ago he became editor in chief of The North American Journal of Homeopathy. His clubs are the Republican, the Lotos, Colonial, and Cornell University. His residence is at 181 West Seventy-third Street.

In this State only one appointment of a homeopath for a State office is remembered, and he was appointed by Gov. Flower to serve merely on his private staff.

One man who had some knowledge of the appointment of Dr. Porter explained last night that there had been spirited opposition to the appointment by the allopaths, and that the Governor had disregarded that opposition, deciding, evidently, that the time had come to recognize homeopathy.

TO BUY BAKER FARM ANYWAY.

Item Reappropriating Money Slipped Into Supplemental Supply Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—The Republican leaders to-day agreed to slip an item reappropriating the necessary $42,000 into the Supplemental Supply bill to buy Isaac V. Baker's farm in Washington County, which is always rushed through the Legislature on the last day.

By the reappropriation Baker will have two years more in which to produce the searches for a right of way. Besides the $42,000 for the site the State will have to pay $30,000 to bring water two and a half miles from a lake. Doubt as to this source of supply is raised by the fact that the lake fills up to great depth in Winter.

STOCK STAMP TAX ENGRAVING.

Work Being Done Here—Banks as Distributing Agents.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—The new stamps to be used in collection of the stock-transfer tax, which goes in effect on June 1, will be in ten denominations. They are being engraved in this city, and effort is being made to have a supply ready when the law goes into effect.

The State will designate the Bank of Manhattan as the distributing agent, and it is probable that banks in other cities will be designated.

Libel Bill Defeated.

ALBANY, May 3.—The Ogden Libel bill, which provided methods whereby newspapers might avoid payment of punitive damages in libel cases, was defeated in the Senate this afternoon. The vote was 20 for the bill and 24 against it.

Against Fireproofing Resolution.

The official vote of the nineteen unions of bricklayers in Greater New York on the fireproofing resolution of the Bricklayers and Masons' International Union was recorded yesterday. By an almost unanimous vote it was decided to ignore the resolution and stand by the trade agreement of the Mason Builders' Association. The fireproofing resolution provides that the contracts for the installation of the fireproofing can be sublet, and that the bricklayers cannot refuse to set the fireproofing brick for any one who pays union wages and observes union conditions.

POLLS FAIRLY CLEAN, SAYS BISHOP POTTER

Tells Philadelphians Our Politics Are Not So Bad.

CHURCHES DON'T BAR POOR

Just as Welcome as the Rich in New York, He Declares at Unveiling of Drexel Memorial.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Bishop Potter of New York delivered the oration to-day at the unveiling of a bust of Anthony J. Drexel in the Drexel Institute. He also attended the diocesan convention which is sitting in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany, in which the Bishop was ordained when he was twenty-two years old.

Commenting on the indignation among citizens over the proposed pawning of the city gas works, the Bishop said:

"The political corruption here seems to have reached that stage where the public has been tried beyond endurance. The real solution lies in the ballot. Yes, I know you will say that the decent citizens have failed again and again in that direction. But they must do the work right. Give Philadelphia such a house-cleaning as we have had several times in New York, and the corrupt politicians will surely be crushed and driven out.

"No, I don't think that the balance of party power had everything to do with it in New York. Nor is the accepted Philadelphia theory correct, that it is impossible to purge the ballot in what you term your 'slum' or downtown' wards, where tremendous majorities for the organization are rolled up. We have a foreign population several times as great in our city, and yet we manage to keep our polls fairly clean."

Bishop Potter's attention was called to a quotation in the sermon of the Rev. John R. Faikner at the opening of the present diocesan convention. Dr. Faikner said among other things: "In our churches the presence of the poor is regarded as 'bad form.'"

"Do you believe that is true?" was asked of Bishop Potter.

"I cannot speak for this diocese, but I know that in my diocese in New York it is not so. The poor there are always welcome just as much as the rich. We want them to come into our churches, and when they do we try to make them feel at home.

"The Roman Catholic Church, it seems to me, has solved the problem more than we have, by holding so many different services on Sundays. This gives the poor, who do not like to rub elbows with the rich, the opportunity to worship when they please. It is the secret of that Church's great hold on the masses."

150 NEW ELECTION DEPUTIES.

Senate Amends Elsberg Bill Despite Protest from Author.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—After a lively fight in the Senate to-day the Elsberg bill to amend the metropolitan elections law was passed, 29 to 18. Brackett, Cassidy, Fechter, and Hinman, Republicans, voted against it. Senator Elsberg himself fought an amendment from Senator Raines for the benefit of the Odell machine.

On Elsberg's motion to strike out the amendment the line-up was as follows:

Ayes—Brackett, Cassidy, Cullen, Dooling, Elsberg, Fechter, Fitzgerald, Foley, Frawley, Gardner, Grady, Hasenflug, Hawkins, Hinman, Keenan, Kehoe, L'Hommedieu, Marks, Martin, McCarren, McEwan, Riordan, and Wilcox—21.

Noes—Allds, Ambler, Armstrong, Brown, Burr, Carpenter, Cobb, Coggeshall, Cooper, Cordts, Davis, Drescher, Gates, Goodsell, Lewis, Malby, Page, Prime, Raines, Saxe, Stevens, Tully, Warnick, and White—24.

"The cost of the bureau under the old system," said Senator Hinman, "was $187,800 a year. Under this system it will be $224,800 a year, an increase of $37,000."

The Senate also passed, 29 to 13, the Elsberg bill amending the election law generally. One of the amendments sets the time for registration back a week.

MAKES BERTH FOR ALDRIDGE.

Assembly, on Governor's Advice, Votes to Enlarge Railroad Board.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 3.—The word of Gov. Higgins helped through the Assembly to-day the Tully Railroad Commission bill to increase the membership in the board from three to five. The vote was 94 to 39. George W. Aldridge of Monroe is to have one of the Commissionerships, and some man to be selected by Senator Platt the other. There is talk that Clerk of the Senate James S. Whipple of Cattaraugus will be appointed.

Majority Leader Rogers of Broome and Monroe of Tompkins, both Platt-Dunn men, accompanied by Speaker Nixon, went to the Governor's office to-day and learned that it was desirable to put through the Tully bill at once. George E. Graham of New York is a candidate for the secretaryship of the board, in place of Aldridge.

FIFTH AVENUE AUTO CHASE.

Policeman Says Car Was Making Thirty Miles an Hour.

In a fast ride of a mile from Fifty-ninth Street up Fifth Avenue, last night at 9 o'clock, Bicycle Policeman Sherry overtook an automobile which, he says, sped by him at the rate of thirty miles an hour.

"It's a wonder to me," said Sherry, "that the machine was not smashed or that some of the cabs in the avenue were not hit. The machine careened from side to side. I yelled to the men in it to stop, but they only cursed me until I got abreast and halted them."

At the East Sixty-seventh Street Station the chauffeur said he was Ralph Mikkelwics, twenty-one years of age, "an automobile demonstrater," of 822 Riverside Drive. His companion, Sherry says, started to say, in answer to his question, that his name was "Mackenzie," but his Greater New Yorks Turn Tables on Boston and Win by 3 to 2.

With Chesbro in the pitcher's box for seven innings and Griffith officiating in the other two, the Greater New Yorks scored a clever victory over the Bostons yesterday, the final tally being three runs to two. Not one of these runs was earned, Chesbro and Dougherty being responsible for the champion's runs, while the local men can thank Tannehill, Grimshaw, and Parent for theirs.

Ordinarily it was just the sort of a day for Chesbro to show his best qualities, but he was quite wild in the first three innings, yet managed to keep the Bostons from making a single safe hit. He gave four batsmen bases on called balls during the seven innings that he was in the box and had a wild pitch, yet the best the champions could do was to make one hit to the outfield, and that did not occur until the sixth inning. After the third inning Chesbro's delivery was so effective that but thirteen batsmen faced him in the four innings. Manager Griffith succeeded Chesbro in the eighth inning, and he exhibited the same puzzling delivery as in the recent game with Philadelphia, which he won by a score of 1 to 0. But one scratch hit was made off him, and the first man to face him in the eighth inning, Burkett, was caught "napping" and declared out on strikes. Two strikes had been called on the former premier batsman of the National League when, as is often the case, he stepped away from the plate, only to be served with a nice ball, and Umpire O'Loughlin very wisely called him out.

WASHINGTON, 5; PHILADELPHIA, 4

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 3.—By defeating Philadelphia in the eleventh inning today the Washington team won its third straight from the Quakers, and now leads for the American League championship. In the middle of the nineties, when "Scrappy Bill" Joyce was manager of the "Senators," they led for the greater part of the first month of the championship, but finally went down the "chute." In to-day's game the home team tied the score in the ninth inning on three singles and a triple, and the visitors won the game in the eleventh on a double and a single. Score:

McGraw's Team Won as It Pleased from the Bostons.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 3.—To-day's game between the Giants and the Bostons was about the worst ever played, so far as the home team was concerned, and it was like getting money from home for the visitors, who won by 16 to 3. Boston's playing was farcical, and every one took the sport as a joke. Laughing up their sleeves, the New Yorkers hit the ball hard; they ran bases, and they took all sorts of chances. Boston threw the ball all over the lot, and every place except where they wanted to. Pitcher Volz, who hails from San Antonio, Texas, was a "tenderfoot" at the hands of the visitors, and wilder than a November storm. Volz drove himself from the box before the second inning was finished and after New York had made several runs off him. He hit a couple of men, gave three bases on balls, and the men he did not hit or pass to first batted his easy delivery. Wilhelm took Volz's place, and did fairly well until the eighth and ninth innings, and just to make the Bostons look ridiculous the New Yorks scored 6 more runs.

Leon Ames began to pitch for New York, but the cards broke so well that McGraw pulled Ames out after the fifth inning to give Elliott a chance to see what he could do. It was easy for Elliott also.

Needham ran around and muffed fouls as if he needed an anchor to keep him on his feet. Abbatichio's throwing was wretched. Wilhelm, Needham, and Wolverton all tried to field the same ball and at the same time, and once more Sharpe lost a ball because he could not see it in the sun.

To-morrow McGinnity and Willis are due to pitch, and if Willis is in form Boston should at least hold New York down to a genteel score. The score:

BROOKLYN, 13; PHILADELPHIA, 9.

The game yesterday between the Brooklyn and Philadelphia teams at Washington Park was essentially a batting contest, for the fielding was poor on the part of both teams. Hanlon's men had the game well in hand up to the eighth inning, when Boston got the hang of Scanlon's delivery and by hard hitting and wild pitching scored six runs, placing the visitors one run ahead.

Brooklyn won the game in the last inning by scoring five runs. Batch's fly was captured by Titus, but Owens hit safely. Lewis was the second one out, from Doolin to Bransfield. Mitchell, who batted for Dobbs, made a one-base hit, scoring Owens, and then Babb touched up Caldwell for a triple. This ended Caldwell's career in the box and Corridon was substituted. Courtney fumbled Ritter's bounding ball, Babb crossing the plate. Jones's hit was well fielded by Gleason, but Bransfield dropped the throw and Jones was safe. On Sheckard's single Ritter reached home from second base. Jones tallied on Lumley's two-base hit, but Sheard in his attempt to follow Jones's example was thrown out at the plate on Titus's throw to Gleason and from the latter to Doolin. The Quakers were easily disposed of in their part of the final inning. The score:

EASTERN LEAGUE.

Jersey City Defeats Newark in the Tenth Inning by 5 to 4.

The Jersey City baseball team defeated the Newarks in the third game of their Eastern League series at Jersey City yesterday. The feature of the game was a home run by Thielman in the eighth inning. He was warmly cheered. The attendance was about 3,000. The game to-day will be played in Newark. The score:

BALTIMORE, 5; PROVIDENCE, 4.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 3.—After eleven hard-fought innings Baltimore again defeated Providence to-day in a game replete with interesting situations and costly errors. To Burchell, the local left-handed pitcher, is due most of the credit of the victory. Not only did he pitch an excellent game, but it was his safe drive in the eleventh inning, when Loudenslager was on second base and two men out, that sent in the winning run. Score by innings:

TORONTO, 10; BUFFALO, 4.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 3.—Yerkes's poor pitching, combined with a batting rally on the part of the Toronto team, broke Buffalo's winning streak to-day, and gave the Torontos their first victory of the series. Score by innings:

COLUMBIA BEATS PENN.

Bunched Hits at Start Score Enough Runs to Win.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Columbia won an exciting game from Pennsylvania on Franklin Field this afternoon in the opening inning by bunching hits off Crimean. Singles by Collins, Armstrong, and Carter and a fielder's choice that gave Sanders his base was responsible for the trouble. Two runs crossed the plate before a man was retired, and only a wonderful steadying of the Quaker pitcher averted a rout. From that time on until the finish of the game the Columbia boys were unable to approach a tally, their six hits being widely scattered and coming when one or two men were out. Not a base on balls was given out by pitcher favored them. The score:

BELMONT PARK OPENS TO-DAY WITH BIG RACE

Metropolitan Handicap Is Inaugural Event on New Course.

EIGHTEEN HORSES TO RUN

Delhi and Beldame Are Top Weights and Betting Choices for the Famous Stakes.

With the running of the Metropolitan Handicap this afternoon Belmont Park, the world's greatest inclosed race course, will be opened formally to the public. In combination the decision of the famous and popular race and the inauguration of racing on the newest and most splendidly equipped race track that ever has been constructed, will mark a most momentous occasion for the American turf.

The venture of the immense amount that Belmont Park has cost in a plant that can be useful for but one purpose, and that purpose racing, is a thing that appeals strongly to the public imagination, and the public this afternoon will take its first view of the vast course and its surroundings at Queens, L. I., with an interest and curiosity that will put the race for the Metropolitan Handicap in second place until the time comes for the contest, as the fourth event of the inaugural programme, on the Westchester Racing Association's superb, new course.

The Metropolitan heretofore has been the attraction which crowded the Morris Park stands with thousands of holiday patrons of the turf, but the novelty of the new track's opening, coupled with the first of the long-established great Spring handicaps, from every indication promises to throw into eclipse all the records for attendance on a popular race day. When the multitude has assembled, though the race will be the thing, and magnificent as has been the enterprise and confidence in the future of the turf shown by the Westchester Racing Association in its huge venture, the transplanted Metropolitan Handicap, in its first running at Belmont Park, will be the central event of the day.

For the race eighteen horses, among them the most notable thoroughbreds of the American turf, are named to start. The entries are:

THE METROPOLITAN HANDICAP.

Weights announced Monday, March 20, 1905. Winners after the publication of the weights of two races of any value, or one of $1,000, to carry 4 pounds extra; of two races of $1,000 or three or more races of any value, 8 pounds extra. One mile. To be run as the fourth race.

Penalties to be carried: Ormonde's Right, four pounds; Roseben, four pounds; Pasadena, eight pounds; Santa Catalina, eight pounds, and Race King, four pounds.

Of the eighteen horses named to start in the official list of entries, seven have yet to face the barrier for the first time this season, and chief among the seven are Beldame, the champion race mare of last season, and one of the greatest horses of the turf of 1904, and Delhi, to which belongs the distinction of being the largest money winner of his season as a three-year-old. Under the scale of weights Beldame is the top weight with her 122 pounds, which, sex allowance considered, is equivalent to 127 pounds on a colt. Delhi is next in the weights with 124, or practically in receipt of three pounds from the fillys. Then come the next high weights in the fresh horses, First Mason, whic hearned the glory of defeating Delhi in a swift-run mile race last season, and Colonial Girl, which beat the mighty Hermis in the $50,000 World's Fair Handicap at St. Louis, both of these being of the Western stable of C. E. Rowe—First Mason with 117 pounds and Colonial Girl with 111.

A long list of seasoned horses that have raced well this Spring at the earlier meetings come after the four horses named, between them and another illustrious pair, Tanya, accounted by many shrewd judges to be the best two-year-old filly of last season, and Sysonby, a whirlwind of speed that was rated as best of the colts of 1904, these because they are three-year-olds, being in the lightweight division, Sysonby with 107 pounds, and Tanya with 99, these two also being scheduled to wear silk to-day for the first time since the early Fall of 1904.

Still another fresh horse in the list of entries is Siglight, a colt of great promise last season, but something of a problem so far as form is concerned.

Of the seasoned race horses in the list of entries, Ormonde's Right, winner of the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct; Santa Catalina, winner of the Excelsior Handicap at Jamaica, though she did it on a foul, and winner of other important races at both Aquepduct and Washington; Roseben, a winner at Washington, and Race King, Oxford, Pasadena, and Wotan, all winners at the earlier meetings in New York, or in the South and West, stand out as the most conspicuous, and with the stout Doliv Spanker and the fast Jacquin round out a field that in quality ranks with the best that the Metropolitan Handicap ever drew to the starting post. It was the unanimous opinion among betting men last night that in spite of the prestige of the phenomenal filly Beldame, that Delhi will be the warm favorite to-day. The colt, owned by James R. Keene, and named to run with his stable mate Sysonby, last night was quoted at 5 to 2, that price being laid against the stable entry, though it was generally believed that Sysonby would be started in another race, for which he is entered to-day. Beldame was the next choice, with Tanya and the Rowe entry, First Mason and Colonial Girl equal third choices.

Of the fresh horses Delhi and Sysonby, trained by James Rowe, were prepared at Sheepshead Bay track, and on the recent trials of both are ready to the hour. Colonial Girl and First Mason were in part trained at Memphis, the preparation being completed at the Sheepshead Bay track after their arrival in the East several weeks ago, and their work having been good enough to convince trainers of their fitness. Beldame, trained at the Gravesend track by Fred Burlew, who handled her last year, has done all that was asked of her, and in all her gallops has showed the same dazzling speed that characterized her performances of last season. Tanya was trained by the veteran master of his art, John Rogers, at the Brookdale Farm of Harry Payne Whitney, Red Bank, N. J., and was shipped to Belmont Park only last Sunday, with the horsemen much in the dark as to how she had progressed, but her first move at the new track Tuesday settled it with the horsemen that Mr. Rogers has the great filly ready for her effort to-day. Siglight, trained partly in Kentucky and finished off at Sheepshead Bay, has showed a lot of speed in his gallops, and it is sufficient that J. E. Madden has decided to start him to show that the Kentucky horseman believes he has a chance to win.

In addition to the race for the Metropolitan two other stakes will be decided to-day in the Juvenile, which will bring out some of the juvenile stars of the big stables, and the New York Steeplechase, while the first race will have a sentimental interest which is enhanced by the desire of horse owners to secure the trophies that will go to the owner, trainer, and rider of the first winner over the new course.

Huge preparations have been made for the handling of the great crowd that surely will gather at the Belmont Park course to-day for the inaugural racing, and with anything like a fair day it is expected confidently that 50,000 visitors will assemble at the track. Special arrangements for the transportation of the multitude have been made by the Long Island Railroad Company, and special trains will be run from the East Thirty-fourth Street Ferry every ten minutes after the first special draws out at 11:20 until a short time before the races begin. Other specials then will go out, however, to accommodate the belated holiday makers. Belmont Park is fourteen miles out of Long Island City, and the trip will be one that will take only about the average time required in transit to the older Long Island tracks.

For the betting patrons of the first day's racing at Belmont Park almost the entire membership of the Metropolitan Turf Association has signified the intention of going on to lay the odds, while outside layers will swell the total of bookmakers to something just around 300.

ANNUAL RACING REPORT.

State Commission Records $1,101,475 Paid to Agricultural Societies.

The annual report of the State Racing Commission, August Belmont, E. D. Morgan, and John Sanford, yesterday was presented to the Legislature at Albany. Discussing generally the flourishing condition of racing affairs, the growth in popularity of turf sport, the establishment of new and extensive breeding farms for thoroughbred horses, and the enhancing of values by careful selection of stock, the report cites in evidence of the prosperity of racing that in the ten years beginning in April, 1895, and ending in November, 1904, there was paid into the State Treasury by racing associations, for apportionment by the Legislature among the agricultural societies, $1,101,475.94. This came through the tax of 5 per cent. on the gross receipts of associations assessed under the law. It rose from $27,220.74 in 1895 to $50,608.10 in 1896, to $54,034.64 in 1897, to $80,483.85 in 1898, to $90,791.74 in 1899, to $98,671.53 in 1900, to $128,531.50 in 1901, to $170,085.88 in 1902, to $200,741.67 in 1903, and last year it was $190,256.30.

The report shows the amounts paid by the several racing associations since 1895, and also the total tax paid by them during that period for the benefit of the agricultural societies of the State. The table follows:

Westchester Racing Association	$183,440.79
Coney Island Jockey Club	273,591.17
Brooklyn Jockey Club	243,427.94
Brighton Beach Racing Association	172,232.50
Saratoga Association	98,856.32
Queens County Jockey Club	81,729.99
Empire City Jockey Club	3,571.39
Buffalo Association	3,124.99
Metropolitan Jockey Club	31,135.39
*Buffalo Racing Association	8,387.33
Total	$1,101,475.95

*New organization.

Of the horse breeding industry the report states:

"During the year 600 head of thoroughbred yearlings were sold in this State for a total of $467,590, averaging $677.96 per head. The figures quoted embrace every yearling brought into the sales ring and for which a bid was made."

SPECIAL LICENSE WINS IN A CLOSE FINISH

NEW YORK EARNED A PURSE

The close of the Spring race meeting on the Metropolitan Jockey Club's track at Jamaica yesterday brought the most satisfactory sport of the eight days that racing has been in progress there, the success of four post favorites serving to give fresh encouragement to the betting visitors, and stimulating expectation for the big events of to-day at Belmont Park.

The feature contest of the day produced the one real surprise, and went to the longest chance winner of the day. This was James R. Keene's Castleton bred colt Special License, which, at 8 to 1, was never headed in the four and a half furlong sprint by two-year olds for the Suffolk Selling Stake, fourth on the card. For this all the horses named on the programme went to the post, with the star of the New Orleans Winter meeting, Leonard Joe Hayman, the favorite at 6 to 5 and Anodyne the second choice. Special License, ridden by the Keene stable jockey, McDaniels, was the quickest to move when the start was made, and in the first jump showed in the lead. From that time he held his place in front, though he had to race all the way to do it. McDaniel kept the Castleton representative close to the rail on the last turn, and hustling him out got to the winning post in a hotly contested finish a scant half length in front of Veribest, a 30 to 1 chance.

In one other race a non-favorite was first, this being New York in the fifth event, a mile and seventy yards handicap, for which five horses ran, with Grenada the top weight. Orthodox and Red Knight were equal favorites at post time, but neither of them had the speed to get to New York after that horse went to the front in the run past the stand the first time. New York was clear of his field on the first turn, and, holding a comfortable lead all the way, he won cleverly by two lengths. Summary:

WRESTLING BOUT TO-NIGHT.

Hackenschmidt Ready to Meet Jenkins for the Championship Title.

In Madison Square Garden to-night George Hackenschmidt, the world renowned Graeco-Roman champion, will contest for the catch-as-catch-can wrestling title with Tom Jenkins, the American holder. The bout has attracted attention throughout the country and should prove the choicest tid-bit that has been offered local followers of the game in years. The men will wrestle to a finish, the winner gaining two falls out of three and carrying off the lion's share of the gate receipts besides a two-thousand-dollar side bet and the championship title.

The conditions call for a twenty-four-foot ring, elevated four foot. All holds are admitted except the strangle. Two judges will officiate besides the referee. Tim Hurst has been named as referee, while one of the judgeships will be occupied by Hughey Jennard of the New York Athletic Club. The other is still unnamed.

It is proposed to start the athletic event at 8:30 o'clock.

You remember the days of the "silver craze" when a lot of people voted that fifty cents' worth of silver was a dollar, especially for paying debts.

Business wavered until the gold standard was safe; and now we laugh at our strange delusions.

A similar attempt is being made to "debase the standard" in the clothing business; it's as great a menace to clothing interests as the silver fallacy was to the country at large; your clothing interests as well as those in the business.

"Mercerized cotton" is put forward, like the cheap silver dollar, as an equivalent for all-wool; makers and dealers in it naturally want you to vote for it; they may make the price a little lower than all-wool in order to buy your vote.

But you don't make anything by buying it; you lose; the profit in "mercerized cotton" clothes is larger than in all-wool, but you don't get any of it.

You lose more than money by it; you lose in looks, in confidence in good clothes; maybe in self-respect. But you needn't. All-wool clothes can be easily had. Ask for them. Our label stands for all-wool; a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

MORE VANDERBILT CUP CARS.

German Club Nominates Robert Graves—Dr. Thomas's Entry In.

Two additional entries were received for the Vanderbilt Cup race yesterday by Robert Lee Morrell, Chairman of the Racing Committee of the American Automobile Association. They are from Dr. Harold E. Thomas of the Chicago Automobile Club, who sent word last week that his formal entry would be made in a few days, and Robert Graves, one of the early members of the Automobile Club of America. Unusual interest attaches to the entry of Mr. Graves, because it is a German entry. Mr. Graves received a cable dispatch yesterday from the Deutscher Automobil Club of Berlin informing him that he had been elected to membership and that he had been nominated by the club for the Vanderbilt event. Mr. Graves enters a powerful 120 horse power German car.

Rogers Wins in Pool Tourney.

Peter Rogers gave a high-class exhibition of pool playing in his match in the local pool championship tournament last night at Sanders's Billiard Academy and defeated Ed. Stroder by a score of 125 to 81. His performance was consistent, and at no time was the result in doubt. His high run was 24, against Stroder's 19, while he made two scratches against Stroder's four.

To-night's match will be played between Arthur Linewall and Carmine Alcerl.

Too Late

ON THAT DATE THE DISCOUNT OF 43 PER CENT. WILL BE WITHDRAWN.

The Historians' History of the World.

THIS new magnum opus of world-history—the most successful, interesting and instructive book of many years, is now completed, and this event, according to announcements already made, will be followed by an increase in prices. Readers of this newspaper should mail their orders promptly in order to make sure of getting the introductory prices. They should take into consideration their distance from New York and the possibilities of postal delay. There is no time to be wasted.

During publication The Historians' History of the World has been offered at a discount of 43 per cent. from the regular prices. This generous concession and the distribution of specimen volumes (substituting the book for the book agent, and saving the agent's commission) have achieved for the history, which is now universally recognized as the one complete, modern, and at the same time interesting narrative of all history and all times. For example, it brings Japanese history down to the battle of Liao Yang and United States history down to the election of Roosevelt. Present indications are that the first edition now offered will be largely oversubscribed.

A GREAT AND IMMEDIATE SUCCESS

Opinions of Scholars and Critics.

(Note.—Ex-President Cleveland's letter has been already published.)

ANDREW CARNEGIE:

I have yours of March 8th. I am pleased to see that you say "historical books on various countries deal with such limited periods and are so overwhelming in quantity that it is almost hopeless for the busy man to try to read them." Nothing can be truer than that. The great fault with historians, it seems to me, is the time they devote to mere detail. Those in charge of your "Historians' History" give attention only to important events such as change or develop previous conditions, grasping the psychological moments, thus giving readers knowledge of causes and results of those uprisings which in the history of every nation seem to mark epochs. This makes the work an encyclopaedia of the World's History, to which one may refer as one does to encyclopaedias for controlling facts.

Professor W. M. SLOANE, author of "The Life of Napoleon," etc.:

I have examined several volumes of your Historians' History of the World and one of them, that on the Revolutionary Epoch in France, with some care. I find much to praise in the enterprise. The selections have been made with skill and conscientiousness, and the running comments are clear and just. So far as possible under the plan adopted there is a continuity of narrative and editorial attitude. It seems to me that the work is well adapted for the use of intelligent men and women who want trustworthy historical knowledge with a minimum expenditure of time and energy.

WILLIAM R. HARPER, President of Chicago University:

In these modern days, every man is constantly confronted with questions of history covering a wide range of space and time, but very few men have either the library room or the means to keep on hand a complete file of histories for reference. To such men, and their name is legion, something in the nature of a cyclopaedia which shall gather together in compact form the most serviceable information, is almost a necessity. General cyclopaedias do not answer the purpose for two reasons among others: First, that historical data are intermingled with data on other subjects, and second, that the limitations of space do not permit a sufficiently full treatment of historical subjects. What is wanted is something intermediate between a bare chronicle of facts and voluminous and elaborate histories for each country.

This want The Historians' History of the World effectively meets. Although I have not had time to examine all of the volumes, I am convinced from those in which I have read that in general the salient points in the events and periods treated are brought out and a conception given which is true and clear. In short, the volumes seem to give the "gist of the matter," just what the average busy man wants to know, and all that often he has time to read.

I have received The Historians' History of the World. I deem it an invaluable addition to my library. It seems to me that it stands next to the dictionary and encyclopaedia in usefulness. To be able to turn quickly to the history of any of the world's nations, ancient or modern, is an enormous advantage to the busy man as well as the student. And in your volume the reader turns to the best minds and authorities in each epoch. The books are tastefully bound, the print is large, the illustrations modern and a valuable addition to the text. One cannot praise too highly the service you have done to literature in this series.

EDWARD GAYLORD BOURNE, Professor of History, Yale University:

Taking the work by and large, I am convinced that the average searcher for historical knowledge who is without expert guidance from a trained scholar will, on the whole, fare much better in resorting to The Historians' History, so far as getting at the accepted results of historical scholarship in a readable form is concerned, than he would in the average American public library of forty to fifty thousand volumes, unless he had expert guidance. In proportion as the libraries to which he has access are smaller, in that degree would he fare better by relying on The Historians' History. Nor do I see how it can reasonably be questioned that the average public or school library and many college libraries would find their range of historical material greatly expanded by the acquisition of The Historians' History.

CHARLES WAGNER, author of "The Simple Life":

I think that The Outlook has done a fine thing in compiling The Historians' History of the World according to this plan. It is just what we need at this period of the world's progress to help all nations to understand, appreciate, and love one another, and to clear away the jealousies and misunderstandings that have caused such terrible misery. Your history shows much to admire in every nation.

What I like particularly in your work is the vast amount of translating you have done and the impartial use you have made of historians of all nations. Thus you do not give history from the English or French or German point of view, but from the universal point of view.

JAMES B. ANGELL, President of the University of Michigan:

It is only recently that I have been able to examine The Historians' History of the World, several volumes of which you sent me some months ago.

The plan is so unique that it was with some misgivings that I began my examination of the work. But I must confess that the measure of success surprises me. And the reader has the advantage often of studying different and even opposing views of high authorities. The inconvenience in ascertaining whose statement we are reading in any particular passage is by the system of notation made less than I feared it might be.

The translations from foreign writers, so far as I have tested them, are admirably done. The introductory essays to the different divisions give excellent preliminary surveys of the histories which are given in fuller detail in the chapters that follow. In short, the altogether original plan has been well carried out.

F. MARION CRAWFORD, author of "Ave Roma Immortalis," etc.:

I have gone over Vol. VI. of The Historians' History of the World, which covers the period from the early Roman Empire to A. D. 476. In my opinion this volume gives an admirable account of a most difficult period. Not content with the work of the ablest modern scholars, the editors give us long extracts from the original authorities, and we have the inestimable advantage of reading Suetonius' account of Augustus or Zosimus' description of Constantine's victories for ourselves. The story is well and clearly told, while the main questions of the period, such as the theory of the Empire, its relations with Christianity, and the barbarian invasions are discussed with especial care; nor are the manners and customs of the day neglected. The whole work is, moreover, profusely but judiciously illustrated, a portrait of Mommsen forming a most suitable frontispiece.

Please bear in mind that a payment of $2.00 AT ONCE will bring you delivery of the entire set, and that you can pay the balance in small monthly sums at the low introductory prices; but FUTURE ORDERS will be charged the higher price.

Orders must be received on or before May 15 to be accepted at the low introductory prices. Send orders, requests for information, etc., to

HOW WE CAN TRADE WITH GERMANY.

We note without surprise the fact that some of the extreme protectionists speak of the recent tariff policy of Germany as "unfriendly" to this country. So far as they are concerned, it should be regarded rather as flattering, for Germany has at last, and after much hesitation, advanced a good way toward our own policy.

What in substance Germany has done is to fix two sets of tariff rates on pretty nearly all imports. One, known as "general," embraces the rates that all countries must pay which have no reciprocity treaties with Germany. The other embraces much lower rates which can be secured by those countries which are willing to make corresponding reductions in their own tariffs. One of the chief objects of this new policy was to shut out the competition of the United States and Great Britain, both of which countries had a commercial treaty with Germany entitling them to the treatment of the most favored nation. That claim is now met by the fact that any reduction of tariff rates must be purchased—to use a plain phrase—by an equivalent favor to Germany. Great Britain imposes no tariff rates on imports generally from Germany, save in a few cases, such as wines and liquors. She is, therefore, without any basis for a "deal," and Mr. CHAMBERLAIN is making the most of this situation as an argument for his policy. But there is ample basis for one in the tariff of the United States, and Germany will probably not be backward in seeking to take advantage of it.

As to both imports and exports, our trade with Germany is important, and second in variety and amount only to our trade with the United Kingdom. Our total trade for the last year recorded in detail was $313,614,137, of which some $120,000,000 was imports and some $194,000,000 exports. Of the imports some $92,000,000, or 75 per cent., was dutiable. The duties on these imports were all high and the average was considerably higher than the duties Germany proposes to impose in her general tariff. Among the lowest are the duties on cement, 20 per cent.; on chemicals, 25 per cent.; on coal-oil colors, 30 per cent., and from these the duties range to from 45 per cent. to 65 per cent. on cotton goods, 55 per cent. on china, and 60 per cent. on hempen fabrics. There are other duties which do not appear in the official reports for the reason that they are prohibitory and no imports are made. We have been informed by Germany that her Government is ready to enter upon negotiations for a reciprocal reduction of tariff rates, and these negotiations are now in course of preparation.

Our exports to Germany are almost exclusively food products. It is on these that the protectionists of that country have secured high duties to prevent or reduce competition, because in Germany the protectionists are land owners, as they were originally in England. So far as these repressive duties hinder the prosperity of our own citizens it is the farming class here that suffers, and that class can get no compensating advantage from the tariff because there is no competition with their products from abroad. On the other hand, a glance at the list of high duties we have given will show that the men in our country who gain most from the tariff are those who have most generally formed combinations in the nature of monopolies, and who are enabled by the tariff, which hinders competition from abroad, to exact monopolistic prices in our own market. There is every reason, therefore, why the duties on German imports should be reduced in order to obtain better terms for our exports to German markets. The plan will be opposed by the combinations of protected and favored interests, but if the farming class will use the influence to which they are fairly entitled they can compel respect for their rights.

CORRUPT AND CONTENT.

It was not to be expected that the Republican Legislature would pass the bill prepared by Mr. PERRY BELMONT prohibiting the corrupt use of money in elections. The pretext for amending the bill and thus defeating it was a miserable one, but any club would answer to do away with a measure so offensive to the men of the Republican machine. The Republican leaders know very well that the demand for legislation against corrupt election practices grew out of the scandals of the Republican Presidential campaign of last year. The passage of the Brackett bill would have been construed as an admission of the truth of the charges made against the managers of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S campaign, and as a criticism upon them. That was one reason for defeating the bill. There is another and much stronger reason.

The Republican machine through its agents and hirelings and captains of tens and of fifties has been accustomed to make free use of corruption funds in political campaigns in this State. The indirect or open buying of votes is notorious. Every student of the subject who attempts a careful inquiry into the nature and extent of the evil to be cured is shocked by the volume of testimony as to the bribery of voters. The enactment of a corrupt practices act like that prepared by Mr. BELMONT and introduced by Senator BRACKETT would very greatly diminish if not prevent the corrupt expenditure of campaign funds. The publicity required and the penalties imposed would make a continuance of the practice much too dangerous. Being altogether unwilling to abandon the buying of votes, the Republican machine simply killed the bill. It has thrived by corruption in the past, it is not ready to discard an instrument that has so well served its purposes. The machine is corrupt and it is willing to continue in corruption.

That is the truth about the defeat of the Brackett bill by Assemblyman MERRITT'S amendment. Section 185 provided that the provisions of the act should not apply to regularly established newspapers. Mr. MERRITT moved to strike out the word "not." Newspapers do not expend money in bribing voters. Honest newspapers do not accept money for advocating causes or supporting candidates. If starveling newspapers do take money for such purposes the expenditure is futile, the money is wasted. The electors do not heed the voice of such advocates. Newspapers do and may properly take money for advertisements of political meetings or the announcements of committees. That is part of their legitimate business. The Merritt amendment is without virtue, save that at this stage of the session it suffices to kill the bill. In the eyes of Republican leaders that is a shining virtue. The purpose they have doubtless entertained from the beginning is accomplished.

THE POLYCLINIC MEDICAL SCHOOL.

We published some time ago a communication from Dr. JOHN A. WYETH with reference to the kind of work, and its value, done at the Polyclinic Medical School. That institution is now in need of a new building, and appeals to the wealthy men of New York to aid it. We think the appeal is worthy of the most careful consideration, and that an examination of the purpose and methods of the school will strongly justify it.

The essential aim of the school is the practical teaching of the art of preventing and healing disease not merely through theoretic instruction, but, in addition, through the actual observation of cases in hospital and dispensary practice. It is the aim that has been pursued with such intelligence and success at Johns Hopkins in the system of which Dr. OSLER is the eminent advocate and of which he is to undertake the establishment in the University of Oxford. In our city, though there is provision for excellent medical instruction, his system is not adopted in a degree at all proportioned to the needs of the community. Dr. WYETH and his associates have been working nearly a quarter of a century with singular devotion and unselfishness to extend the system. It is certainly a sound one, and we commend it to candid and friendly study by the philanthropic.

THE FREE LECTURE COURSE.

The reunion this evening of the Free Lecture Corps of the Board of Education celebrates a work of the first importance to the community and one which merits public appreciation. Some facts concerning the course will be of general interest.

There were given during the past season in the several boroughs of New York 4,650 of these free lectures, by 493 specialists. These lectures were attended by 1,155,000 people. The cost of the lectures averaged $27.96 each, and the cost per auditor was 11¼ cents. This includes the pay and expenses of the lecturer, the pay of the stereopticon operator, the cost of gas, and all expenses except rent. For this no allowance is made, as most of these lectures are given in public school assembly rooms or places for which no charge is made.

The total appropriation for the year was about $130,000, and, considering the results, it must be admitted that this money was well expended. For the lecturers it is largely an unselfish service, taking them to all sorts of places in all kinds of weather, and with no other compensation than is found in the satisfaction of benefiting those who come to be instructed. These audiences are highly appreciative and consist largely of wage earners who value the opportunities thus afforded for education and recreation. The net results of the course have been summed up as follows:

Adult education is established as a permanent part of our educational scheme.

Reading and study have been encouraged, a deeper interest in school life developed, and a refining influence spread.

Co-operative has been brought about between the lecture, the library, and museum.

The best teachers in our universities have come in contact with the people.

The school is becoming the social centre of the community.

The school of the future must be constructed with a view to its use for various educative influences, so that it may become not alone a nursery for children, but a place of intelligent resort for men.

Dr. HENRY LEIPZIGER, who organized this system and has conducted its development, is entitled to great credit for the skill with which he has adapted the lectures to the taste and the needs of the people. Other cities, large and small, are following the example of New York in this matter, and the conviction of all familiar with the work is that it is the most practical scheme of university extension yet devised. A growth in attendance from 23,635 in 1890 to 1,155,000 in 1905 attests the popular appreciation of the standards now attained in this department of popular education.

RADIUM, X-RAYS, AND CANCER.

It seems that many physicians and even specialists are deceived if the progress of medical science has not arrived at a cure for one of the most dreaded of human maladies. The surgical removal of cancerous growths has been practiced for generations. But it has come to be assumed that the relief following operations is transient and fallacious, and that the tendency of the morbid growths to recur can be thwarted only by the death of the patient from some other cause.

Now, however, it seems that the growths can be dissipated instead of being excised, and the germs of diseased growth destroyed without affecting healthy tissues. The application of what one practitioner describes as "fluid sunshine" has produced these results. In the very important and conspicuous case of President HARPER the treatment by radium has been combined with the use of the X-ray. About the great improvement there is no question, and the result thus far has been to warrant strong hope that the improvement is of a different and a more hopeful kind than the delusive improvements which follow the use of the knife.

If a permanent cure is effected, humanity will be relieved of one of its greatest and most mysterious scourges. And every one will rejoice that the relief has begun with the recovery of Dr. HARPER. It would be hard indeed to designate a more valuable life than that which now seems likely to be preserved for a long term of additional usefulness. Dr. HARPER has been the one indispensable factor in building up to its present usefulness and importance the great institution over which he presides. We say the one indispensable factor, even keeping in mind the millionaire whose munificence made the University of Chicago possible. For Mr. ROCKEFELLER'S money might have been so bestowed as to be wasted and worse than wasted if he had not found so judicious as well as so zealous an adviser and almoner. That Dr. HARPER'S life may be prolonged to the fulfillment of the great work which he has so well begun must be the earnest wish of every friend of the higher education in these United States.

MME. MODJESKA.

Coming so soon after the death of JOSEPH JEFFERSON the retirement of Mme. MODJESKA gains an added significance. Here also is an artist, as the ceremonies attending the retirement, what we may almost call the professional funeral, attest, as much beloved in private as admired in public. The artistic rewards of a great actor's career, leaving out the emoluments, actors are prone to complain, are but the momentary applause of the crowd, and a vague tradition must serve for all that they can aspire to of fame. The same complaint is made by and on behalf of eloquent advocates:

Glory of warrior, glory of orator, glory of song,
Paid with a voice flying by to be lost on an endless sea.

But such occasions as those we have been witnessing assure us that the sentiment a great dramatic artist inspires may be both more lasting and more affectionate than great artists of that kind are apt to think it. Only, to gain such a tribute from efforts which can be made no longer, the artist must have pursued the art with seriousness, with dignity, with a certain idealism and a devotion not wholly selfish. It is an interesting and a discouraging speculation how many of the dramatic favorites of the present hour will deserve or receive such a tribute as has been paid to Mme. MODJESKA when their hour in turn is over.

The Senator from Connecticut who has just died was perhaps the most powerful of the stanch friends of Mr. ROOSEVELT in the Senate.—Harper's Weekly.

True, in a way, but totally misleading. ORVILLE H. PLATT did not share the views, approve the policies, or trust the judgment of President ROOSEVELT, and was one of the few Republican Senators who had the courage to tell him of his mistakes and warn him of their consequences. In that way he was one of Mr. ROOSEVELT'S stanchest and most useful friends.

Some people are easily made happy. The Secretary of the Treasury and his immediate friends are expressing contentment that the deficit a couple of months hence will probably be no more than $23,000,000. Mr. SHAW, after careful study, last Winter estimated that the deficiency would be more than $18,000,000. A little excess of 40 per cent., which would give a Finance Minister of the effete monarchies great uneasiness, does not impress the optimistic mind of our Secretary as of any importance. It is, however, just this state of things that the correspondent of The Tribune predicted would compel the President to take up in earnest the revision of the tariff, with a view to increasing the revenues by reducing taxes and stimulating imports. The purpose would be an excellent one, and the process sensible and practical.

One of the objections urged against universal education has been that when all the negroes are educated there will be no servants. An educated servant is the best servant for educated people.—BOOKER T. WASHINGTON at Hampton on Virginia Day.

Matters which belong properly to the sphere of intelligent service educated people daily find they must attend to for themselves because of the scarcity of educated servants. The demand for such servants is keen and competitive; they are well paid when obtainable. "There is no disgrace in being a cook," says Mr. WASHINGTON, "but there is eternal disgrace in being a poor cook." Graduates of Hampton, Tuskegee, and other such institutions will receive the support of intelligent citizens in the plan to establish in every Southern community schools for the education of servants and good cooks.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Scolded, but not Corrected.

We seem seriously to have disturbed the temper of The American Electrician by our recent remarks about the "terrible waste of coal" involved in the use of incandescent lamps that give out as light only one-half of 1 per cent. of the potential energy contained in the fuel burned to run them. What we said, according to our wise and courteous neighbor, was marked by "the would-be superior tone" habitually assumed by us when discussing technical subjects; we "took occasion to ignore a few facts and to distort a few others in order to create an opportunity to lecture 'electricians' on their lack of humility and superabundance of homage seeking, which exists (sic) solely in the imagination of THE TIMES"; we made a "patronizing reference" to those who are trying to use coal in a more economical way than by burning it; and, in view of our record for "ludicrous technical errors and sciolistic dicta," a little more humility would have improved our discussion of a question of mixed thermo-dynamics and electrical engineering. As scoldings go it is a beautiful specimen, but it would have done us a lot more good if The American Electrician had found time to mention a single blunder in the paragraph that excited its rage, or if it had disproved our only contention, which was that there exists a very general misconception as to the ratio between what the electricians have done and what remains for them to do before they will really deserve all the homage the public gives them and can accept that homage with clear consciences. That we have occasionally made mistakes, and lamentable ones, in the discussion of technical subjects, is known to none better than to ourselves, but the revival of that unfortunate fact is hardly pertinent to our critic's text, which was our presentation, on excellent authority, of the energy-loss occurring between the coal pile and the incandescent lamp. The figures were, indeed, more or less embroidered in what is, alas! our poor best style of decoration, but that didn't affect their accuracy, didn't vitiate our argument, and above all, didn't justify so savage an attack from a paper which we have long regarded with the affection deserved by one that frequently supplies us with the long quotable passages which lighten editorial labors so agreeably. Doesn't that make The American Electrician regret its harshness just a little?

Prizefighting as a Profession.

Pugilism, according to its now most eminent exponent, Mr. JAMES J. JEFFRIES, does not pay. When he says that pugilism does not pay he doubtless means that it does not pay enough to content him. This dictum, made as it certainly is, from experience and from the sort of knowledge that experience gives, has both value and interest. Prizefighting as a profession or trade can be considered, of course, from other standpoints than the one which commands its money profits, but the view from that position is worthy of attention. To those of us who have not Mr. JEFFRIES'S experience, but only a general and impersonal knowledge of the subject, he seems to be wrong, for, according to all accounts—and, for the sake of safety, dividing by two or three the figures which those accounts record—pugilism does pay, and pay well, since its proceeds are many times as much as its votaries would be likely to receive in any other industry. To be sure, its votaries are compelled to abstain for prolonged periods from what may be called their natural pleasures, they do much of what predisposes the same weariness that results from the manipulation of picks and shovels or the carrying of a hod, and it occasionally leads to the endurance of no little physical discomfort in the shape of a stronger man's blows, but the wage of even an ordinary success is considerable, and there is a reward of glory which should not be despised simply because a good many people would not enjoy glory of that particular kind. It can fairly be suspected that the present distaste of Mr. JEFFRIES is in great part due to the fact that he can no longer persuade opponents to meet him. Standing in proud but lonely grandeur in a class by himself, there is nothing in pugilism for him, and with saltatory logic he condemns as unprofitable the vocation from which he has drawn so much. Now he is going into "business," in search of what—more money, associates of a higher stamp, a reputation of savor more widely appreciated? Let him choose his business with discrimination, for he can easily miss all these and regret the past he now belittles. Hitherto, presumably, he never offered of his abundance to a good cause, only to meet with savage criticism. As a man of business, no matter how successful, that may be his humiliating fate.

Alas and Alas for Mr. Fairbanks!

Humorists, while rare in this country as in others, nevertheless are numerous enough in every State to constitute a "vote" worth having in a close election, and when one adds to them the number of people who are able to see a joke when it is carefully brought to their attention a class is formed of such very respectable proportions that no ambitious politician can afford [illegible]

IMPORT OF CHICAGO STRIKE.

What a Victory for the Teamsters' Union Would Mean.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The teamsters' strike now on in Chicago should vitally interest the entire business community of the country. If this strike should be arbitrated, or settled in any way other than the utter defeat of the teamsters' union, the consequences will be of the greatest seriousness. It will establish a precedent that business cannot be carried on anywhere except by consent of teamsters. They become the controlling power in every labor dispute.

Montgomery Ward & Co. had trouble with some garment workers over hours or wages. The teamsters' flat went forth that no freight or express matter should be hauled from or delivered to that firm; that they should have no coal; that no ashes or rubbish should be hauled away; further, that no freight should be hauled to or from any firm that undertook to deliver goods or receive goods from Ward & Co.

There are plenty of teamsters ready and willing to haul freight to and from the boycotted firm. Absolutely the only way by which the strike lasts a day is on account of violence committed by the union teamsters in the public streets. The teamsters have heretofore taken the same position in hotel and apartment house and many other classes of strikes, including building operations. This is the union custom. If any concern in any line of business has a labor trouble in which the teamsters' union thinks the strikers are justified, no freight of any kind can be hauled to or from that concern or to or from any concern dealing with the firm under the ban of the union. Street blockades and clubbing and killing are their regular methods of carrying out their warfare.

Chicago has suffered from the tyranny of the teamsters for many years, but at last the business community have united forces to emancipate themselves from such an intolerable situation. They have plenty of teams and teamsters ready to work, if the public streets can be kept free from violence and riot. It is such a strike as this that the President of the United States is asked to arbitrate and settle.

It is to be hoped that the public authorities will do nothing in this affair but to quell riot and disorder with so much of the police and military force of the city first, the State next, and the United States last as may be required.

"Manor House" and "Mansion."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to correct two mistakes in the letter of "E. W. F.," published in your issue of to-day.

In the first place, the Van Cortlandt house standing in the park of the same name is not the Van Cortlandt "manor house." The manor house, built during the latter part of the seventeenth century and in the Dutch architecture of the time, stands at the mouth of the Croton River, near Croton-on-Hudson. The mansion in the park is an English house of the eighteenth century.

In the second place, the mansion is not under the control of the Daughters of the American Revolution, but of the Society of Colonial Dames of the State of New York, to which the public is indebted for the appropriate furnishing and decoration, and for the intelligent keeping which make it so attractive and interesting to visitors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Would not the proposed transfer of franchise-granting power from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment involve a departure from the principle requiring separate and distinct lodgment of legislative and executive powers, the latter body being made up of officials whose functions are primarily executive?

EDUCATORS CLOSE TOUR.

Booker T. Washington Thanks Mr. Ogden in Behalf of Negroes.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT MONROE, Va., May 3.—Robert C. Ogden's Southern trip with a party of distinguished guests from the North closed here to-night, the party leaving for New York at 6:30 this evening.

The visitors spent the forenoon at Hampton Institute, inspecting the industrial departments for Indian and negro students. In the afternoon the party attended the anniversary exercises which were held in the gymnasium. A feature of the occasion was the series of addresses by the graduates and alumni of the institution. Robert C. Ogden, President of the Board of Trustees, delivered an address to the class which is soon to be graduated. He announced that one year had been added to the course of instruction, and that Seth Low had been elected to the Board of Trustees.

Booker T. Washington of the class of 1875 in an address urged the negro students never to be ashamed of their race. He said that by earnest work and striving the race would prosper. It would be met by prejudice, but if it had the courage to work hard and keep silent it might and would win the heritage of respect and prosperity. He pointed to the Japanese as an example of what indomitable perseverance would do for a people.

Mr. Washington said that Mr. Ogden had been one of the greatest aids and strongest helpers in the civilization and advancement of the negro. His great achievement had been in winning to the cause not only the hearts of the North, but the best hearts of the South. He said that throughout all the recent trials of the simple business man who had taken up the work of uplifting the blacks, the sympathy and prayers of white and black in the Southland had been with him.

Mr. Washington then called the attention of the assembly to the fact that it was the twenty-fifth anniversary of Principal H. B. Frissell with the school, and handed him a box filled with gold coins, saying: "The graduates scattered over the land, most of them men and women of very modest means, have thought it not out of order to testify their love and appreciation of Dr. Frissell by presenting him a purse of $800."

SONS COULDN'T KEEP MONEY.

Therefore Nelson Changed Will—Paintings to Museum.

The will of William Nelson, who died on April 3, at his home, 5 East Eighty-sixth Street, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's Office yesterday. The bulk of the estate is left in trust for the benefit of the widow, Marie C. Nelson, who gets the two estates on the Hudson, known as "The Knolls" and "Sprayside," together with their contents, and the house at 5 East Eighty-sixth Street. She is also to receive $90,000 in cash and all the life insurance benefits due from the Produce Exchange, of which her husband was a member.

A historical painting of Washington receiving Lafayette, the work of Rossiter and Mignot, is bequeathed to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. A painting of St. Peter's at Rome by George Cook is also left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

There are four codicils to the will, the last one dated shortly before the death of Mr. Nelson. They materially change the bequests provided for in the body of the will, notably those to the testator's sons. By the original will the sons, William, Horatio, and Harvey, were each to receive $15,000 in cash, and were to share equally in the residue of the estate, but the stipulation was made that $20,000, which Horatio received, and a similar amount which William had received, was to be charged to their accounts in dividing the residue. One of the codicils upsets these bequests, saying: "Finding my sons, William, Horatio, and Harvey, are not equal to keeping money," and then providing that the executors are to establish trust funds from which William and Harvey are to receive a yearly income of $2,500, and Horatio an income of $3,500 a year.

The sum of $15,000 is to be set aside for the benefit of each of the younger children, Gerald Desmond, Marie and Gertrude Nelson.

METROPOLITAN WINS SUIT.

Assessment on Capital Stock for 1897 Is Ordered Vacated.

The Metropolitan Street Railway Company, which brought an action in the Supreme Court to have reviewed the action of the Tax Department in levying an assessment on the company's capital stock for the year 1897, in which the assessment was fixed at $10,134,950, won its case yesterday, when Justice Bischoff confirmed the report of Referee Hamilton Odell. The referee held practically that the assessment should be set aside for the reason that the "taxable assets" of the railway company were exceeded by the "deductable liabilities." In confirming the referee's report that the assessment should be stricken from the assessment roll and wholly vacated, Justice Bischoff says that the referee's conclusion is based upon the finding that the taxable assets of the railway company are exceeded by the deductable liabilities by something over $16,000,000.

"In round numbers," says Justice Bischoff in his opinion, "the referee's finding is that the assets in the form of securities, cash in bank, tangible personal property, and real estate, consisting of tracks in the street and property other than tracks, lessened by the assessed value of real estate, aggregate $3,625,000, and the outstanding liabilities deductable under the statute, and consisting of accounts payable, together with the indebtedness represented by bonds issued by several railway companies, liability on which was assumed by the relator is the ccurse of consolidation of the debtor companies, aggregate a little over $20,000,000."

MAYOR RIDES IN AMBULANCE.

Tests Automobile Designed for Conveying Contagious Disease Patients.

Mayor McClellan rode in an ambulance yesterday, yielding to the urgings of Health Commissioner Darlington that he inaugurate a new branch of the city service. The ambulance is a gasoline automobile made from special designs. It looks like a big touring car with an ambulance attached. It is to be used, if tests prove satisfactory, in conveying patients ill with contagious diseases from various points in the Borough of Queens to the hospitals where such diseases receive treatment.

The machine was drawn up at the curb near Lafayette and Worth Streets and the Mayor walked from his office with Dr. Darlington to where the big car stood chugging and shaking. As he took his seat beside the chauffeur photographers snapped their cameras and away went the machine. For the sake of Mrs. McClellan's peace of mind the Mayor ordered that the car be stopped a block away from his home.

EVANGELISTS TO SWEEP WHOLE GREATER CITY

Non-Sectarian Wagon Campaign Begins Next Tuesday.

TO START AT THE CITY HALL

Band of City Clergymen of All Protestant Denominations to Make Open-Air Addresses.

If the plans of the committee of clergymen arranging the matter do not miscarry, "open air evangelism" a week hence will be sweeping the city from a base on the City Hall steps, and if the first few meetings are successful Dr. C. L. Goodell of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, who is Chairman of the Executive Committee, says that the evangelical campaign, with the aid of tents and wagons, will be carried from Coney Island to the limits of the Bronx. From cart tail ends clergymen of all denominations, who have banded themselves together for this work, will preach in the open streets to Wall Street men, Sixth Avenue shoppers, and factory girls—all who will stop to listen.

The clergymen whose names appear on the list of those who will take active parts in the campaign, besides Dr. Goodell, are Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Plymouth Church; Dr. Henry Mottet, Church of the Holy Communion; Dr. Coffin, pastor-elect of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church; Dr. J. G. Fagg, Marble Collegiate Church; Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, President of the Union Theological Seminary; Dr. R. S. MacArthur, Calvary Baptist Church; Dr. W. C. Bitting, Mount Morris Baptist Church; Dr. J. F. Carson, Central Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn; Dr. E. S. Tipple, Grace Methodist Episcopal Church; Dr. McAfee, Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, and some others.

The banding together of the clergymen whose names appear in the list marks in a novel way a breaking through the barriers of denominationalism. The financial part of the enterprise will be borne by the various churches, but no part of the campaign will be managed by any particular denomination. It is a common movement, say those interested, for Christianity and the good of the public. All the open air meetings will be accompanied by organ and cornet music.

Dr. Goodell, when seen at his home, 136 West One Hundred and Thirtieth Street, yesterday, said that the movement had been under consideration for some time, and would have to be begun in a small way. He expressed himself as confident, however, that such success would attend the first meetings that presently the committee would see its way to extending the branches of the campaign.

"We have already applied to the Mayor," said Dr. Goodell, "for permission to open with a meeting every day on the City Hall steps, beginning May 9 and ending probably about May 15. We have not as yet received a reply to this request, but we understand that the Mayor regards the movement with favor.

"As soon as the result of our endeavors in that field are known to us we will then branch out immediately. We have arranged for wagons which will travel around the city—to Fifth Avenue, Twenty-third Street, the east side, and the factory district in the west side. The singing at City Hall, by the way, will be conducted by Mr. F. H. Jacobs, who now conducts the singing at the Fulton Street noon meetings.

"But all this is only preliminary to the tent work, which is our ultimate ambition. We have already arranged for four tents, and as the success of our campaign becomes apparent we will get more. We will have tents in or near all the parks, one at Coney Island, probably, and one in the Bronx.

"There has arisen some prejudice against so-called evangelical meetings, but the banding together of individual clergymen in this work is something new and ought to attract lots of people and do lots of good. Our meetings will not be too religious in tone. We will strive to give helpful instruction along both ethical and religious lines."

OFF TO SEEK FIALA.

Two Ziegler Expeditions Will Look for Brooklyn's Artic Explorer.

Aboard the White Star liner Teutonic, which sailed yesterday for Liverpool, was William S. Champ, who is to head the Ziegler expedition in search of Anthony Fiala, the Brooklyn explorer, who went in search of the north pole in the America in 1903. Dr. Oliver L. Fassig of Johns Hopkins University and the Baltimore Weather Bureau sailed with Mr. Champ, and he will go by way of Shannon Islands on the same mission.

The Terra Nova, on which the Champ party is to sail, is now at the India Docks, London. She has been fitted up with both steam and sail power, and will leave Tromsoe, Norway, about June 1. A quantity of dynamite is being taken along, not to force a way through the ice, Mr. Champ explained, but to be used whenever it was necessary to free vessel or sleds. Mr. Champ's instructions are said to be to remain in the north until he has found Fiala or his party. The route will be through Franz Josef Land, which is the same taken by Fiala.

Dr. Fassig will sail in the Belgica, leaving England about May 15. His route by way of Shannon Islands, Greenland, is the first time, it is said, that an attempt has been made to penetrate the arctic region from that direction. Mr. Champ said that possibly Fiala attempted to return to civilization by way of Greenland.

Robinson Again Grand Master.

The one hundred and twenty-fourth annual communication of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of the State of New York, which was begun on Tuesday, was continued yesterday at the Masonic Hall. Officers were elected as follows: Frank H. Robinson, Hornellsville, Grand Master; Townsend Scudder, Glen Head, L. I., Deputy Grand Master; S. Nelson Sawyer, Elmira, Senior Grand Warden; Charles Smith, Oneonta, Junior Grand Warden; Frederick P. Morris, Flushing, Grand Treasurer, and Edward M. L. Ehlers, Grand Secretary. In all but one instance these were re-elections. The exception was Mr. Morris. He succeeds John H. Gardner, who declined re-election.

DO IT AGAIN.

The paper was fresh from the press—
The neatest I ever have seen;
A marvel of printing, no less,
All errorless, type-whole, and clean.
So, heaving a sigh of relief,
I halted my hurrying pen;
Abrupt came the voice of my Chief,
"That's good. Go and do it again!"

Oh, daub it, or scribble, or till,
Or build, as it seems to you best,
And look for reward where you will,
But dream not fruition meank rest,
For, sing the most glorious lays,
Or drain the most pestilent fen,
The Voice, e'er it ceases to praise,
Will bid you, "Go, do it again!"

Old laurels must wither and fall;
Win others, and never demur—
That, longing for manger and stall,
Your lot is the lash and the spur.

WOMEN TOOL COACHES THROUGH CENTRAL PARK

Four-in-Hand Club Holds Annual Parade.

MRS. HASTINGS, REVIEWER

Eight Coaches in Procession—Whitelaw Reid His Daughter's Guest—Luncheon at Metropolitan Club.

The annual parade of the Ladies' Four-in-Hand Driving Club was held yesterday morning, the place of meeting was the East Seventy-second Street entrance to Central Park, and the course of the parade was through the Park, to the west side, and up the west side to the Circle at One Hundred and Tenth Street, where the review was held, and then down through the Park to the Mall and over to the Metropolitan Club at Sixtieth Street and Fifth Avenue, where luncheon was served.

The hour of the meet was 11:30, and the coaches all were on the spot early. There were only eight coaches this year as against ten last year. Mrs. Arthur Iselin, the Vice President, is in mourning for Adrian Iselin, and others absent who drove last year were Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Miss Bryce, Miss Cary, Mrs. Ledyard Blair, and Miss Harriman. On the other hand, members driving this year who were not in the last parade were Miss Jean Reid, Miss Ruth Twombly, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman.

The day was even more beautiful than the parade day of last year, when the meet was also held on May 3, and the equipment of the coaches and horses and the horsemanship were quite as good as on the former occasion, which is saying much.

The whips wore the regulation light fawn beaver hats and dark blue driving coats of the club, and their women guests were in light Spring costumes.

Among those who were on the Avenue to witness the start were the Vice-President, Mrs. Arthur Iselin and her mother, Mrs. William Jay; Mrs. Charles G. Peters, Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Mrs. Earnest Iselin, Miss Therese Iselin, Miss Cynthia Roche, Mrs. James A. Burden, Sr., Miss Caroline Wilmerding, Miss Evelyn Parsons, Mrs. Richard Irvin, Gordon Fellows, and Whitney Warren.

Mrs. Thomas Hastings, the President, was at the head of the line, and Miss Louise Gulliver, the Secretary, brought up the rear, with her smart green and yellow coach. Miss Gulliver's was the only outfit that showed a gray leader. Mrs. Hastings's horses had their headstalls trimmed with scarlet carnations, and her guests wore bunches of these flowers. Her guests included Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Henry Macdona, Mr. Hastings, and Sydney Paget.

Following the President came Miss Jean Reid, who drove J. Henry Smith's coach, a dark blue, her horses with cornflowers in their headstalls. Whitelaw Reid sat on the box seat, his daughter's guest of honor, and other guests were Miss Natica Rives, Miss Katharine Barney, J. Henry Smith, and Moreton Frewen.

Third in line was Miss Angelica Gerry. Dark red carnations were the harness flowers, and the guests wore bouquets of the Roosevelt carnations. Miss Gerry's guests were her sister, Miss Mabel Gerry, Mrs. O. G. Jennings, Worthington Whitehouse, E. Victor Loew, and Bradish Johnson.

The fourth coach was driven by Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, and Dr. H. Seward Webb had the box seat. Miss Webb's horses were decorated with red rosebuds and the women guests wore corsage bouquets of Liberty roses. The guests were Mrs. Robert Pruyn, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, T. M. Robertson, and Phoenix Ingraham.

Miss Adelaide Randolph drove the fifth coach. Her flowers were red carnations. Miss Randolph's guests were C. T. Barney, who had the box seat; Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Miss Tuckerman, and Messrs. Potter and G. Mifflin Wharton.

Sixth was Miss Ruth Twombly, whose flowers were red roses. Her father, H. McK. Twombly, occupied the box seat. Her other guests were Miss Ethel Cryder, Miss Margaret Dix, Peter Gerry, and Mr. Hare.

The seventh coach was driven by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and her flowers were forget-me-nots. Mrs. Harriman's guests were Mrs. J. H. Wright, Miss Mildred Bigelow, and the Messrs. Richard Peters, Cowdin, and Rawlins Cottenet.

Miss Gulliver's horses were decorated with jonquils and her guests wore yellow daisies. On her coach were her mother, Mrs. William Gulliver; Miss Rosina Hoyt, C. Ledyard Blair, G. G. Haven, Jr., and Bayard Dominick, Jr.

After driving to the Circle, where Mrs. Thomas Hastings, as President, reviewed the parade, the women whips tooled their coaches to the Metropolitan Club, where luncheon was served in the ladies' annex. Each whip had a table for her guests, and these tables were decorated with yellow flowers, daisies, and grape hyacinths.

DOG ATTACKS THE LAW.

Holds Policeman Freel Fast by the Leg Until Shot.

The police of the Liberty Avenue Station, East New York, were notified last night that a row was in progress on Dumont Avenue, near Stone Avenue. The reserves were sent out in the patrol wagon, and upon arriving at the scene found about 300 persons gathered around Herman Alpert of 189 Christopher Street. Alpert accused two other men of assaulting him. All were bundled into the patrol wagon by Policemen Kogel and Kotterman. Policeman Joseph Freel stood on guard outside.

The wagon started toward the station, when suddenly out of the crowd bounded a large dog of mongrel tint and breed. With a howl of fury the dog launched itself at Policeman Freel and attached itself to the left leg of the guardian of the peace.

Freel drew his stick, and, dropping to the ground, gave battle. The patrol wagon went on without him.

"Hey! Help! Help! Come back!" yelled Freel, while the crowd shed tears of joy.

The patrol wagon stopped, and when Policeman Kogel observed the situation Freel turned his attention and stick to the dog.

"It's mad!" howled Freel to his brother officer. "Get it off quick! Phoby! Ga-a-a-roff!"

Kogel presently pulled out a revolver and took careful aim at the dog.

"Keep cool, Tommy," he repeated in measured tones.

"Keep cool when you're goin' to shoot what's left o' my leg away! Don't shoot, man. Hit it with your stick!"

"Keep still!" retorted Kogel. "I'm not pottin' pigeons on the wing."

Freel groaned, stiffened out, and shut his eyes, but in a moment the dog was dead and Freel safe.

HIGGINBOTHAM IS MUTE.

Expected Revelation in Support of Corruption Charge Not Made.

The Lee Avenue Police Court in Williamsburg was crowded with police officials and politicians yesterday, in expectation that Magistrate Higginbotham would reveal the names of the police official and the Democratic politician who, he alleged, were receiving "protection" money from violators of the law. After his declaration the Magistrate appeared before the Grand Jury.

Three women, whose arrest it was supposed brought about the Magistrate's statement, were discharged yesterday under suspension of sentence. Then Mr. Higginbotham left the bench and went to his private room. He told reporters that his remarks on police graft were due to the arrest of three Italians who were charged with maintaining a disorderly house. These men waived examination and were held for trial at Special Sessions. Because of this waiver he could not say anything.

PADEREWSKI IMPROVING.

Pianist Not Threatened with Paralysis, Dr. Fronczak Says.

Dr. Francis E. Fronczak, who is attending Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, issued the following statement yesterday:

"Mr. Paderewski had a very restful night, and was quite cheerful to-day, and was feeling better by far than at any time in a week past, though he is far from being a well man. There is no ground for the rumors that he is threatened with paralysis. Unless something unforeseen occurs, Mr. Paderewski will leave on Wednesday next on the steamer Oceanic for his home in Switzerland."

HENRY W. SAVAGE BACK.

British "Parsifal" Postponed — Few Theatres Large Enough.

Henry W. Savage returned yesterday on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse from a brief European trip. Mr. Savage went abroad four weeks ago to see several productions in Paris and London and to confer with George Edwardes concerning the plan to produce "Parsifal" in English in London.

"On this trip I combined business with pleasure," said Mr. Savage yesterday. "I spent most of the time automobiling in France and England. I saw all the principal productions in Paris and London, and am perfectly satisfied to take chances on plays for the American public written by Americans.

"Mr. Edwardes and I found that on account of previous bookings that it would be impossible to secure time in but few theatres in England large enough for 'Parsifal' next season, and for this reason we decided to postpone the production for one year."

LIONEL BARRYMORE QUITS?

Report of Quarrel with Frohman Denied in This City.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, May 3.—It is said that because Charles Frohman refused to advance him $1,500 Lionel Barrymore has thrown up his engagement with "The Other Girl" and started for New York. Barrymore, it is asserted, telegraphed for the advance from Colorado Springs last Saturday, and it was refused.

On the way to Denver Barrymore announced that he would quit the company. An understudy took his rôle at the Broadway Theatre on Monday night.

In regard to the reported disagreement between Charles Frohman and Lionel Barrymore, Alf Hayman, representing Mr. Frohman, made the following statement last night:

"There is no foundation for the story. Mr. Barrymore, who has not fully recovered from his long illness in Boston, was unable to stand the altitude of Colorado, and for this reason left the company at Pueblo. He intends to rejoin the company for the Chicago engagement."

PIERREPONT DIDN'T GIVE $500,000 TO COLUMBIA

It Must Be Joke Put Up by Fellow-Students, He Declares.

DONOR'S NAME STILL SECRET

Henry Pierrepont as Much Astonished as His Son Over the Report of Boy's Generosity.

When Henry Pierrepont of 216 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, woke up yesterday morning and read in the newspapers that his son, Rutherfurd Stuyvesant Pierrepont, had presented $500,000 to Columbia University for the erection of a college hall he was much astonished. When Rutherfurd Stuyvesant Pierrepont woke up in his room at St. Anthony's Hall, which is a domicile of Columbia students, he, too, was astonished—so much so that for a while he thought he was having a dream within a dream, and decided to awake all over again.

When Rutherfurd Stuyvesant Pierrepont went down to breakfast the first person he met was a reporter, who asked him about the donation.

"I gave $500,000, did I?" echoed Pierrepont. "Well, I don't remember it. Yes, I saw that in the newspapers, but I don't know anything about it. It must be a joke put up by some of the other students."

President Butler, when asked about the matter, said that a contribution of $500,000 had been made to the university, but refused to divulge the name of the giver. On May 1 the Trustees received the contribution, which is to be expended in the erection of a hall to be named for Alexander Hamilton, Class of 1777. The contribution was made known to the students on Tuesday, when Dr. Butler said:

"The munificence of this donation, its wisdom, and its generosity are increased by its anonymity."

After Dean Van Amringe turned up a shovel of sod in the South Field, where the Hamilton Hall is to be erected, the students began to conjecture as to the identity of a person they referred to as "His Anonymity."

It was surmised that the donor might be a senior student who wished to keep his identity hidden until the "exams" were over, in case things might be said about his honorable intentions. The name of Rutherfurd Stuyvesant Pierrepont, who is well to do in his own right, and who comes up for his degree in June, and a son of a well-known brewer was mentioned as the possible donors. Just how the matter got into the newspapers none of the students would say. Young Pierrepont is a senior and is on the university crew.

MISS DRAPER WEDS PIANIST.

Mr. Schelling's Best Man Was to Have Been Paderewski.

The marriage of Miss Lucie How Draper to Ernest Schelling, the young American pianist and composer and a pupil of Paderewski, took place yesterday at 12:30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. W. P. Draper, 604 Fifth Avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Newton Perkins. Miss Draper was given away by her mother, Mrs. W. P. Draper.

Ignace Paderewski was to have been Mr. Schelling's best man, and the date of the wedding was postponed once to enable him to be present. But because of his sudden illness he was kept away. Mme. Paderewski was among the guests.

The wedding was very quiet, only immediate members of the family and about a dozen friends being invited. Mr. and Mrs. Schelling will spend the Summer at Bar Harbor. Afterward they will probably make a short trip to Europe.

It is Mr. Schelling's desire to devote himself to composition for the next year or two, after which he will return to the concert stage. He met Mr. Paderewski here on one of his earlier visits. Later he became Paderewski's pupil and lived at his home, in Switzerland.

Mr. Schelling is the son of Prof. Felix Schelling of Philadelphia. His brother is Professor of English Literature at the University of Pennsylvania. He is Court pianist to the Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and has spent much time at the ducal residence of Willgrad.

GAS LEASE BRIBE CHARGE.

Philadelphia Man Tells of an Old Deal Involving the U. G. I.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—During a mass meeting to-night to protest against leasing the gas works an affidavit made by Robert Dornan, a carpet manufacturer, was read which set forth that bribery was resorted to when the United Gas Improvement Company secured its present lease of the gas works in 1897.

The affidavit says that through the instrumentality of Isreal Durham, the Republican leader of this city, a syndicate known as the Ridgway syndicate was formed to bid on the lease in 1897 in opposition to the United Gas Improvement Company, and that Dornan was requested to become a member of the syndicate. Mr. Dornan joined the syndicate, and a bid better than the United Gas Improvement Company's was made. Continuing, the affidavit says: "Almost immediately after the bid was made the syndicate was requested to send a representative to confer with Thomas Dolan, representing the United Gas Improvement Company."

Thereupon a member of the syndicate was delegated to represent the "Ridgway Syndicate," and after several conferences an agreement was entered into by which in return for a withdrawal of the "Ridgway Syndicate" bid a sum of money amounting to $10,000 was to be paid each member of that syndicate, together with further valuable considerations in the privilege to subscribe to a large quantity of bonds to be sold at a price much below their value.

"This agreement," the affidavit continues, "was carried out and the money paid over to the members of the syndicate, with the exception of T. D. Stinson and myself. Both of us refused acceptance of our shares; what became of them ultimately is unknown to me."

Schlesinger of 52 West One Hundred and Fourteenth Street, ran away last night from Sontag's, Lenox Avenue and One Hundred and Tenth Street, up to One Hundred and Fifteenth Street, east to Fifth Avenue, and down that avennue to One Hundred and Twelfth Street. The animal had been frightened at the passing of a wrecking wagon of the New York City Railway Company. Policeman Roosa of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station caught the bridle of the horse at One Hundred and Thirteenth Street, and, after being dragged for a block, stopped him. The policeman was bruised about the legs, and his uniform practically ruined.

FACES, IN COURT, WIFE HE LEFT 26 YEARS AGO

Prisoner of Seventy Admits Perjury When Woman Appears.

THOUGHT HERSELF A WIDOW

Mrs. Smith, Mother of Eight, Sought Pension—Lost Husband and Second Family Traced.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 3.—Mrs. Madelina Smith, née Schmitt, of 26 Goerck Street, New York, walked into the United States District Court this morning leaning on the arm of the Rev. William Koepschen, pastor of St. Lucas Evangelical Lutheran Church of New York.

George Smith of McKeesport, aged seventy years, who was in the prisoners' dock on trial for perjury in pension papers, turned pale and asked to change his plea to guilty. He had sworn to no marriage previous to that to his McKeesport wife.

Mrs. Madelina Smith came to prove that he had married her in New York City more than forty years ago and deserted her and her eight children almost twenty-six years ago. His case will be disposed of to-morrow. The prosecution has recommended mercy.

Smith later met his first wife in the lobby, and he begged of her not to prosecute him for bigamy. She promised, and left this evening for home with the clergyman who had brought to Pittsburg a certified copy of the Smith-Schmitt wedding in the fifties.

Smith, it is said, was condemned to be shot during the civil war for sleeping on sentry duty, but was pardoned by President Lincoln. About fifty years ago George, then called Schmidt, came to the United States from Hamburg, Germany, and settled in New York.

Shortly before the war he met Madelina Smith, who was fifteen years old, and fell in love with her. On account of her age her parents made many objections to his attentions, and he enlisted in Company A, Thirty-first Regiment, New York Volunteers. After he had enlisted he and the girl were married, and after the war he returned to New York and lived with her for fourteen years.

About 1879, it is alleged, he left her and was not heard of again until a few months ago, when Mrs. Smith made application to the Pension Bureau for a widow's pension.

After a rigid investigation Smith was traced to McKeesport, where he was living with his second wife. They have a large family, some of whom have gained maturity. When the Pension Bureau brought the first wife to light Smith made affidavit before Justice of the Peace Delong of McKeesport that he had never been married previous to his McKeesport venture. The Pension Bureau followed up the case.

LEFT HOME BECAUSE OF DOG.

Mr. Pettes Says He Told Wife She Must Choose.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 3.—A collie puppy which had been presented to her by "an old admirer" figured yesterday in the divorce suit of Evelyn T. Pettes, now a resident of Summit, against William H. Pettes, Superintendent of the Essex and Hudson Gas Department of the Public Service Corporation. Mrs. Pettes sued on the ground of desertion. The couple were married in Summit April 18, 1901, and their separation took place Nov. 3, 1902.

Pettes testified that the dog had kept him awake all night with its howls, and said he had told his wife that she must choose between him and the animal. He left home, he said, after agreeing to allow his wife $75 a month, which sum was subsequently decreased to $50. Pettes also made charges involving his wife's brother-in-law.

Mrs. Pettes testified that her husband was a good business man, and never thought of anything but work.

ASKS $500,000 FROM N. Y. LIFE

Executor of Estate of European General Agent Brings Suit.

Making a claim that the New York Life Insurance Company owed half a million dollars to Harry Homans for commissions on premiums paid in to the company up to the time of Mr. Homans's death, William P. Homans, as administrator of the estate of Harry S. Homans, has commenced an action in the Supreme Court to recover that amount. The case came up yesterday before Justice O'Gorman on a motion made by attorneys for the plaintiff for a bill of particulars, the New York Life Insurance Company having put in an answer to the suit saying that it had paid the half million referred to and that Homans had received or overdrawn $357,000 more than was due him.

Harry S. Homans was Director General and General Agent for the New York Life Insurance Company in Europe, and handled the company's European business from his headquarters in Paris. He died there in 1889, a year before the termination of an agreement by which he was to receive certain commissions and expenses, the dispute over which led to the present suit. Justice O'Gorman took the papers and reserved decision on the motion.

Four Husbands Dead, Two Divorced—Soldier's Wife Asks Annulment.

Another woman, who asked for a divorce, was told that in her complaint it was said that she was married in 1889, while an affidavit attached to the papers said that she was married in 1899. She was told that she would have to straighten out her dates before the court would listen to the complaint.

Mary A. Crowther, who has been married seven times, got a divorce from No. 7 in the person of Thomas Crowther, a saloon keeper. Four men she married died, and she divorced two before marrying Mr. Crowther. At the end of three months, when the court grants a final decree, she will be free to marry again.

D. B. Lucey Wins Spirited Contest for Deputy at State Convention.

Dennis B. Lucey of Ogdensburg was last night elected State Deputy by the New York State Convention of the Knights of Columbus, held at the Hotel Astor. The contest for the office was keen, and it was only after four ballots had been taken and two of the candidates had withdrawn that Lucey was elected. The new State Deputy was formerly Mayor of Ogdensburg, where he now practices law.

Other State officers elected were Nicholas J. Clarkin of Corona, L. I., Secretary; J. P. Fitzpatrick of Flushing, Treasurer; Daniel J. Griffin of Brooklyn, Advocate, and James Davie of Ossining, Warden. Delegates were also elected to attend the National Convention to be held at Los Angeles, Cal., next month.

At the close of the convention the delegates attended a ball and reception at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory.

DIES WITH JEALOUS HUSBAND,

Bodies of Man and Wife Found—Had Tickets for America.

BLACKPOOL, England, May 3.—The bodies of Robert Rushton Shaw, an Englishman, who formerly lived at Burnley and inherited a small fortune from his father, and his wife, Elizabeth, to whom he was married in Philadelphia at out five years ago, were found in a field in a suburb of this town early to-day. Both had been shot, and there was a revolver beside the bodies.

The tragedy unfolds a pitiful story. After five years of happy marriage, it is alleged, Shaw became jealous and told his wife to prepare immediately to sail for America, leaving their two children at Blackpool.

They started yesterday, seemingly reconciled, but Shaw's mother was suspicious and caused neighbors to follow them. Shots were heard and the bodies were discovered. Each was shot through the mouth, the indications being that it was by mutual agreement, the woman having carefully removed her hat and placed it beside her husband's on the grass.

The Club of Queer Trades

For this unique series of tales by Gilbert K. Chesterton, the reviewers have some novel phrases to voice their enthusiasm: "As different," says one, "from the average mass of fiction as Cheddar cheese is from chalk." "A succession of pin-pricks that literally tickle us to laughter," says another. "Cold truths out of place—a most diverting book."

It is a highly ingenious idea—the Club of Queer Trades—and makes a book for all lovers of adventure and mystery tales.

Judith Triumphant

"Unstinted praise is due Thompson Buchanan, author of this stirring novel, for the manner in which he has taken the well-known tale of Judith and Holofernes, and about its familiar lines has woven a new romance."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"The story is one of the most dramatic incidents of all history, and Mr. Buchanan has made the most of its strong possibilities in this stirring romance"—Nashville Banner.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Rally Checked; Call Money Easy, 2½@3 Per Cent.

Prices Close Generally Lower, Chiefly Due to a Traders' Drive at the End.

Yesterday's market showed that the fever and the bounce had left the market together for the present. There was strength at times and in spots, but no encouragement was taken from the fact. On the contrary, the day's rises were looked at rather askance as devices of a traders' market, adapted, if not designed—and with no presumption against the design—to sell in one direction upon the fictitious strength in other quarters. Of course this is not true of such incidents as the pronounced rise in Consolidated Gas. That was anticipated as soon as it was apparent that it had been sold short by somebody with early information about the progress of events at the Albany law mill. Yesterday the laws for cheap gas and electricity moved along a stage, and the stock sold higher upon the fact, although it had been depressed upon the anticipation of it. The rise in Erie was about as consistent as anything in the day's business, and yet that was not altogether free of suspcion of ulterior design. The performance in Northern Pacific was at the other extreme as an example of everything that displeases the judicious, and is adapted to confuse the makers of prices. A march straight up several points and a straight down again indicates no settled conviction of values or market intent, and leaves everybody in the dark regarding precisely that section of the market where repose must precede recuperation. So far as the business at large reflected anything besides market vagaries it turned upon the fact that there had been two strong days together, and upon the changed attitude of London, which had been the source of buying earlier in the week, and yesterday was the source of selling, starting upon the Continent, and transferred here promptly. The close was about at the lowest, apparently upon a professional effort to reduce prices rather than to sell stock.

To-day's news was not striking. Bloodshed in Chicago and cities of Poland was repeated, and is worth remembering until it appears beyond doubt that the sequel is not to be dreaded. The commodity markets did not reflect the crop news. The States are now reporting improvement upon the excellent conditions recently described in the Government report. The Supreme Court annulled the assessment of Metropolitan for taxes in the sum of $10,000,000, but the stock took no advantage. Similarly the Steel shares profited nothing by the excellent weekly report of conditions in the trade. Against the cut upon the rates for packing products eastward from Chicago, designed to attract shipments from the Gulf route, may be placed the strong indications from happenings before the Senate committee that no injurious legislation is to be feared. But, as already said, the day's business reflected none of these considerations. The market seems disposed to slumber, and yet is so nervous that it moves points where under ordinary conditions it would move eighths.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Market Actions Recall Days Following the December Panic.

The course of the stock market for the last two days has been about as it was following the Lawson panic in December last—alternately weak and strong prices, in most irregular fashion. The reason is that the severe decline has frightened traders so that they will not buy, and at the same time has made short sales unattractive because of the expectation of a sharp rally. Less than 1,000,000 shares were traded in yesterday, and at times the market was absolutely stagnant. It was noted, however, that this stagnation only occurred when the market was apparently strong. When prices receded stocks appeared in larger volume. This was considered evidence that the weakness was due more to bear drives than to actual liquidation.

***

Important Day in Wall Street.

To-morrow will be a banner day for important events from the Wall Street point of view. There will be the meeting of the stockholders of the Union Pacific at Salt Lake City to authorize the $100,000,000 preferred stock issue, at which interesting developments are expected. The other event of importance will be the closing of subscriptions for the Pennsylvania Railroad convertible bond issue. According to common report this issue has not taken the public fancy, and it is not believed that the subscriptions will be very heavy. The rights, which at one time sold at $37.50 a hundred shares, are now quoted at the impossible price of 30 cents a thousand shares.

***

Odd Doings in Northern Pacific.

There was a curious episode in Northern Pacific yesterday. During the morning this stock was bid up very sharply from 178 to 186, and at one time the bid price was 189. The advance was on very small transactions, but it was so sharp that it attracted general attention. There were rumors about an increase in the capital stock, which was to be doubled. An increase in the dividend was talked of, and finally the fear was expressed that perhaps the sharp bidding was due to a short interest trying to cover. The latter view obtained the most supporters and gave the entire market a chill, for every one could not help remembering 1901, when early in May the short interest in this stock, assisted by competitive buying, caused the famous corner and panic on the Stock Exchange. That, according to some close observers, is probably just what the movement was intended to do. The bidders were Jacob Field, W. B. Oliver, and H. Content, but they did not take any more stock than they had to, though they are believed to have sold the rest of the market at the same time.

***

Reading Up, Then Declined.

The Northern Pacific advance was not the only false movement during the day. In the afternoon Reading was bid up sharply on large transactions, and for a while it looked as if the rest of the market would follow its lead. But there was lots of stock for sale above 94, and when at the same time Union Pacific began to decline the rally came to a sudden end. From that moment all the buoyancy which the market had displayed earlier in the day was gone, and the market resembled a wilted collar. The starch had gone out of it.

Canadian Pacific Men Optimistic.

A party of officials of the Canadian Pacific, headed by Vice President Ogden, passed through the city yesterday on its way to Washington to attend the International Railway Congress. They expressed themselves very optimistically regarding the conditions in the territory served by their road. They cited, for instance, the fact that land in the West Used in April brought the average price of $5.66 an acre, which is the biggest average in the history of the company's land sales.

RECORD APRIL CLEARINGS.

The total clearings at 94 cities of the United States for the month of April, according to the figures compiled by Bradstreet's, aggregated $12,761,639,529, a sum only 1½ per cent. behind the record total of March this year, and 53.2 per cent. larger than the month of April, 1904. Compared with the best April total heretofore recorded, that of 1901, there is a gain shown this year of 5.8 per cent. Sixty-eight and one-half per cent. of the entire country's clearings was recorded at New York, which showed a total of $8,680,796,460, a gain of 81.2 per cent. over April last year and a gain of one-half of 1 per cent. over the April, 1901, total. Outside of New York the clearings at 93 cities aggregated $3,990,843,069, a decrease of 3.2 per cent. from March, but a gain of 14.8 per cent. over April, 1904, and 13 per cent. larger than the largest April total heretofore recorded, that of April, 1902. Every group of cities showed a gain in April over a year ago, the Middle States section leading with an increase of 73.2 per cent.

IRON TRADE ACTIVITY.

Activity in the iron trade continues unabated. Commenting on the extremely heavy demand for iron and steel, The Iron Age says in its issue of to-day:

Consumption of iron and steel continues at an unprecedented rate. Reports from manufacturers in every branch show that the trade is still at high pressure in making deliveries. An indication of what is now being done is given by the United States Steel Corporation. This corporation has a total of 91 blast furnaces, and of these only 2 furnaces, used for making pig iron, are now not in active operation. Ordinarily 20% of this capacity should be laid off for repairs, and therefore this condition of activity is far better than is to be expected. It may be seen from this state of affairs that, with the crowded condition of its finishing departments, if accidents should happen in any of its furnaces the corporation would immediately be in the market to purchase additional supplies of pig iron.

The demand for steel billets is still so strong that premiums continue to be quoted above the official price. The structural trade is coming to the front with an increased activity. The American Bridge Company reached its expected total of 70,000 tons of new orders in April and reports a very large amount of new business in sight. Building trades are coming up to expectations of seasonable activity and a great deal of material will be required in that direction as well as for railroad and highway bridges. The reports from the branches indicate that before the Summer has far advanced trouble will be experienced in securing deliveries by belated buyers.

While the steel trade and closely related branches of the iron trade are thus in strong condition the foundry pig iron trade is somewhat easier, but cannot be called dull. The merchant furnaces have booked heavily for future delivery and the demand is now comparatively light. Nevertheless, the market is far from stagnant. Commercial reports a daily run of business in fair volume.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, May 3.—The Iron Trade Review says:

Record production and the abstention of buyers from the market are reflected in lower prices for some materials and the expectation of reductions on others. The changed situation is indicated by the fact that some pig iron producers have asked buyers to name dates for the second half. That business is not done under such conditions is natural; buyers wait to know to what extent transportation will central and Western foundry iron markets, as has been true for some weeks, are weaker than those in the East.

The Steel Corporation's May purchases of Bessemer iron are not yet announced, there being considerable iron yet undelivered on the April contracts. New buildings throughout the country are making large calls upon the structural mills. At Chicago contracts for three buildings are under negotiation, calling for 7,000 tons. At New York 3,000 tons of structural steel are involved in inquiries received in the first two days of this week. The American Bridge Company's business for April was 70,000 tons, the largest month's business since May, 1903, when 102,000 tons were booked.

Rail business for delivery this year is now expected to approximate 2,000,000 tons, or considerably less than some conditions would put out in the closing months of 1904. Locomotive orders have kept up at practically a record rate in recent weeks, but car buying has slackened perceptibly.

However, steel car works will be kept busy until Fall and in some cases to the end of the year. Sheets show a decline of about $2 a ton from prices regarded as official. Similar concessions are noted in tin plate and in merchant pipe, in both of which business is only moderate. Wire products have been steady.

COLORADO EXTENSION PLANS.

Texas Extensions to be Carried Out Despite Veto of Bill.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Colorado and Southern Railroad, to be held to-morrow, President Trumbull will present to the board an informal report upon plans to build the contemplated Texas extensions, for the purpose of which a special bill was recently passed by the Colorado Legislature. This bill Gov. McDonald declined to sign, and it was reported that the road would not be able to carry out its plans.

Edwin Hawley, whose interests are dominant in the road, said yesterday that the legislation was not a sine qua non of constructing the proposed extensions or of the acquisition of such other properties as the Colorado and Southern may desire. The project, he said, would be put through without delay, and the $17,000,000 bonds recently contracted for by a syndicate of which Hallgarten & Co. are the American managers would be issued as originally contemplated.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 3.—Money was in increased demand in the market to-day for repayments to the Bank of England, but dividend and coupon disbursements prevented a scarcity. Discounts were easy.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was inactive, but had a better tendency owing to the recent liquidation on the part of weak holders. The steadiness of the Continental Bourses aided in the feeling of cheerfulness. Consols hardened and home rails were firm on country buying.

Americans opened irregular and hardened to over parity on professional support, chiefly from Wall Street. The dealings were moderate. In the afternoon the market reacted and prices closed weak. Grand Trunk was easy on disappointing traffic returns.

Mexican rails were strong on the half-yearly report.

Russians were a shade harder. Peruvian corporations were buoyant on Continental purchases. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 100¾.

Bar silver steady at 26¾d per ounce.

Money, 1½@2 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, for short bills, 2⅛ per cent.; for three months' bills, 2⅛ per cent.

India Council bills were allotted to-day at 1s. 3 31-32d.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Reading contributed one-half of the business transacted at the local Exchange to-day. Commission houses generally were buyers, as they were also of the United States Steel shares. New York, on the other hand, bought Lehigh Valley, which advanced a full point. Lehigh Navigation more than recovered its 4 per cent. ($2) dividend, but only a few transactions were recorded in it. United Gas opened off 2½ points, to 110, advanced to 113½, then reacted to 112½. The buying was by good houses, but the bulk of the sales came from political sources. Some of the inactive stocks were lower; Northern Central 2, Westmoreland Coal warrants, ½ Western New York and Pennsylvania and Farmers and Mechanics' National Bank 1. The total sales were 54,791 shares, $57,200 bonds. The list follows:

WABASH BOND AGREEMENT.

Denied That There Is Friction Between Company and Committee.

The committee of which Henry Evans, President of the Continental Fire Insurance Company, is Chairman, formed to protect the interests of the holders of the debenture B bonds of the Wabash Railroad, held a meeting at the offices of the Mercantile Trust Company yesterday to discuss measures to obtain a proper recognition of the bonds. After the meeting it was declared positively that no friction of a personal nature had arisen between the committee and the management of the Wabash Road, and that the negotiations were being carried on in the utmost friendliness. The following statement was given out by Mr. Evans:

"The meeting was held at the request of the Mercantile Trust Company for a preliminary conference. It having been suggested that it might be well to permit the counsel and officers of the Wabash Road to participate in the conference, they were notified of the committee's willingness to have them present. Col. Blodgett, the general counsel of the road, accepted, but later stated that it occurred to him that in view of the fact that the conference was at the instance of the trust company it might not be proper for the railroad to have a representative present, and that he therefore would not attend, and that Mr. Gould and Mr. Ramsey were in Washington.

"The conference resulted in a tentative agreement as between the committee and the trust company, represented by its Secretary, Mr. Richards, and its counsel, Mr. Greene, as to a line of procedure.

"All of the members of the committee and its counsel, Mr. Trull, were present at the meeting, which lasted about forty minutes."

Mr. Evans said that he could not discuss the line of action determined upon further than indicated by the official statement.

FEDERAL SMELTING INCLUDED

Goes to Smelters' Securities Company in the Guggenheim Deal.

There was a report in Wall Street yesterday in connection with the new Smelters Securities Company, formed to take over for American Smelting and Refining interests, the properties of the Guggenheim Exploration Company and a few others, that the Federal Smelting and Refining had been included in the deal and that checks had been given to the Rockefeller interests in payment for their shares on the basis of $100 a share for the common stock and $120 for the preferred.

A Director of the American Smelting and Refining Company, while declining to discuss the details of the transaction, said that the control of the Federal Smelting and Refining Company had been acquired a couple of months ago.

NICKEL PLATE EARNINGS.

Annual Report Shows Increased Business—Old Directors Re-elected.

CLEVELAND, May 3.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad, known as the Nickel Plate, held here to-day, the old Board of Directors was re-elected for another year. Shares to the number of 204,000 out of 300,000 were voted.

The annual report showed the gross earnings for the year to be $8,645,374, an increase of $197,054 over the previous year. The net earnings were $1,807,227, an increase of $38,707 compared to last year.

LAKE SHORE ELECTION.

George F. Baker of New York the Only New Director Named.

CLEVELAND, May 3.—The stockholders of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company met here to-day and elected the following Directors for three years: J. Pierpont Morgan, Darius O. Mills, W. Seward Webb, George F. Baker, and William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

The annual report showed the total gross earnings for the year ending Dec. 31, 1904, to be $35,161,033, an increase of $892,071; net earnings, $7,976,772, a decrease of $40,814.

Mr. Baker is President of the First National Bank of New York City, and is closely allied with the Morgan interests.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 3.—The local money market to-day was extremely dull. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 3¾@4½ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $38,429,682; balances, $4,153,718; Sub-Treasury debit, $63,698.

Outside of the trading in Utah the copper share market was very dull; in fact, this was the dullest day in weeks. There was an absence of manipulation, and the market left to itself was rather uninteresting. One or two specialties were inclined to show a little life. Commission houses appear to have good buying orders under the market, especially for the Utah group. Closing prices were firm. The list of transactions follows:

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Market Dull with a Preponderance of Declines.

Initial Trading in Northwest Rights—Consolidated Rubber Tire Readjustment—Shortlived Movement in Can.

Trading in the outside market yesterday was very quiet. In most stocks the market was narrow, and efforts made by traders to secure a profit on either side of the market were in consequence attended with some difficulty. Only three or four issues were entitled yesterday to the designation of active, and there were no newcomers among the number. The general tone of the market showed some impairment in contrast with the previous day's trading, but the declines were not substantial except in a few issues. Northern Securities advanced early in the day in sympathy with the upward movement in Northern Pacific, but when that stock receded Northern Securities lost all of its gain, and at the close it was selling at the lowest price of the day, showing a net loss of a point. The stubs also declined.

***

AMERICAN CAN preferred was bid up at the opening by one of the traders, but with very little success, as the stock bought on the advance was subsequently sold out at a loss. The narrowness of the market afforded little opportunity to sell the stock that was acquired on the advance.

***

CONSOLIDATED RUBBER TIRE common sold up to 2¼. A short time ago it was selling under one, and was much despised of traders. It looks different, however, above 2, and seems to have acquired speculative respectability in the opinion of traders. There is afoot some plan for a readjustment of the company's securities which, it is thought, may prove of benefit to the market for the bonds and stocks. Report has it that it is intended to so arrange the securities that the control of the company will be placed in the hands of the preferred stockholders subject to the prior claims of the debenture bonds.

***

CHICAGO AND NORTHWESTERN rights were dealt in for the first time. They sold from 15 up to 16, and closed at the higher price. The course of all rights recently issued has been so uniformly downward that much interest attaches to the course of the latest addition to this class of issues. The trading yesterday gave no suggestion of any hesitancy on the part of the buyers which may or may not have significance as to the future course of these particular rights.

***

NEW DOMINION MINING "when issued" sold at ¼. This is the stock which it is proposed to issue share for share for Montreal and Boston Consolidated. The latter yesterday was selling at ⅝.

***

The principal transactions in 100-share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Tools of Trade Must Enter with Owner to be Free.

In a decision written by General Appraiser Hay, the Board of United States Appraisers yesterday made a ruling interpreting the Dingley tariff law in its application to immigrants from foreign countries who bring with them their "tools of trade." The board finds that what are designated by the tariff as "tools of trade" must, in order to receive the benefit of free entry, be in the actual possession of the owner at the time of his arrival in the United States. The merchandise in question consisted of plates used by Ferdinand Hassler in making impressions on certain leather goods manufactured by him. The importer reached New York on March 10, 1904, while the plates did not arrive until June 13 succeeding. Collector Stranahan levied duty on the articles, whereupon Hassler appealed to the General Board for a review of the Collector's action.

Eugene G. Hay, who writes the opinion for the customs tribunal, says he is convinced that Congress intended to make "tools of trade" dutiable unless they are actually in the possession of the owner at the time of his arrival in this country. Mr. Hay holds that the language used in the present Tariff act is different from that prevailing in former laws, and therefore reaches the conclusion that Hassler's claim must be overruled.

In conformity with a recent decision of the United States Circuit Court, the Board of Appraisers, in a decision written by T. S. Sharretts, sustained a claim filed by Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher relative to the rate of duty applicable to unwrought glass plates used in the manufacture of optical instruments. The Collector at New York exacted duty at the rate of 45 per cent. ad valorem on the ground that the articles were manufactures of glass. General Appraiser Sharretts says that in view of the court's ruling the claim of the importer for free entry under the paragraph for "glass for optical instruments" is sustained. The Collector is ordered to make a refund of the excess duties.

Importers' claims partially sustained yesterday were by F. W. Woolworth, Philadelphia; Zimmerman & Meyer, George McLaughlin, Aitken, Son & Co., and Sullivan, Drew & Co., New York.

The board sustained protests made by D. Strachan, Jacob Lawson, L. E. B. Craig, A. Davis, New York. Claims deemed to be without merit were by I. A. Lahey & Sons, J. W. Gerard & Co., F. A. Bondiss, J. S. Plummer & Co., Mills & Gibb, Syndicate Trading Company, Lamb, Finlay & Co., and others, New York.
